

BULGARIANS AND TURKS ARE TO SIGN JUSTICE TODAY

Shortest Great War Europe Ever Knew Comes to Close; Armies Deadlocked in Front of Tchatalja Lines

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 30.—The cabinet has approved the protocol of an armistice which will be signed at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The armistice will be signed by the Turks on the one hand and the Bulgarians on the other in behalf of the four allies. It will thus apply to all Turkey in Europe.

The armistice will last as long as the preliminary negotiations for peace continue.

It is stipulated that the position of the belligerents shall remain exactly as at the time of signature.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The second month of the shortest great European war in history closes under brighter auspices than the statesmen who have been handling the tangled skein of conflicting national interests dared to predict. An armistice will be signed Sunday afternoon in the sultan's palace by the delegates of the belligerent states who have been conferring here in an apparent conciliatory attitude and apparently consuming luxurious lunches prepared by Constantinople's foremost French chef.

Hope for Peace Strong.

The hope that permanent peace will follow the terms that will avoid a clash with Austria is strong in all the capitals and assuming the strength of conviction. From Constantinople, Sofia and Belgrade the press agencies, which speak with the voices of their governments, predict a settlement and portray a general desire to end the war.

The terms of the armistice have not yet been announced. Chief interest centers in Adrianople, where the Turkish garrison, with diminishing ammunition and short rations, still makes historic resistance against the Serbians and Bulgarians with their cordon of artillery steadily crowding closer around the citadel.

Conference Now Assured.

The project for establishing a diplomatic clearing house, composed of the ambassadors of the powers to solicit capital, to exchange views on the Balkan question during the period of upheaval, and strengthen the peace, will be arranged within two days. While Turkey and the Balkan states may arrange a treaty of peace by direct negotiations, they can hardly do this without constant consultation with the powers. The Albanian politicians at Athens have launched a provisional government with Ismail Kemal Bey, a Muslim, as president, and a Catholic, as vice president. The Albanian flag has been raised and Albania has proclaimed a neutral state under the protection of the powers. The new government has advised the people of Durazzo and Elbasan not to oppose the Serbians.

This autonomous Albania is an extremely nebulous state, since Albania is without definite geographical boundaries and almost without roads, and the people heretofore have fostered a deep rooted prejudice against paying taxes to any government. The final settlement of this future problem is second only to that of reconciling Serbia and Austria over Servia's determination to retain a port on the Adriatic sea.

Armies Are Deadlocked.

While the danger that the belligerents may fail to settle their differences and hostilities may be resumed after the period of negotiations seems large, the fact that the armies before Constantinople have practically reached a deadlock is the strongest factor making for peace. Military experts consider that it would be almost impossible for the allies to break the Tchatalja works, while it would be equally impossible for the Turks to succeed in an offensive movement.

Julgaria has come to the end of her resources in men and has called out the drafts of 1913 and 1914, who are youths of 17 and 18 years, while one army corps in front of Adrianople consists of old men.

The threat that Great Britain may be involved in the death struggle for European supremacy and the object lesson of great armies quickly mobilized by small states, have given great impetus to the movement for compulsory service. Several conservative leaders have been agitating this for the last year.

English Army Weak.

Field Marshal Lord Roberts has become the storm center of a bitter controversy. In a speech early in the week he declared that the territorial force

Two Houses May Split on Tariff

WILL HOLD HEARINGS IN JANUARY

President-elect Wilson Will Be Conferred With on Revision Program

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—To President-elect Woodrow Wilson will be left the task of determining whether the tariff alone is to be considered, or whether special legislation shall be taken up, or whether the tariff is to be revised as a whole, in a single bill, or by schedules, one section at a time.

Representative Oscar W. Underwood, chairman of the ways and means committee of the house, and Democratic tariff leader, will meet Mr. Wilson, probably in New York, late in December or early in January, and the plans for the extra session then will be elaborated and given to the public.

"I can express how only my opinion as a member of the committee," said Mr. Underwood, "he said he favored revision scheduled by schedule."

"The house desires to work in entire harmony with the president, and to that end, will be guided by his wishes as fully as possible," he said.

HIRE HORSES WILL SOON BE OBSOLETE IN SPRINGS

The passing of fire horses as obsolete by installation of modern motor equipment, removing a dramatic element from fire fighting, is in evidence in Colorado Springs.

The last three horses at station No. 1 are making their final runs in response to alarms, and a machine will soon take their place, according to plans of Commissioner Hillebaugh.

He expects to purchase a tractor for the aerial truck at a cost of about $2,200, following the sale of the fire horses for $750. It is a matter of economy, as well as greater efficiency, he states. The truck horses at station No. 1 have grown old after years of service, and younger animals would cost at least $1,250. Then it costs only $80 a year to maintain a tractor, while the cost of feeding the horses is $500.

Congress Has no Right.

Beck strongly denounces the idea Congress can use its power as a compromise to end "It is," says Beck, "nullification by induction"

ELKS HOLD ANNUAL LODGE OF SORROW

Ceremonies Take Place This Afternoon in Burns Theater

The annual lodge of sorrow of Colorado Springs lodge, No. 301, B. P. O. E., will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the Burns theater. Members of the order will meet at the Elks home at 2 o'clock and will march to the theater in a body, headed by the Elks band. Tickets are being distributed at the home, every member being entitled to three seats. No seats will be held after 2:00 o'clock.

The roll of departed brothers contains five for the last year. They are A. B. McSweeney, Charles M. Carter, Ralph F. Manchester, N. Stanley Corbin and Raymond S. Robertson.

The address will be delivered by Charles E. Thomas, and the eulogy by Clyde L. Stewart. The program has been prepared as follows:

La Reine de Sabas, Marlene et Gordon Elks Orchestra, Rev. W. J. Fink, Director.

Opening ceremonies.

Great Ruler of the Universe.

All singing and benediction.

Look upon upon and bless our work And be all glory Thine!

Oh! hear our prayers for the honored dead

While bearing in our minds The memories given on each heart For "Auld Lang Syne"

Prayer.—Bro. Benjamin Brewster, Angelus from "Ben's Bitterness."

May 12, 1842—August 13, 1912.

In this number, Masson shows us something of the religious fervor of the French peasantry. It is the outpouring of the peasant heart responding to the call of the Angelus bell for evening prayer.

Eulogy.—Bro. Clyde L. Stewart, "Love and Music. These Have I Lived."

Mrs. E. E. Thompson, Pianist.

DEATH OF GIRL WAS DUE TO OPERATION

Goroner's Jury Fails to Fix Blame Doctor Died From Natural Cause

DENVER, Nov. 30.—The coroner's jury in the inquest over the death of Miss Maude White reached the verdict late today that death was due to an operation performed by persons unknown. Miss White, who was a housekeeper for M. W. Troster, died Wednesday.

Mrs. Mabel Howe, a nurse, who attended Miss White and who was arrested yesterday, was released today on $1,000 bond. M. W. Troster has not been arrested but his lawyer promises that he will appear when wanted.

The coroner decided to hold an inquest over the body of Dr. J. F. Cherrington, who signed Miss White's death certificate, and who was found dead in his room yesterday. The coroner believes that Dr. Cherrington's death was due to heart failure. His body will be sent to Marion, Kan., for burial.

RIEDELBACK TRIAL SET FOR HEARING ON DEC. 4

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 30.—The trial of Carl Riedelbach, the "human bomb," who threatened to blow up the police station and its occupant, was set for December 4 by Judge Willis of the criminal department of the superior court today. The court appointed Thomas White to defend Riedelbach.

Boulder From Peak To Adorn Eastern Mansion

From insignificance as an ordinary boulder among hundreds of great on the summit of Pikes Peak to a conspicuous position as a corner stone in an eastern mansion is the shift in location of a block of granite weighing 200 pounds.

The unique idea of removing a massive rock from the clouds and bringing it down to the level of the sea, to become an exterior ornament of a mansion, was conceived by Charles A. Larkin, a noted manufacturer of Buffalo, N. Y., in seeking the unusual in the construction of his residence.

The idea was executed by A. M. Lemercier of 1625 Wood avenue by placing the order with the Powell-Dwyer company, who last week removed the rock from the peak and shipped it by freight to Larkin. The rock was brought down by the Cog Road by courtesy of C. W. Selig, president and general manager

Washington Is Uncertain.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Washington did not know tonight whether or not it favored the suggested postponement until April of the inaugural ceremony that had so frequently proceeded through snow and slush from the capital to the White house. Plans have proceeded under the expectation that March would witness the assumption of power by the Democratic president, but business men and officials are considering the suggestion mentioned in dispatches from Bermuda today, to see whether it is practicable and possible to make the change.

Few senators or members of the house would openly discuss the plan today. Representative Henry, whose resolution for a constitutional amendment changing the inaugural date is now pending in the house, has expressed the opinion that should the inaugural date be deferred until April it would come as an armistice to the enthusiasm attendant upon the ushering in of a new president.

RECOMMEND LABOR MEN FOR INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Senator Gomery, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Frank Morrison, its secretary, today recommended to President Taft the appointment of John B. Legum, treasurer, and James O'Connell, third vice president of the federation, to the industrial commission.

WILSON IN FAVOR HOLDING INAUGURAL FESTIVITS IN APRIL

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 30.—Governor Woodrow Wilson is willing to take the oath of office as president of the United States without observation on March 4, and professes that the formal ceremonies that every fourth year attract thousands of citizens to Washington, be postponed until the last Thursday in April.

To that extent he has endorsed the propaganda in favor of a later inauguration, which has been advocated in and out of congress in order that the event might be conducted at a time when the weather usually is propitious at the national capital.

Many persons have urged the president-elect to sanction a postponement of the inaugural ceremonies without realizing that this cannot be done without an act of congress and that it is impossible now to change the forthcoming ceremony so far as the timing of the oath is concerned. Mr. Wilson's statement, however, today, indicates his sympathy with the later inauguration, movement, and implies that he will gladly assent to a delay of the show features of the event if an agreement to this end can be reached.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 30.—William J. Burns' story of his pursuit of the McManis and Orlie E. McManis after the Los Angeles Times explosion was told by him at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial today.

At the time of the explosion on October 1, 1911, he said he was on a train from San Francisco to Los Angeles and the next day he was a detective employed by Mayor Alexander of Los Angeles to run down the dynamiters. He remained on the Pacific coast until the latter part of December, when he returned to Chicago. In Chicago, he said, he met Herbert S. Hookin, secretary of the Iron Workers' union. Hookin is accused by the government of having betrayed the dynamiters while he himself was a dynamiter.

Burns, in substance, testified, "Hookin told me he would not have met me if it were not for the fact that the dynamiters were going to do a lot

What the Press Agents Say

THE BURNS-NEWS NOTES AND COMMENTS THE BURNS PLAYERS

Of all the cities that support local stock companies not one has more reason to be proud of its institution than has Colorado Springs. It is not a matter of pride in the building alone, but in the personnel of the company. No organization of a similar character has been more pretentious. The undertakings of The Burns players have covered the widest possible range—tender romance, western drama, farce comedy, musical comedy, rural drama, in each particular line only giving the best that could be secured. Not only has the company undertaken this wide range, which has called for extreme versatility, but it has surely accomplished what it has gone after in a way that has been satisfactory to all concerned.

While for many weeks past the general patronage has been far from its deserts, the packed house of Thanks-giving day encourages us in the belief that, "slowly but surely," Colorado Springs people are beginning to appreciate the quality of the entertainment offered at The Burns.

There are but two more chances to see the original rural comedy, "At Cozy Corners," the matinee today and the night performance.

Monday it is expected there will be a packed house to hear Colorado Springs' home favorite, "Fringes," and on Tuesday "The Burns" players will present "Channing Pollock's play, 'The Little Gray Lady.' This play was on the road for seven years, and was more popular at the conclusion of its road production than it was at its first presentation.

Do not forget to read the theatrical page on Sunday, in which full particulars of this special presentation will be given.

With all the worthy new stock plays that are being released, there are certain few favorites, no matter how old or how new they are, that are ever certain of a popular and financial success in stock. One of these, and one of the best of them, is "The Little Gray Lady," which, although it has been released only about a year, is constantly being presented in the larger cities of the east and west. The story is a simple one, dealing with a phase of government life about which the public learns little or nothing. It is a typical American play by a typical American author.

"THE CONFESSION" AT THE OPERA HOUSE

Nothing but unstinted praise is heard from those who have seen James Hall-ock Reid's most successful play, "The Confession," which will be the attraction at the Grand Opera house tonight, with a bargain matinee today. Those who have seen it will surely want to see it again, and those who have not seen it will surely want to witness this time of an opportunity to witness a great play, interpreted by an unusually splendid company.

IOWA WOMAN WELL AGAIN

Freed From Shooting Pains, Spinal Weakness, Dizziness, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ottumwa, Iowa.—"For years I was almost a constant sufferer from female trouble in all its dreadful forms; shooting pains all over my body, sick headache, spinal weakness, dizziness, depression, and everything that was horrid. I tried many doctors in different parts of the United States, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than all the doctors. I feel it my duty to tell you these facts. My heart is full of gratitude to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my health."—Mrs. HAZEL E. WAMPLER, 524 S. Ransom Street, Ottumwa, Iowa.

Consider Well This Advice. No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for nearly forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

"BOUGHT AND PAID FOR" AT THE OPERA HOUSE

In reviewing "Bought and Paid For" during its engagement in Los Angeles, at the Majestic theater, Shirley Olympian, in the Herald, under date of August 26, writes:

"In every man is given the ability to create a masterpiece. To some, the ability to create a number of things so utterly fine that each is a masterpiece, apparently. Such a man is called a genius. Such a man is George Broadhurst, and 'Bought and Paid For' is the name of his genius."

"When Broadhurst creates 'The Man of the Hour,' we thought he had written himself out. But he followed with that terrific indictment against man's selfishness, 'The Price.'"

"And now he offers us 'Bought and Paid For,' doubtless one of the most superb efforts at character drawing of this or any age. I believe this judgment will be borne out by every person at Hamburger's Majestic theater, last night, and who alternately sobbed or laughed through the four acts of the play."

"Bought and Paid For" is a human drama with a terrific punch. It is an ideal play, perfectly acted. Not a superfluous line has been written in it. Not an extra scene has been created to give some particular player a chance to display a particular ability. It is an honest drama, beginning logically, moving smoothly, swiftly, and correctly, through climax and anti-climax to a hospital and satisfactory conclusion.

There is so much natural comedy pouring from first to last that one is almost at a loss to properly classify the play. Of course, it is a comedy, but the humorous relief at times almost forces one at times to call it a very light comedy, which 'Bought and Paid For' sure is not. Just as pathetic one's heart, and that peculiar dry clutch is felt at one's throat, becoming tears. Jimmy appears, makes one of his native speeches, and is changed in an instant. Laughter, good honest, wholesome laughter, banishes all unhappiness.

"Bought and Paid For" will be the first of the Opera house series of plays for one performance only.

COURT DECISION IS GOVERNMENT VICTORY

Department Officials Elated
Over Outcome Bath Tub
Trust Case

By RODERICK CLIFFORD.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Department of Justice officials, including the attorney general of the United States, cannot conceal their delight over the action of the United States supreme court in declaring the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing company and its allies, popularly known as the "Bath-tub Trust," to be a corporation in restraint of trade.

The decision is regarded here by the government attorneys as the most important dictum of the supreme court since that body handed down decisions dissolving the Standard Oil and Tobacco trusts as corporations, in restraint of trade. In fact it was the supreme court's action in these cases which first caused the department of justice to proceed against the officials of the Standard Sanitary company. This procedure was taken under criminal indictments, in the federal court in Detroit, Mich., but resulted in a mistrial. Attorney General Wickersham on the other day, however, officially declared that the department of justice would push the government case against the company to the finish.

Sherman Law at Stake.

The decision of the federal court at Detroit which resulted in the jury returning a verdict "that it was impossible to agree," caused the department to make an especial effort to obtain a favorable decision from the supreme court of the United States in the civil case against the Standard Sanitary company. It was felt that the validity of the Sherman law, respecting that feature relating to the granting of patents, was at stake and that corporations could, under the patent laws, receive immunity of prosecution under the Sherman act.

In the so-called patent monopoly decision of the supreme court last year in the Dick-Mimeograph case, the court held that the owner of a patent might dictate the terms under which the patented article might be sold.

It was feared that the supreme court might apply this reasoning to the Sherman law, and thus prevent the government from attacking any of the trusts which controlled the field by reason of their control of patents. The decision that has just been rendered, however, was a radical departure from anything of the kind.

Involved Patent Rights.

The case that has just been adjudicated by the supreme court of the United States involved the right of the owner of a patented article to make such use of it as to create a monopoly in the manufacture and sale of an unpatented article.

The Standard Sanitary company with 15 other concerns and about 25 individuals were proceeded against by the government in an unlawful monopoly. The federal court of Maryland adjudged them guilty and entered a decree of dissolution November 27, 1911. The defendants appealed the case to the supreme court of the United States on the ground that their patent rights had been violated.

The decree declared that the manufacturers' license agreements, which the trusts had resorted to to maintain uniform prices throughout the United States and dictate the sale of enameled ironware articles, were unlawful, and enjoined them and their officers from resorting to such practices.

It was stipulated that the manufacturers' license agreements were enabled to which the defendants were enabled to manufacture their products at a lower price than their competitors, should not be prevented by the decree from exercising any of their lawful patent license privileges.

The court denied that this was the issue in the case by holding that the defendants' ownership of the patent on a tool did not justify them in conducting a monopoly in trade.

Surprised Government Officials.

This decision which completely surprised the defendants took the officials of the department of justice off their feet. At best they looked for another trial in the case. Their signal victory, however, in the face of adverse conditions, such as were brought about in the Dick case, was particularly pleasing.

The decision led the attorney general to remark that as the department of justice had been signally successful in this prosecution it would not in any wise consider any proposition for an adjustment on the criminal indictments against the individuals and the corporations that form the "Bath-tub Trust." Although the first trial of the case resulted in the jury disbelieving it, it felt here that the court at Detroit was altogether too friendly to the defendants and that a retrial in an unbiased court would result in a conviction, especially in view of the favorable verdict of the supreme court of the United States.

Attorney General Wickersham has announced that the second trial of this case will occur in Detroit before the Christmas holidays, if possible, but it may be that the case will have to go over until after the Christmas holidays. At any rate, it is promised that the litigation against the Democratic administration which is to follow will be bound to continue it.

GOVERNMENT TAKES UP MEXICAN ARMS CASES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—In order to preserve much of the effectiveness of the congressional resolution and presidential proclamation against the exportation of arms into Mexico, the government today brought to the supreme court of the United States an appeal from the Chavez and Mesa cases of El Paso, Tex.

Chavez and Mesa were indicted on charges of transferring arms from one part of El Paso to another part with intent to remove them into Mexico.

have a general meeting late next week, and the Democratic members then will begin plans for the opening of hearings in January, at which all persons will be allowed to present their tariff views.

The desire of senate Democrats to participate in the original making of the tariff bills, emphasized during the last few days by senators who had returned to Washington, drew a statement from Mr. Underwood that the senate would be fully consulted in all matters of preparation, but that the house would reserve to itself its full authority to make the original tariff bills.

"I think the members of the ways and means committee would be willing to confer freely with the members of the finance committee of the senate, as well as with individual members of the senate, with reference to a tariff bill," he said.

"We should endeavor, if it is possible to do so, to send a bill to the senate."

BLUE AND GRAY ARE TO ATTEND REUNION

War Department to Care for Veterans at Gettysburg Next Summer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The war department is making plans to care for the feeding and shelter of the army of veterans, confederate as well as federal, who are to attend the reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic on the battlefield of Gettysburg next July. When the fiftieth anniversary of the great battle will be celebrated.

Orders today assigned Captain Harry E. Dutton, quartermaster's corps, as assistant to Major Normoyle, the depot quartermaster here, who is charged with the military arrangements. Both officers have been authorized to proceed to the battlefield. It is roughly estimated 40,000 veterans must be placed under canvas and fed next July.

for the defense, about securing McManis's first confession in Chicago shortly after the arrests. Burns was asked:

"Did McManis implicate any one besides the McNamara?"

"He mentioned only Michael Young of Boston, in connection with the ex-implicated Hockin as having procured a pistol at Springfield, Mass., and he mentioned also as having employed him to blow up a building in Detroit."

Attorney Miller stated that only one more witness for the government will be called Monday, and then the government will rest its case.

which in England is the second line of defense, was a total failure, that it was more than 30,000 short of its normal strength and was largely composed of youths. He invited the officers to admit that it does not satisfy the country's vital needs.

Viscount Malden, the former secretary of war, who is the father of the scheme, replied that Lord Roberts was a great soldier but failed to grasp the problems of statesmanship involved.

The Liberal party generally opposes increased military expenditures. The report that the Indian princes are making a great naval contribution of dreadnoughts and cruisers has not been confirmed. The project apparently is only under discussion.

The Conservative press hails it with salves of praise, but the Liberal press shows lukewarmness, particularly if it should involve increased taxation to the Indian peasant.

Italy May Aid.

ROME, Nov. 30.—While a conference of ambassadors as proposed by the British foreign secretary, Sir Edward Grey, is under consideration, the assertion that Italy has already adhered to the plan is incorrect. A semi-official communication issued today says:

"Sir Edward Grey's proposal has not even been formally submitted as yet. If it were submitted Italy would not reply without first hearing the opinions of the other powers and also having an understanding with the allies."

The occupation of the small island of Avlona, at the entrance to the Gulf of Arona, by the Greeks is interpreted to mean that Greece intends to occupy southern Albania, including Avlona.

This would cause a complication, as Italy and Austria are in perfect accord in the policy of preventing by force, if necessary, the holding of Avlona by Greece and the establishment there of a naval base.

Albanians throughout Italy continue to hold meetings and send addresses to the Italian government, seeking Italian protection for Albania and the exclusion from that territory of the Balkan states.

Bulgarians Leave Salonica.
ATHENS, Nov. 30.—The Bulgarian army, which left Salonika on board 15 Greek transports, has landed at Dedeaqatch.

The seventh division of the Bulgarian troops were shipped aboard the Greek transports at Salonika several days ago. According to dispatches at that time, they were bound for Galipoli peninsula, where Turkey was also strengthening her forces by Anatolian troops. An attempt was contemplated by the allies, assisted by the Greek fleet, to take the Dardanelles.

Sofia dispatches of November 22 announced that the Bulgarian troops had occupied Dedeaqatch. This is the first news of the transports since they sailed from Salonika, and the possibility of the signing of an armistice had given rise to concern as to how they would be disposed.

Italians Fight Turks.
BRINDISI, Italy, Nov. 30.—Several officers of the volunteers who went to Greece to fight against the Turks under Ricciotti Garibaldi, have returned home. They explain that they were willing to go against Turkey, but did not want to be instrumental in the oppression of the Albanians.

NEW MEXICO DOCTOR SUES FOR SERVICES

Had Five-Year Contract With State Removed, and Now Wants Damages

LAS VEGAS, N. M., Nov. 30.—A suit unique in the annals of New Mexico was filed in the district court here today by Dr. H. M. Smith, former superintendent of the state hospital for the insane, in which the plaintiff seeks to recover damages of the sum of $15,000 from the board of trustees of the institution.

Dr. Smith alleges in his complaint that in December, 1910, he was ejected from a contract with the trustees to serve as medical superintendent of a term of five years, provided he would give up his city practice and devote his entire attention to the hospital.

In September, this year he was removed, to give the position to a Democrat, Dr. W. P. Mills, under the new state administration, so he alleges. He estimates that for the three years his contract has to run he is damaged to the extent of $15,000.

HYDE, SIX-FOOTER, TOO HEAVY FOR CELL COTS

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Counsel for Charles H. Hyde will make their first move to secure a new trial for the former city chamberlain found guilty last night of bribery, as soon as he is sentenced next Wednesday. Meanwhile, the convicted man will have to remain in the Tombs, although up to tonight he had not been lodged in a cell, occupying quarters in a part of the building formerly used by the warden.

Hyde is too big a man to be accommodated comfortably in one of the cell cots, it was explained. There are only six feet long, while Hyde is six feet three inches tall and weighs more than 200 pounds.

John R. Stanchfield, one of the lawyers for the defense, plans to appear in another term of the supreme court immediately after Hyde has been sentenced by Justice Goff and ask a stay in view of proceedings to secure a certificate of reasonable doubt. If this writ is issued, it will serve to get Hyde out of the Tombs on bail pending the outcome of an appeal for a new trial.

Mrs. Hyde did not visit her husband in the Tombs today. He requested her not to come to him, while he is there.

HEARING INTERRUPTED BY FALLING PLASTER

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 30.—The discussion of the senatorial committee investigating the charges of mismanagement of the National Soldiers home at Savelle, was interrupted for a few minutes today when 50 pounds of plaster fell from the ceiling upon the shoulders of a witness and a stenographer, causing severe bruises.

Edward H. Keany, the witness, testified that he had been denied a copy of charges filed against him in the court of the home governor, after he refused to obey an order forbidding members of the institution to keep their civilian clothes in their commodore at the company barracks.

The investigating committee planned to take up the examination of the officers at the institution Monday.

Federal Grand Jury Returns Indictment of Over 15,000 Words

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—The longest indictment ever returned to the United States district court here was brought before Judge De Haven, by the federal grand jury today. In 15,000 words and more grouped under 25 counts, it charges Henry L. Ford, United States commissioner at Eureka, with 13 specific acceptances of bribes, and with other misconduct in office.

Simultaneous indictments, connected with the same case, were returned against J. A. Prentice, formerly United States marshal, and William Murphy, formerly county clerk of Del Norte county, charging conspiracy. Bond was fixed for Ford in the sum of $2,000 on the first count, and $500 each on the remaining counts, making $18,000 in all, which was stipulated. Prentice and Murphy gave $2,000 security each.

The story on which the jury returned the indictments is that Prentice and Murphy, acting in agreement with Ford, traveled through Smith River country, making friends with saloon keepers, whom they later induced to sell drinks to Indians. On payment of $100 bribe each, the testimony ran, Commissioner Ford would agree to not quash the indictments against them when the cases come before him as commissioner.

GRAND JURY INDICTS WITNESS IN SNEED TRIAL

FORT WORTH, Tex., Nov. 30.—While attorneys were arguing the case of John B. Sneed, charged with the murder of Captain A. G. Boyce, a grand jury returned a perjury indictment against W. A. Weaver, a state witness at the trial. The defense arguments were completed today and the state will finish Monday.

Weaver testified he was in the hotel lobby when Captain Boyce was killed by Sneed. He said that just as Sneed entered "some one" applied an epithet and the shooting began immediately. Other witnesses testified that according to Weaver's story of his move, Weaver had been in the lobby when Sneed entered, and that he was on a train coming into Fort Worth when Boyce was killed. Weaver was released on bond.

$10,000 Disappears When Mail Pouch Is Thrown Off Train

GAUSDEN, Ala., Nov. 30.—Registered mail, said to be valued at $10,000, consigned to Gadsden and Home, Ga., disappeared last Wednesday. It became known here today. Postoffice inspectors are working on the case, but refuse to discuss the matter. According to the best information obtainable, a mail clerk on a Louisville and Nashville train threw the missing bag off a train at Attalla, Ala., last Tuesday night. It is reported the porter at the station at Attalla said he put the pouch on a Southern Railway train bound for this city. The clerk on the Southern train says he threw the pouch off there with four others. Local postoffice authorities say they received only four pouches, and that the valuable one was not included among them.

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS APPEALS TO PRISON CASES

CANON CITY, Nov. 30.—District Judge Charles Walker today decided that the statute of limitations was a bar to the introduction of testimony by the state to establish proof of conspiracy in the so-called penitentiary graft cases. Under the ruling the state will not be allowed to introduce conspiracy evidence prior to December 23, 1907.

W. L. Pinchney, expert accountant, continued his testimony today relative to the condition of the penitentiary books at the time of his examination in 1907.

MILLIKEN ADVISES PATRICK TO "HIDE"

Disapproves of Intentions to
Millionaire

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 30.—John T. Milliken, brother-in-law of Albert T. Patrick, who spent vast sums of money in aiding Patrick's defense and in proceedings which brought about Patrick's commutation of sentence and finally pardon as the murderer of William M. Rice, disapproves of Patrick's attempt to get a share of Rice's fortune.

Milliken today sent Patrick a message which read as follows: "Newspapers report you having retained attorney to start litigation against the trustees of the Rice estate. Such action is suicidal. I shall not aid you in it or give it countenance in any manner. I advise you to stop talking to newspapers. Go hide yourself."

AUTOMOBILE BANK PLAN OF DR. KIRBY

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—A proposed automobile bank was the feature of the testimony at the inquiry into the affairs of the Kirby Savings bank before Judge Landis today. Dr. William T. Kirby, owner of the defunct bank, was the witness who testified regarding the movable bank. He said that he had conceived the idea of using a big automobile, equipped with office fixtures and a small safe as a means of collecting deposits and caring for customers located some distance from his south side bank.

"Did you expend any of the money of the Kirby bank in furthering the automobile bank scheme?" asked counsel for the prosecution.

"No, I did not," replied the witness. "The witness then related his alleged experiences with confidence. He was shown a photograph which he declared was that of a Mr. Shea, one of the men he met when he had $10,000. He said that he met Shea and a man named Kissel and that he was handed a card which read:

"Pass two, 1710 Michigan avenue."

"We went to 1710 Michigan avenue," said Dr. Kirby, "and I bet $10 on a horse race. I won. Later a man behind the counter told us that such small bets usually were not accepted but that he had made an exception in this case. He said that in the future 'big money' must be bet."

"I asked him what the limit was and he said $40,000 to $50,000."

He then described the alleged loss of $10,000 which he said he bet with the assurance that "wire tappers" had secured advance information on the race.

Denver Woman Gets Divorce Decree and Big Shore Property

DENVER, Nov. 30.—Mrs. Annie Laurie Thompson was granted a divorce today from her aged and wealthy husband, Alonzo Thompson, by District Judge George W. Allen. The decree carried with it an allowance of $125,000 permanent alimony and $10,000 attorney's fees. Today's decree was the culmination of half a dozen suits and cross-suits filed in the last six months.

Thompson did not appear in court. His wife testified that, although wealthy, he had not contributed to her support for two years, and charged that he had deserted her without reasonable cause. Thompson recently returned to Denver from Tennessee.

Thompson, who is an octogenarian, claims to have accumulated a fortune estimated at more than $1,000,000 in the last 20 years by following the advice given by his father's spirit. Thompson claims that he maintained a "spirit room" in his home, and that he held daily communication with his father's spirit. He claimed to have learned through his father's spirit that his wife and son sought to have him placed in an asylum because of his spiritualistic beliefs.

Thompson owns property in South Dakota, Nebraska, Missouri and Tennessee.

ROBBER SHOT WHEN HE HOLDS UP 2 MEN

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Nov. 30.—After eluding the police for more than a week, George Mungully, 23 years old, one of two men who have committed several robberies in this city recently, was shot and killed tonight by two men whom he attempted to rob in the lower portion of the city.

The police knew nothing of the shooting until Mungully staggered into the station, and confessed as he lay dying on a cot in the receiving hospital.

MRS. LESH WILL RECEIVE SHARE $37,000 ESTATE

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., Nov. 30.—Mrs. Pansy Ellen Hastings Lesh, who was recently acquitted by a jury in Sedalia, Mo., of her confessed murder of two women by poisoning near that city, arrived in Jacksonville today, accompanied by her uncle, L. P. Luttrell, of Franklin, Ill.

She will remain in Jacksonville until the Luttrell estate is settled. Mrs. Lesh being one of the heirs entitled to part of $37,000. She says she expects to get a divorce from her husband upon returning to the west, and also wants possession of her 3-year-old son. Mrs. Lesh did not know where her relatives resided until she received a message from her kinsman, who wrote her while she was in the hands of police officials in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Lesh maintains that if she had known as much law as she does now she would never have returned to Sedalia. She confessed, she says, because her husband threatened to tell her story, and she preferred to make a clean breast of it herself.

FEDERAL GRAND JURY MAKES SUPPLEMENTAL REPORT

DENVER, Nov. 30.—A supplemental report from the federal grand jury, which ended its investigation a week ago in Pueblo, was given out today by United States District Attorney Harry E. Kelly. The report points out that in hearing the cases brought before it some were not indicted, and continues:

"Yet, we felt that there were some characteristics of criminality which should not go unnoticed."

The report states that the district attorney was requested to warn the persons involved and to notify them that they cannot plead innocence of the law in the future. The classes of cases mentioned included sending obscene matter through the mails, slanderous articles and advertisements, carelessness by campers in leaving fire, pictured oaths and testimony in connection with government business and general disregard of the internal revenue law.

LUCILE CAMERON AGAIN DISAPPEARS; NEGRO SAYS HE WILL MARRY HER NOW

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—Lucile Cameron, former sweetheart of Jack Johnson, negro pugilist, has disappeared. Her mother, Mrs. F. Cameron-Falconet, into whose custody the girl was given by the federal court, has returned to her home grieving for her daughter.

"The girl is believed to be hiding in Chicago, but so far no trace has been found of her. She was last seen Wednesday night at a downtown hotel, where she and her mother had been living very quietly since Lucile was released on bond from the Rockford county jail, where she had been held as a witness."

Upon her release the girl was understood to have said she would never return to Johnson and her mother believed her.

"I am through; I have given up," cried the mother, as she left for Minneapolis. "I would have given my life to save the girl from the negro, and I have fought and fought to save her, but it is too late now."

The federal department of justice will begin today an investigation to find out if Johnson or any of his friends have hidden the girl.

That Johnson and Miss Cameron had been in communication since she left her mother, was admitted today by the pugilist, who said he had received two letters from her yesterday morning and later talked with her over the telephone.

"She said she was going west and that after she reached her destination she would write me," said Johnson, adding that he was ready to marry her any time she would accept him.

COAST-TO-COAST AUTO ROAD MAY TOUCH SPRINGS

Officials of the coast-to-coast highway, which is to be constructed at a cost of $10,000,000 for material alone, have promised Colorado Springs due consideration as one of the Colorado cities that will be directly on the great national road. Secretary Henderson of the Chamber of Commerce has received word from those in charge of the preliminary plans stating that the plans of this city will be thoroughly investigated.

The road is to be built of rock, and $10,000,000 will be spent by the association for the material. The counties through which the road will pass will do the work, making a total cost of $25,000,000. Pledges of funds are being received from automobile and accessory manufacturers, dealers and garages; and $5, $10, $100 and $1,000 memberships.

The Lincoln Highway association, the Colorado Springs Automobile association, and the Chamber of Commerce are interested in the road, which would put this city on the greatest of all cross-country highways.

JUNIORS WILL PRESENT

'THE GOOD NATURED MAN'

Instead of the usual operetta, which it has been the custom for the junior class at Colorado college to give during the fall term, the class this year will present Goldsmith's comedy, "The Good-Natured Man," at Perkins hall, next Saturday evening. The proceeds of the production will go to the gymnasium fund.

The comedy is one of the brightest of Eighteenth century writings. It was first produced in 1768 at Covent Garden, London, and was very successful. It paved the way for Goldsmith's most famous play, "She Stoops to Conquer," and all who have seen and laughed over the latter play will appreciate "The Good-Natured Man," as it possesses the same delightful humor that runs through the more famous work.

The characters in "The Good-Natured Man" are natural and are accurately drawn from the types familiar to everyone at that time. The story of the play is built around the efforts of an uncle to reform his nephew, a gay, light-hearted, easily influenced young man, who is prodigal of his friendship as well as of his substance, and whose only ambition is to be a friend of all, high or low, good or bad.

The open, generous nature of the young man was for him the love of a rich young lady, but her guardian, a Mr. Croaker, who is always pessimistic, even in the brightest of conditions, desires his son to marry her. This son has brought a sweet-heart of his own from France, and has introduced her into the family as the sister he was sent to bring home after her long schooling abroad. The uncle, meanwhile, has his nephew arrested for certain debts. From this the play is worked out, the easy humor of the lines being kept up throughout. The action is rapid and holds interest continually.

The cast for the production is as follows:

Miss Richland..... Miss Nella Powell
Miss Croaker..... Miss Frances Adams
Mrs. Croaker..... Miss Emily London
Garnet..... Miss Louise Wilson
Lance..... Miss Marion Brooks
Honeywood..... Harold Gregg

DELPHIANS ENTERTAINED

The Delphian Literary society of the High school held its annual dance at the San Luis school Friday evening. The hall was artistically decorated with streamers of brown and gold, and pennants of the High school and the society. There were a large number of guests and several alumni of the society, among whom were Howard Cox and Frank Robertson of Colorado university, Frank Hall, Harry Johnson and C. Painter. Punch was served during the evening. Much of the success of the affair was due to the committee on arrangements, which included the president of the society, Ralph Peltz; Carl Mahoney, Len Sebring and Leslie Ford.

HATFIELD-COLLINS

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the Rev. Merle N. Smith, Wednesday morning, when Miss Charlotte Mildred Collins of this city and George R. Hatfield of El Paso, Tex., were united in marriage. Only immediate relatives of the bride and groom witnessed the ceremony. The bride's gown was of blue messaline, with trimmings of pearl, and she wore a corsage bouquet of lilacs and valley. Mrs. Frank Belmont Collins, Jr., acted as matron of honor, and the groom was attended by the bride's brother, Frank Belmont Collins, Jr.

Immediately following the ceremony, the wedding party returned to the home of the bride's father, Frank Collins, Sr., 1808 Washington avenue, where a wedding dinner was served. The bride is well known in the younger set here and in musical circles. Mr. Hatfield is a prominent business man of El Paso, Tex., being connected with the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio Railway company. The young couple left Wednesday evening on an extended wedding trip through California and Old Mexico, after which they will return to El Paso, where a furnished bungalow, the groom's gift to his bride, awaits them. The guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Collins, Sr. and Mrs. C. H. Ford, Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Belmont Collins, Mrs. L. Walters, Miss Vera Fisher, Lowell Collins and Miss Ford Flinn.

SEALS TO BE PERMITTED ON UNADDRESSED SIDE ONLY

Red Cross seals that are to be placed on suits during the next two weeks by the Visiting Nurse association, may be placed on the unaddressed side of mail matter only, and cannot be used on any material dispatched to Austria, Norway and Portugal. All other foreign nations allow the use of the stamps. If such seal-puttings are not taken, the suit set will be returned, if the name and address of the sender is placed upon the exterior of the package. If such precautions are not taken, the mail will go to the dead letter office.

WOMAN'S CLUB TO GIVE 'DISCUSSION DINNER'

The first of a series of discussion dinners to be held by the social science department of the Woman's club will be given at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the home of the chairman of the department, Mrs. Robert Kerr, 181 North Tejon street. Mrs. M. W. Morrison, chairman of the program committee, will assist.

Municipal affairs will be the general topic taken up, and "Proportional Voting," one of the three proposed amendments to the city charter will be considered in a practical way. Each guest will be given a ballot containing four fictitious names of nominees for mayor of Colorado Springs, and each will be asked to mark on her ballot her first, second and third choice for the office. These ballots will then be canvassed according to the provisions in the charter of Grand Junction, and the election will be announced. How this method improves on the present system will then be shown.

The dinner will be prepared and served according to scientific standards and the relations of good food to good citizenship will be discussed. Those wishing to attend are requested to send their names to Mrs. Morrison, phone Main 2112, or to Mrs. Kerr, phone Main 2738.

MANY DELEGATES WILL ATTEND FEDERAL AID GOOD ROADS CONVENTION BY A. A. A. FOR MARCH 6 AND 7

The newest of all the states is the first to come to the front in selecting delegates to represent the commonwealth at the Federal Aid Good Roads convention called by the American Automobile Association to be held in Washington, D. C., March 6 and 7, 1913.

Governor W. P. Hunt of Arizona, himself an enthusiastic motorist, has advised President Robert P. Hooper of the A. A. A. that he has named Attorney General U. P. Bullard, State Engineer Lamar Cobb, and Colonel Dell M. Potter as the trio of representatives from the forty-eighth state. Colonel Potter is a good roads advocate of national repute and is vice-president for Arizona in the ocean-to-ocean highway association. Arizona naturally feels a great interest in the construction of transcontinental highways. While none of the other governors has actually named his state's delegation, many of them have advised that they will do so at an early date. Included among these are the governors of eastern states which were not represented in the first Federal Aid convention of nearly a year ago. The good roads enthusiasm which has been exceptionally marked in the west seems to be renewing itself eastward.

The responses from commercial organizations to the invitation of the A. A. A. to send delegates to the Federal Aid gathering are pronouncedly favorable from every part of the United States. The Commercial club of Great Bend, Kansas, takes the lead in actually naming its delegation. Fred Zutzavorn and W. P. Feder have been designated. Many of the largest chambers of commerce and boards of trade in the country have promised to be prominent in the convention.

Indications are that every one of the 44 A. A. A. state associations and 450 clubs will have members at the national capital who will pay particular attention to the spokesmen in congress, who in some instances will even serve as motoring delegates. With farmers organizations and miscellaneous good roads bodies all invited to participate, indications point to the most representative and influential attendance ever known at any good roads meeting.

With the assembling of the present congress for its final session, public interest in federal aid will doubtless be revived. There are some thirty different proposals for federal road appropriations pending, but it is not anticipated that the present congress at the short session will attempt to take action on any of these. Furthermore,

WORST STOMACH TROUBLE ENDED

No Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn or Dyspepsia five minutes after taking Pape's Diapepsin.

Every year regularly more than a million stomach sufferers in the United States, England and Canada take Pape's Diapepsin, and realize not only immediate, but lasting relief.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach five minutes afterwards.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your pharmacist a fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, debilitating headaches, dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large fifty-cent cases contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of dyspepsia, indigestion or any other stomach disorder. Adv.

COLORADO AND SOUTHERN WILL NOT ISSUE PASSES

Denver, Colo., Nov. 30, 1912.

To All Whom It May Concern:

The United States, acting through its department of justice, claims that it is unlawful for this company to give free local transportation (though appearing on its face to be good only in Colorado or in Wyoming) to any person, or the officers or employees of any corporation or firm which makes or receives, or may make or receive, interstate shipments of property. If it is unlawful for the company to give it, it is equally unlawful for the individual to solicit, receive or use such transportation.

To test the legality of such transportation the government has caused indictments to be presented against this company in the United States court for the district of Colorado.

Pending a final decision by the courts of the question as raised, no free transportation will hereafter be granted by the company on any of its lines when presented by any one known to be engaged in the shipping of property, or when presented by any officer or employee of any firm or corporation known to be so engaged.

All persons coming within the terms of this notice, and now holding passes or other forms of free transportation, are requested forthwith to return the same to this company.

THE COLORADO & SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

By A. D. Parker, Vice-President.

TRIAL FAILS TO SOLVE JENNIE BRICE MYSTERY

Nobody knows but Noah what became of Jennie Brice. James A. Orr, Martin Burns, Judge Kerr and others were unable to determine where she is yesterday afternoon in the trial of "The Case of Jennie Brice" before the Woman's club in Odd Fellows hall, although the prisoner at the bar was acquitted by the jury.

At the trial, which was based upon the story, "The Case of Jennie Brice," which is now running in Everybody's magazine, Judge Robert Kerr presided. Martin Burns was attorney for the prosecution, and James A. Orr for the defense. Lawyers, business men and club women assisted with the other parts of the trial. The entertainment was a pronounced success, the hall being packed. The attendance was estimated at 500.

Methistophelles Will Be Model for Women Modists Next Month

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Woman's model for the next month is to be Methistophelles! Her hair will be adorned with the long curved feather of the cap of Methistoph. The feathers are made of the osprey or bird of paradise, curved at the end in the approved Sathanic style, and will measure anything up to two feet in length.

As for the society dude's attempt to revive the fashion of side whiskers, it has required only a few weeks to show that this style is as dead as the dodo. The American fashion of a clean-shaven face is now almost the general rule, and there is not the slightest possibility of its being superseded by the fads of the feeble few.

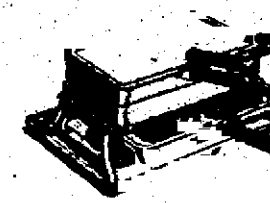

The west end hairdressers assert that Englishmen take as much care now of their faces as women do, and spend hours daily in being manicured and generally beautified. It is the custom with many of them to have their faces and hands massaged every morning, after which they are shampooed and perfumed. In fact, the only advance which the fair sex has over them in the matter of cultivating a young look is in retouching the eyebrows and rouging the lips.

VICTOR MAN, HEADED FOR SPRINGS, WANTED

With a deputy sheriff at his heels with a warrant for his arrest on a charge of stealing a team and wagon from a Victor Everyman, C. S. O'Neil, who represented himself as a mining promoter, eluded his pursuer by climbing onto a moving freight train at St. Peters Dome. The authorities in Teller county believe that he came to Colorado Springs, but they are not now seeking O'Neil. It is said, as the team and wagon have been returned by an unknown 32-year-old boy who left the town with him, and did not notify the Colorado Springs police to search for him.

O'Neil claimed to be a graduate of the Colorado School of Mines and declared that he formerly lived in the Cripple Creek district. According to the story from Cripple Creek, he claimed that he intended to start up some of the large mines near Victor and that it would be necessary to employ 30 men, whom he said would be brought into the camp from other points.

He attempted to make reservations for the 30 men at the Myers boarding house. Mrs. Myers arranged to meet O'Neil at one of the banks Friday morning, but he failed to keep the appointment. Then it was learned that he had hired a team from a lively stable conducted by Andrew Elliott and left town with a 32-year-old boy, on the pretense that he would drive east of Victor to inspect mines.

O'Neil and the boy were seen driving near St. Peters Dome and a deputy sheriff near there was notified, but not until the boy was met coming back with the team and wagon. He stated that O'Neil left him at St. Peters Dome, and started for Colorado Springs.

CAUGHT NEAR HERE ON CHARGE OF HORSE THEFT

Harry Allison and Earl Roberts of Cripple Creek, accused of stealing two horses from Felix Calmes, a dairyman of Cameron, were arrested late last night at St. Peters Dome, according to information from Cripple Creek. They had declared their intention, before the theft, of riding over the hills to Colorado Springs. The police were asked to arrest them if they appeared here.

TO IMPROVE

sight of the permanency and stability of the work. Also the annual maintenance necessary to keep this protection work in an unimpaired condition should be considered.

At each of the 10 points where wash-outs occurred we found the failure of the toe wall to be the primary cause for the destruction of the rip-rapping. This failure of the toe wall was perhaps due to poor cement work in the water, or to the toe wall being founded on soft material. The failure of the toe wall permitted the water to scour, or undermine, the back filling on which the rip-rap was supported, thus causing the latter to cave and break up. Once an opening occurred in the rip-rap, it meant destruction to that portion of the bank which was subjected to the direct current of the stream.

Work Would Be Expensive.

But to protect the banks of Monument creek in such a way as to make them absolutely flood proof, etc., would entail an expenditure entirely out of proportion when considered with the service rendered. The abutting property is not so valuable that the city can afford to expend more than $10 per running foot to protect it. However, if the proper protection work is installed at a rate of $10 per running foot and adequately maintained each year, there will be little danger of very serious damage being caused by floods that might be compared with that of July 21, 1912. Therefore, what we propose the city should do in this connection is: Repair the toe wall with such suitable and efficient construction as will be capable of withstanding floods that will not exceed the capacity of the creek, and properly maintain the same.

A change in the design or plan of the work already installed on Monument creek will not be necessary in order to affect a permanent bank protection. If the toe wall reaches a shale or solid foundation within a distance of four feet below stream bed, it would be economy to bring it up to about one foot above stream bed. But should solid foundation not be found within the above specified distance, piling should be driven, spaced at about three-foot centers, and upon the piling the toe wall can be conveniently brought up to the proper distance about stream bed.

With the back filling thoroughly tamped and properly sloped from the toe wall to the river, a pavement of reinforced concrete or stone rip-rap, fully pointed with cement, or stone flagging, similar to the sidewalk flagging released in the paving district, should be laid down and bedded and efficient service will be properly anchored.

Five Cross Walls Needed.

In conjunction with this work of reconstruction, it might be advisable to call attention to the various cross walls, five in number, that failed. We should suggest their repair, as they serve admirably in protecting the toe walls from the scouring effects of the stream, especially where the toe walls do not penetrate over two or two and a half feet below the bed of the stream.

The removal of large deposits of sand and gravel, which obstruct the

and it cites the commodities clause of the Hepburn bill, Senator Beveridge's child labor bill and the present newspaper law as striking examples of an attempted perversion of federal power to accomplish ulterior and unconstitutional ends. After reviewing the struggle which led, in England and America, to the freedom of the press, he asserts that such liberty consists not only in freedom from absolute prohibition but also of exemption from any burdensome or unreasonable restraint.

Any undue burden upon writing or publication or other restriction of the full right to print and circulate is an abridgment of the press and contrary to the first amendment.

Hurtis Small Papers.

The brief argues that the enforced publication of a newspaper company's circulation and the publisher's creditors would unduly burden the power of the weak newspaper to compete with the stronger and in many cases drive the weak newspapers to the wall. He further argues that at the time the first amendment was adopted the impersonal dissemination of ideas was generally recognized in discussion.

"Letters of Junius" are cited as also is the fact that the constitution itself would never have adopted had it not been for the federalist paper published anonymously by Hamilton, Madison and Jay.

An attempt to compel a newspaper to disclose either its owners or its editorial management to mark as an advertisement matter which it has published for a consideration, restricts the freedom of discussion and is contrary to the custom of impersonal writing.

which prevailed generally in England and America when the constitution was framed. The brief further argues that the appropriation of the newspaper columns to enforce the policy of publicity without compensation violates the fifth amendment in taking property without due process of law.

Not Hypocritical.

Mr. Beck argues that the law has the merit of sincerity in that it makes no hypocritical pretense to being a means to carry out any constitutional power. He quotes the debates of congress as showing that the authors of the bill, Senators Bourne and Reed and Representatives Henry Barnhardt and others all admitted that the purpose of the act was to compel a public disclosure of the ownership of newspapers and of the influence which dictated their policies.

The supreme court has especially set Monday for arguments in these cases.

It is expected that Robert E. Morris will open the case for the newspapers. Solicitor General Bullitt will speak for the government and James M. Beck will make the closing argument for the newspaper press.

In part, lessened reserve requirements, it could not counteract the effect of actual cash withdrawn and the decrease in reserve, $11,833,650, not only wiped out the surplus reported at the end of the previous week, but made a deficit.

"In view of Saturday's statement, the extraordinary high rates prevailing on call money in New York are not at all surprising, but it is certain that after the call of the controller of the currency for the statements of national banks throughout the United States, which is expected now any time, the effect will be to release a large amount of funds, and, in that way, bring about a movement of money toward this center and in softening rates."

FINANCIAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The Financial Review will say:

"The New York clearing house banks are temporarily under the 25 per cent minimum reserve requirement, the statement issued today having shown a deficit of $5,651,550 in the item. This calculation was based on the actual condition of the banks at the end of the week, but the statement, made according to the daily average system, revealed a deficit of only $1,050. The shrinkage in reserve below a legal requirement was brought about by the heavy decrease of $18,562,000 in cash, due for the most part to withdrawals by the interior.

"The banks seem to be almost to the limit of their ability to further reduce loans, the contraction in the loan item last week having been only $4,860,000. Deposits, owing to the withdrawals of cash, and the contractions in loans, fell $19,245,000; and, while this

AT THE PRINCESS THEATRE

The Invaders picture, made by the Kay-Bee company, will be shown at this theatre one day, Monday. This feature is in three reels, and ranks at the very top for a picture of its kind, from an artistic point of view and is a fine illustration of how constant and consistent work may succeed in spite of all difficulties.

The Invaders presents an absorbing picture of dramatic conflict between the conquering and decadent forces, White and Red. One can form no idea of the magnitude of this wonderful picture until seen. To have a picture of this kind in three full reels is very exceptional, and even to show that they have left nothing undone to make the picture complete in every detail, it will be shown Monday only, and will certainly be a rare treat to all.

MORE THAN 1,000 TICKETS ALREADY TAKEN FOR PERSSINGER CONCERT

Late last night, the count showed that more than 1,000 tickets were already out for the second Persinger concert, and there is still one more day of sale.

A sold-out house for two concerts.
This record is so far ahead of any other ever made in Colorado Springs for a second performance, that it becomes the wonder of everyone who has given it thought. It just goes to show how Colorado Springs people have taken Persinger to their hearts.
Each one of the seat holders for these concerts has seemed to feel a personal ownership in him.

Because of this feeling on the part of the people, the Musical club has asked Mr. Persinger to allow them to give a public reception for him at the Antlers hotel after his concert Monday night.

AT THE PRINCESS THEATRE

Do not miss the three-reel feature, entitled "The Invaders," which will be shown Monday only at this theatre. It is a Kay-Bee film, and insures all of the quality of the picture.
It is the most elaborate picture of its kind ever produced, and will meet with your approval in every detail.

Election Taos Indians Literally "Political Race"; Snake Dance of the Arizona Moquis

START OF THE TAOS POLITICAL RACE

F. J. Cole, who recently piloted three Stanley steamers from Colorado Springs to San Diego, Cal., has returned to this city. The trip to San Diego was made in 21 days, Cole leaving the cars there and returning to Colorado Springs by railroad.

During the trip, R. W. Magruder and Mrs. Lena Adams, both of Colorado, were with him.

The two pueblos are ruled by one governor, of their own choosing, and are never in want. They still thresh grain in the same way they have done for a hundred years and more, placing it in a large pocket in the ground and then running their poles over it again and again until it is thoroughly threshed.

The Taos Indians live in mud houses that are so solid in construction that they can have as many as four stories inside they are as clean as an American home, being whitewashed and carpeted with skins and rugs, some of them priceless. In the house of the present governor, beside the fireplace is a hole in the wall that houses a land turtle which has lived there for 40 years. It comes out to eat every day, and each day, as it comes out, the Indian claims that it brings good luck for the next day.

The snake dance of the Moqui Indians in Arizona, an annual custom, is the cause of great feasting and frolic. Each Indian participating is almost wrapped in reptiles, bull snakes, rattlers and many others. Cole secured two pictures during the dance, one of part of the dance itself, and the other of the snake priest. He says that the ceremony is a wild dance, in which is a riddle to tell which are the wildest—the squaws chanting or crying in a shrill tone, the bucks, with their wild yelling, or the steady accompaniment of the hiss and rattle of the snakes. At the end of the dance the snakes are running loose, but the first one that starts to wriggle away is captured by the snake priest and kept by him as a good omen.

ado Springs, were married on the rim of the Grand Canon of the Colorado, in Arizona.

Cole brought back with him a number of pictures which he took along the route, many of them being of Indians. The party visited the Taos Indians at Taos, N. M., and also saw the Moqui snake dance, given at the Indian village 15 miles west of Winslow, Ariz.

The old town of Taos was made famous by the massacre of the "Ole Chino Church," when Governor Bent and Kit Carson stormed the old pueblo. There are now two pueblos of Indians living there. They are among the most interesting and enterprising

ROAD BUILDERS TO HOLD CONVENTION

Meeting in Cincinnati Will Attract Many Highway Boosters

CINCINNATI, Nov. 30.—Highway improvement will engage the attention of the foremost public officials and expert road builders in the United States during the four days of the ninth annual convention of the American Road Builders' association which convenes here on December 3.

Among these men will be delegates from almost every state in the Union, and a large attendance of public officials. The deliberations of the convention will be limited, strictly to the administrative and technical phases of road and street construction.

At the same time, an exhibition has also been organized for the instruction of the delegates. This exhibition includes not only the features which have contributed to the value of former conventions, but an exhibit by states and municipalities showing road building materials, methods of administration and construction and other matters of interest to the layman as well as to the engineer or contractor.

ENGINEERS TO MEET IN NEW YORK DEC. 3

Convention Will Be Attended by Representatives From Every State

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Mechanical engineers from every state in the Union, and many from foreign countries will be present at the annual convention of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers which convenes its three-day session here on December 3.

Extensive arrangements have been made to welcome these delegates by those in charge of the convention arrangements. Chief among the entertainments, of course, will be the technical papers which will be read by engineering savants visiting this city. In addition to this, excursions, luncheons, dinners and receptions have been planned for the delegates.

Great interest has been manifested in the sessions which have been delegated to the reports of technical committees and to the list of papers which is to be read during the so-called machine shop sessions.

During the time devoted to the reports of the technical committees, reports will be made on the methods of conducting tests of "pumping," "boilers," "steam engines," "gas engines," "water wheels and compressors," "blowers" and "fans." The machine shop sessions include tests and investigations as well as machine shop operations.

Among the new arrivals were some of the most notable men and women in public life in the United States. In addition many well known industrial educationalists have signified their intention of addressing the delegates to the convention. Prominent among these were ex-Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, chief of the Bureau of Education, and ex-Senator William C. Redfield of Brooklyn and the Hon. Carol S. Page, United States senator from Vermont.

Many important topics have been allotted to the different sessions of the congress. Proposed legislation for vocational education in Pennsylvania has been scheduled for discussion Thursday morning, while discussions on the subject of securing teachers for boys' and girls' vocational work have been set on the program for Thursday afternoon.

Friday morning has been given over to a debate upon means of opening

HOW TO STOP YOUR HAIR FROM FALLING

By a Scalp Specialist

It is the bald-headed man or woman who needs or wants a hair remedy most. The majority of people with bald, shiny scalps have long since resigned themselves to fate and either wear a wig or go about with the countless thousands of others whose hair is merely "growing thin" and coming out at an alarming rate. These people are in the initial stages of a dangerous scalp condition which, if not treated, will lead to certain and complete baldness unless prompt and effective measures are taken.

Most of my patients, both men and women, are of this very class, and almost invariably I find their trouble due to one and the same cause, a defective scalp circulation. The scalp is the life of the hair, and if it is not properly nourished, the hair will fall out and the scalp will become diseased. The hair root has done the damage in nearly every case. The root has become diseased by this attack upon it, both from within and without. The diseased scalp tissues which are designed to hold and protect the hair sac have become relaxed and flabby. To effect a cure and save the hair, the scalp must be given a thorough cleansing and a permanent and complete destruction of the diseased scalp tissues must be forced to assimilate through the pores a form of nourishment that will promptly check the falling of old hair and start a growth of new hair. For such a purpose I believe nothing is so effective as a hair preparation which can be used at home or have any drug-gist mix for them. Dissolve one-half drachm of Menthol Crystals (about 10¢ worth) in 6 oz. of Bay Rum (4¢ worth) and add 2 oz. of a good hair cream. Shake well and allow to stand one hour before using. While not necessary, the addition of a teaspoonful of To-Kalon perfume gives a peculiarly lasting and delicate odor, which is very agreeable. Used as indicated above, and applied night and morning, rubbing into the scalp with the finger tips, this hair body is unequalled. A few days' use and you cannot find a single loose or straggling hair, dandruff will disappear and itching cease and in about ten days you will find your scalp covered with fine, downy new hairs, and these hairs will grow with amazing rapidity. Indeed, owing to the remarkable hair-growing properties of the preparation, I must advise users to be careful not to apply it to the face or where hair is not desired.

CONGRESS CONVENES TOMORROW FOR REGULAR SHORT SESSION

Appropriations Aggregating One Billion Dollars to Be Made; Trust Revision to Wait

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—A session devoted almost entirely to appropriations bills is the plan of the majority of congress now arriving in Washington for the final session of the Sixty-second congress and adjournment on December 2.

December 2, 1912, is the day for the two weeks, and the first session of the Sixty-second congress will be held in January and will continue for two months of protracted session. Even the most sanguine members do not predict that any great amount of constructive legislation will be accomplished before March 4, when a new president is to be inaugurated and the Sixty-second congress will be in its third death.

There are more than a dozen big appropriation bills in the hands of the committee of the house and senate. The first of these is the bill for the reconstruction of the Panama Canal, which is now in the hands of the committee of the house and senate. The bill for the reconstruction of the Panama Canal is now in the hands of the committee of the house and senate. The bill for the reconstruction of the Panama Canal is now in the hands of the committee of the house and senate.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The judiciary committee of the house will be largely concerned with the impeachment proceedings against Judge Robert W. Archbald of the circuit court, which are now pending before the senate and which will be taken up early in December. This will prohibit the immediate consideration by the house judiciary committee of the trust question which is pending in the minds of Democrats.

Announcements of the Sherman law probably will await the convening of the new congress, although some members may be held by the judiciary committee during the bills in the Archbald impeachment.

Must Prepare Budgets

Two of the annual bills which probably will be ready when congress meets in January are the executive and judicial appropriation bills, and the bill for the reconstruction of the Panama Canal. These bills will be passed by the house and senate in the first session of the Sixty-second congress.

The executive appropriation bill is now in the hands of the committee of the house and senate. The bill for the reconstruction of the Panama Canal is now in the hands of the committee of the house and senate.

INVENT NEW DEVICE TO AID IN TARGET PRACTICE

LONDON, Nov. 30.—An invention which will greatly improve the accuracy of recruits' shooting as well as insure a great saving in ammunition has been brought out by Lieutenant Platt of the Nineteenth Hussars, and is now being tried with success in the inventor's regiment.

It is known as the "Bullseye Target" and is designed for drill hall or barrack room. It consists of a life representation of a rifle range, the target being changeable and drawn to scale so that by the use of dummy cartridges men can be practised on firing at exactly the same targets as on the actual range.

It is composed of a board 5 feet by 2 feet 6 inches, on which a rifle butt with 12 sets of targets is represented in life colors. The targets being numbered on the butt test as on a real range. It is furnished with second and class figure targets at 100 yards, and designed for actual practice at 100 yards. By means of a patent shutter, the targets can be changed in a second.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—David M. Mulvane of Kansas, who has charge of the western Republican headquarters at Chicago, will be in Washington to-day to confer with President Taft regarding the proposed reorganization of the executive branch of the government.

Mulvane is expected to remain in Washington for several days, and will be in conference with the president and the members of the cabinet.

TEXAS MARSHALS REMOVED FROM OFFICE BY TAFT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—President Taft today removed from office Eugene N. Lyons, United States marshal for the western district of Texas, and D. B. Lyons, marshal for the eastern district of Texas.

Both were removed for the good of the service, and were charged with political activities in behalf of the United States marshal for the western district of Texas, who was the leading support of Colonel Roosevelt in that state.

Lyons, McDowell of Del Rio was appointed to succeed Lyons, and Philip E. Lyons, of El Paso, was appointed to succeed Lyons. These removals were the first President Taft has made for political activities since the election.

PRESIDENT TAFT DISCUSSES MESSAGE WITH CABINET

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—President Taft and cabinet held a special meeting today to discuss the president's message to congress, which will be delivered next week. The message deals with every subject upon which the president wishes to advise congress, except foreign relations.

FORMER COLORADO WOMAN IS DEAD AT DAWSON CITY

SEATTLE, Nov. 30.—Mrs. Thomas Charlton, formerly of Leadville, Aspen and Denver, is dead at Dawson City, Yukon territory.

Mrs. Charlton was the first white woman to go into the Klondike over the Dalton trail, being with her husband in 1898.

Mrs. Charlton is a pioneer miner of the west. He was in Leadville and other camps. He owned a large live stock ranch in Denver in the early days, which caused him to fail in business, after which he sought new mining camps and in 1892 went to the Yukon. He is now one of the best placer operators on Gold Hill, Bonanza Peak. His only surviving child, a daughter, is a teacher in Denver.

Mrs. Charlton was 67, and a native of Ireland.

SON OF MEKKER RANCHER KILLED BY FALLING ROOF

MILLER, Nov. 30.—The son of a ranchman was killed and a father and brother were seriously injured today by a falling roof in a barn on the Mecker ranch, near the town of Leadville.

The son of the ranchman was standing near a horse when the roof fell on him. The father and brother were also in the barn at the time.

WIFE OF BRAZILIAN PRESIDENT IS DEAD

RIO DE JANEIRO, Nov. 30.—The wife of Marshal Francisco de Paula, president of Brazil, died today.

Mrs. de Paula was 60 years old and had been ill for some time.

Fried GELS-IT, The New Corn Cure, Yet?

At last, a real does-what-it-says corn cure. Nothing like it has ever before been known. Every man and woman, who has corns, callouses, warts or bunions, ought to try "Gels-It" at once, and see how marvelously it works. Quit shaving your corn with a razor. You may draw blood and cause blood poisoning. "Gels-It" is remarkable because it never irritates or turns the true flesh sore or raw. It is as safe as water. Stockings won't stick to "Gels-It" a pain stop. The corn or callous shrivels up, comes out. Blessed relief!

"Gels-It" is sold at drug stores at 25 cents a bottle, or sent on receipt of 25 cents to E. L. ... Co., Chicago.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATORS TO HOLD CONVENTION IN PHILADELPHIA DEC. 5-7

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—Many prominent politicians and civic betterment workers were among the advance guard of delegates to the annual convention of the National Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education, which arrived here today. The convention will convene in this city, December 5-7.

Among the new arrivals were some of the most notable men and women in public life in the United States. In addition many well known industrial educationalists have signified their intention of addressing the delegates to the convention. Prominent among these were ex-Senator Albert J. # No Longer Cranky About His Meals

Has Perfect Digestion From the Use of a Well Known Remedy That All Can Obtain

The temper of the family and the good cheer around the table depend so much on the good digestion of each individual present that the experiences of some of our dyspeptics who overcome their trouble should be of interest to those now suffering in this way.

The best advice one can give about it is advice that is seldom heeded, to eat slowly and methodically, to eat only when hungry, to eat only when the stomach is empty, to eat only when the bowels are regular, to eat only when the mind is at ease, to eat only when the body is healthy, to eat only when the soul is at peace.

In the opinion of such people as Dr. Geo. T. Hull, Prop. Hull Drug Co., Price, Okla., and Mrs. M. J. Butler, 27 East 12th, Kansas City, Mo., it is the ideal remedy for indigestion, no matter how severe, constipation, no matter how chronic, biliousness, no matter how acute, or any of the many other ailments that result from indigestion.

When you use Syrup Pepsin you will see the fallacy of believing that pills and tablets can cure indigestion, constipation, biliousness, or any of the many other ailments that result from indigestion.

DR. GEO. T. HULL

Systematically training the stomach and bowel muscles to do their work, soon restores these organs to normal. If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way, a druggist, send your address—a postal card will do—to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 144 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed to you. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

PROGRESSIVES TO MEET IN CHICAGO

CONVENTION IS CALLED FOR DEC. 10

Will Perfect Plans for Future Action by Party Great Interest Being Taken

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Great and widespread interest is being manifested in the Progressive conference that has been called by Senator Dixon, chairman of the national committee, to take place in Chicago on December 10, at the time of the meeting of the national committee. When the call was issued it was not realized at national headquarters how great this interest would be, and it was thought best to limit the invitations for the conference to the chairmen of the different state committees and the gentlemen who had been candidates for the governorship in the various states. But it was made clear immediately that from all over the country many men and women who have taken a prominent and active part in building up the Progressive organization, and in the work of the campaign, would be glad to attend the conference. And it is now evident that the desire to attend is so great that the conference will be, in fact, much more on the proportions of a national convention than had been anticipated at national headquarters. Several states have arranged to hold state meetings are proposing to send delegations formally elected at such meetings, regularly accredited to represent them at the conference just as delegations to conventions are accredited.

The purpose of this conference and meeting of the national committee is obvious. The Progressive party has been established on a firm foundation throughout the nation. Tremendous responsibilities as the dominant party of opposition to the Democratic device immediately upon it. There is much hard work, of the utmost importance to both the nation and the states that must be done by the Progressive party. The records of both the old parties prove that neither of them would do this work and the destruction of the Republican party deprives it of power even if it had ever shown the least willingness.

Under these circumstances the Progressive national committee is confronted by problems necessitating immediate and well-considered action. It was felt by Senator Dixon and others at national headquarters that before the national committee is asked to take such action the wisest course would be to give its members the benefit of the fullest discussion of these problems by the men and women who have helped to bear the burden of the campaign and who have contributed their time, their money and their efforts to the furtherance of the Progressive cause throughout the Union.

Under the fundamental law of the Progressive party, as laid down in the rules unanimously adopted by the first national convention, the national committee is the only body that has power to make binding action. But the deliberate judgment of such a conference as that which is to be held will undoubtedly have the greatest weight with the national committee, and such resolutions and suggestions as come from the conference will unquestionably have the most careful consideration by the committee.

For these reasons it is the earnest hope of national headquarters that all those who attend the conference will come prepared to submit in concrete form any suggestions they may have to make regarding the future of the party. By this means the work of the conference and of the national committee will be greatly facilitated. The executive committee is now in the process of making plans for the conference or to the meeting of the national committee any formal plans with the thought or expectation that they should be adopted as such. But several tentative suggestions will be submitted from national headquarters for such action as the national committee may deem fit to take.

Strengthen Weak Spots. For instance, it is obvious that the problems involved in continuing the organization and work of the party fall naturally into three or four classes. First of all comes the question of finance. For the proposed work inevitably involves expense, and funds must be raised to meet it. Next comes organization. It is absolutely in getting together national and state organizations for a presidential campaign in the short space of 90 days, many things were done that might have been done better, and many things were not done that should have been. Now weak spots must be strengthened. Some men will drop out of the organization who cannot give the time and effort to it. These places must be filled. The organization must not only be made permanent, it must be perfected in every state in the Union. Tremendous and continued labor is inevitably involved in this.

Then comes education and publicity. Men are needed, and this means the publication of the Progressive platform and the distribution of pamphlets and documents, the giving of lectures and the establishment of local committees; the holding of meetings, arrangements for speakers, and the careful preparation of material for public speeches and addresses, the writing of articles for newspapers and magazines, and the supply of friendly newspapers with information about the development and work of the Progressive party.

Of no less importance is the subject of legislative activity. In most of the states during the recent campaign, as well as in the nation, Progressive platforms were adopted which made declarations in favor of specific reforms.

One year ago today, THE CREDIT REPORTING COMPANY opened for business. The experimental stage was soon passed and the most skeptical regarding the success of the company became its enthusiastic supporters.

We have produced the most valuable rating book ever published for Colorado Springs. Of this there is no doubt. THE MERCHANTS CREDIT GUIDE "THE BLUE BOOK" is an up-to-date publication in a class by itself. The Guide is soon to be supplemented with a complete abstract of the real estate and personal assessments of every individual residing in El Paso County.

We are the only Mercantile Agency in Colorado serving the retail merchant that issue written reports containing full antecedents, resources and trade experiences on every individual reported. Our files are therefore most complete and contain all possible credit information on practically every credit buyer in the Pikes Peak Region.

We solicit the patronage of the merchant on a strictly business basis, for we believe THE CREDIT REPORTING COMPANY offers a report service well worth every dollar we ask for it and it is our aim to give value received for every contract sold.

Letters from a few of our Subscribers

A Banker

We have made use of their services and have been highly pleased with the same. Their book of ratings is the most complete we have ever used. We are very glad indeed to speak a good word for their reliability and believe that any business entrusted to their care would receive careful and conscientious attention.

A Fuel Company

We take great pleasure in endorsing the Credit Reporting Company, with whom we have been doing business ever since they started business in December, 1911. We have always found their reports accurate and reliable, and their Rating Book has proven to be of great assistance to us, being authentic and reliable.

A Clothier

We have been patrons of the Credit Reporting Company of this city since the organization of the company. We are highly pleased with the service rendered to us and consider their Rating Book and report service the best we have ever seen. We take pleasure in recommending their services.

A Dry Goods House

We have been a subscriber to the Credit Reporting Company ever since they started business in December, 1911. We have always found their reports very reliable. Their Rating Book is the best we have ever seen. Their collection department is pushed with vigor and the returns we have received from the collections given them have been very satisfactory.

Uncle Sam Is Preparing New Bill of Fare for Americans

By JONATHAN WINFIELD.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Judging soup, brisket of antelope, French fried dachshunds, baked breadfruit, boiled pie, and creamed omelette, liebes nut salad and mangoes.

No, this isn't the menu of an oriental feast nor yet the day's meal of a gourmand rich enough to supply himself with all the edible delicacies of the four corners of the earth, but simply the bill of fare prepared by one of the food experts of the department of agriculture who is endeavoring to reduce the high cost of living by introducing a number of new dishes into this country.

The foods mentioned above are only some of the four hundred or more brand new dishes that the government botanists are now working on with the intention of using them throughout the country as substitutes for imported supplies now dutifully to induce appetites and of reducing the cost of living.

In all more than 30,000 new vegetables and fruits have been tested by Uncle Sam, the work being done in the bureau of plant industry of the department of agriculture and, according to David Fairchild, who heads the title of "agricultural explorer," a goodly proportion of the foodstuffs which Americans have regarded as staples since the days of the first settlers are doomed to displacement. Uncle Sam, he says, is rapidly finding new foods to take their place, which are more tasty, contain more nutritive value and are cheaper.

People Need Change in Diet. "The world isn't going to eat the same kind of foods forever," said Mr. Fairchild to me the other day. "The human palate grows weary of the same old things year in and year out, and craves new foods. That is one reason for the popularity of southern cooking in the north and the great prevalence of French cuisine on the hills of fare throughout the world. The French have that very valuable instinct of being able to disguise old foods in such wise that the consumer barely recognizes them and therefore feels that he is, in reality, eating something new."

"Then there is another consideration. The soils need a change of crops, for the same old plants season after season will rapidly wear out the nutritive value of the earth and run it to the verge of exhaustion. This is the rotation-of-crops system whereby the different seasons see different grains or vegetables planted in the soil. But even this has its drawbacks inasmuch as the number of crops is necessarily limited and the rotation cannot be of as much value as it would be when the different species of crops are much increased."

Mr. Fairchild proceeded to show me a peculiar product resembling an onion, which he explained was the "Tung Shu nut."

"This came originally from China but we are growing it here now and call it the wood-oil nut. We've gotten a good many valuable fruits and vegetables from Japan and China which are almost unknown in this country, but which we have found can be easily grown in many sections of the United States. The wood-oil nut is one of these and I think the time is near at hand when you will find it on a good many of the bills of fare throughout the United States. Of course, it will take some time to educate the people up to eating and ordering it, but once they get in the habit I expect to see this nut become very popular, for it has really a delicious flavor and is very nutritive."

May Supplant Irish Potato. "There is another imported vegetable that I think will, in time, take the place of that popular tuber, the Irish potato. I refer to the 'dusheen,' imported from the West Indies and South American states and which I consider much more edible and of a great deal better flavor than the potato of commerce. In appearance it is a cross between a potato and a sugar beet. If it had a head, legs and tail it might easily be taken for a miniature zebra, for it is striped and hairy. One might speak of it as a striped potato that needs a shave."

"The dachshund can be boiled, baked, fried or served in any one of the innumerable ways that the modern housewife knows of preparing the potato. It makes a splendid stuffing for chicken, veal and other meats, having in addition to the meaty taste of the other tuber something of the nutty flavor of the chestnut. In addition, the yield of the dachshund is enormous, a farmer being able to depend on from 400 to 450 bushels per acre."

"Still another vegetable of foreign origin which the department of agriculture hopes to place upon American tables is a huge round bulb having two names. It is called the scarlet turnip, or giant radish, being similar to both. Like all the other vegetables that we are experimenting with, its yield is very large and it can be prepared for the table in a variety of delicious ways. As a turnip it may be boiled, mashed, fried or made into a delicious vegetable soup. Its resemblance to the radish also stands it in good stead for it can be sliced and served raw, to be eaten with salt just as if it were a radish. Its economic advantages are thus immediately apparent, for a single turnip-radish, sliced, is the equivalent of many bunches of the ordinary variety of radish. Also it may be had at a time when radishes are out of season and can be secured only by purchasing hothouses at exorbitant prices."

Experimenting With Jujube. "The jujube is another novel foodstuff which we are trying to popularize throughout this Middle States. This is not a vegetable, but a fruit. The jujube flavor is not new to the United States, for candies have been flavored with it for years, but it always had to be imported at an immense cost, and thus placed the fruit was above the pocketbook of the average housekeeper. We have imported a number of the trees, however, and I think that within a comparatively short time we will be able to popularize the fruit throughout the country and thus introduce a really new product."

"The jujube is about the size of a cranberry, but contains only one small seed which, with the aid of seedlings, may eventually be eliminated. Epicures declare that it is best when eaten raw, but it may be cooked in any manner that apples are prepared, made into sauce, into the fillings for pies, preserved or dried."

"The petal is another importation of ours which I think will soon run the cabbage a hard race for popularity. Instead of being squatly and globular, however, it is tall and shaped something like a waste basket. Its leaves are narrow and delicately curling, so that they may be easily separated from the petal stalk and cooked as a distinct dish. In addition to enabling one to eat the great American dish without offending anyone's sense of smell, the petal also will effect a considerable reduction in the weekly grocery bill, for it costs but one-third of the price of the ordinary cabbage."

"The breadfruit, the yam and the tounge are other foods which we will Introduce Five Bills. In several states definite steps have been taken toward securing legislative action on these platform declarations. In Vermont, where the legislature is now in session, five bills have been introduced by Progressives, one of which has been passed and signed by the governor. In Pennsylvania a carefully mapped-out course will be followed. If no doubt will be proposed at the coming conference that every state where the legislature is to meet this winter take steps to have bills introduced in line with the pledges of the Progressive state platform, and that similar action be taken in congress with respect to the promises of the national platform.

Definite plans with respect to all of these subjects will be suggested to the conference and the national committee. For instance, as to financing an effort is now being made to secure subscriptions in limited amounts toward an annual guarantee to continue for four years, payments

ARTIC WHALER IS LOST DURING CHASE

Fifteen Members of Crew Go Down When They Refuse to Give Up Ship

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Official information has reached Dundee that the whaling ketch Seduzante had been lost in the Arctic regions, and that the owner, O. Forsyth Grant, of Ecclesgreig, Kincardineshire, and 14 members of the crew have been drowned.

The party were walrus hunting, and during a gale the Seduzante struck a rock and foundered. The Eskimo members of the crew had previously left the vessel.

The following account of the disaster, which occurred off Nottingham Island, at the entrance to Hudson Strait, is sent through the commissioners of the Hudson Bay company. "In a gale on September 24, 1911, Mr. Grant, in the Scottish Whaler Seduzante, ran for Nottingham Island, and to his surprise the ship struck a rock and was wrecked. The crew were in the boat when the ship was wrecked, and they were unable to get out. The crew were in the boat when the ship was wrecked, and they were unable to get out. M. Mitzitzky is so terrorstricken that he has armed himself with two Browning pistols, and only appears on a platform in a solid iron and steel cage.

NEW YORK HORSE SHOW GREATER THAN EVER

Contestants who are attracting considerable attention at the horse show. Above, Miss Maud Freese, the clever little English girl, 8 years old, who is proving herself to be an expert equestrienne by her performances in the various events in which she is entered. Below, is Lieutenant La Bouchere, a Holland army officer, taking his mount over a hurdle in one of the events in the international army officers' contest.

The 1912 national horse show at Madison Square Garden in New York is proving to be far more brilliant than any of the preceding shows. The entry list for the various classes is far larger than ever before, and the blue ribbons appear to have reached a higher standard of perfection than the prize-takers of yore. As usual the real big feature of the show is the fashionable attendance, the leaders of society occupying arena boxes, and the thousands who are attending the show appear to spend more of the time inspecting the faces, gowns and jewels of the "400" than to paying homage to King Horse.

Startling Effect of Radium on the Body

From the New York Sun.

When Professor Becquerel, the French physicist, discovered by accident that the tiny flask of radium carried in his waistcoat pocket had burned his skin the open-eyed medical men of the world began at once an investigation of radium. For only active and possibly injurious things, such as fire, poisons, caustics and other powerful bodies, can be of aid to medical science.

The effect of radium on the human body seemed to be about the same as the Roentgen or X-rays; both show their strongest effects some time after exposure of the patient to their influence.

The influence of radium on plant growth is curious and striking. If the rays are directed at the seeds, either the plant is dwarfed or retarded in growth or absolute cessation of development occurs. If bean or turnip seeds are exposed to radium growth becomes more rapid at first, and then the beans stop growing, although turnips go on to full development.

Radium placed near the green leaves of summer trees causes them to lose the chlorophyll and become brown, pink, purple, blue and red; the tints of autumn foliage.

Prof. Elias Metchnikoff of the Pasteur Institute in Paris placed different varieties of disease-producing microbes as well as their toxins near particles of radium, with the result that the germs were either killed or like their toxins reduced in potency. It required, however, as long as 30 days only to slightly weaken diphtheria toxin, while lockjaw toxin remained unaffected. Cobra poison, which is difficult to neutralize even with fire, is put quickly out of business by radium, while rattlesnake, copperhead, viper and other serpent poisons are likewise destroyed. In waters or springs that contain radioactive powers fish are harmed and spawn will not mature.

Guinea pigs and rabbits are so sensitive to radium that even a single turn quickly appears upon their skin if radium is anywhere near them. Rabbits, however, are less susceptible and the momentary action that burns a guinea pig will only cause an overgrowth of hair in rabbits. After three weeks of uninterrupted action of radium upon white mice, even though an inclosed cage, these animals died. Internal hemorrhages are the causes of both the paralysis and death.

In May, 1903, Sir James Mackenzie Davidson of London, who had been unsuccessful in treating cancerous ulcer on the face of a patient with the X-rays, thought he would try the newly discovered radium. Two glass tubes, each containing one-third of a grain of radium bromide, were applied at brief intervals to the growth. Dramatic and emphatic was the starting result. The ulcer healed perfectly without a scar, and now, nine years afterward, the gentleman is quite well, without the slightest return of the trouble. This case led to Dr. Davidson's extension of the use of radium, and the results were equally good in all but the severe and long-continued instances.

Radium has a particularly valuable action upon an infectious and relapsing eyelid disease known among doctors as vernal or spring catarrh. It is common in children and youths, and consists of rough, granulated, sticky deposits along the edges of the eyelids. Until radium was used by Dr. Davidson and Dr. Lawson, both of London, vernal catarrh was an incurable malady. But in more, in the last six years hundreds of persons with this malady have been forever cured of it by a few momentary exposures to radium.

Effect on the Skin. Now it is well known that physicians who are constantly compelled to take X-ray photographs soon acquire a curious crackling, peeling, rough, hardened skin. This becomes chronic and often degenerates into certain skin varieties of malignant diseases.

Dr. Frederick Baetger, the noted radiographer of the Johns Hopkins hospital, was so severely affected by this X-ray dermatitis, as it is called, that some of his fingers had to be amputated. Nothing seemed to alleviate this X-ray ailment until Dr. Davidson, who was also affected by it, applied tubes of radium to himself. He was agreeably surprised to discover that the radium completely cured the condition.

Dr. Dominici of Paris was the first scientist to use lead, silver, gold and platinum screens to keep out the less penetrating alpha rays. Thus longer exposure to the gamma and beta rays are possible without injury if these are desired for the deeper human structures. Small tubes are now made of platinum or other impenetrable metal, which allow the radium within them to be placed deep in the cavities of tumors or ulcers. They are allowed to remain embedded in this way for any desired length of time. Dr. Abbe often places collodion tubes in the centers of malignant growths, and at his New York hospital radium is then lowered into these tubes as often or as little as he wishes.

Tuberculosis of the skin or lupus, skin cancers, tongue cancers, warts, leprosy and even pellagra of the skin have all been successfully treated with radium.

The helium and neon given off as an emanation from radium and found as often in artesian wells as in the waters of Bath, Aix-les-Bains, Hot Springs and other famous resorts have been isolated by Sir William Ramsay, Soddy, Rutherford and their coworkers. When this emanation is introduced alone into the living system by inhalation or injection it has a paralyzing effect on young animals and a stimulating effect upon old ones. Professor Wilhelm His last year before the Berlin Medical society reported the cure of 15 out of 18 cases of gout that he had treated with radium emanation.

Another recently known phenomenon concerns the new discovery by the physicist, Otto Hahn, who has obtained a substance temporarily called mesothorium. This new body is one of the disintegration products of thorium. Dr. Hahn found it in an attempt to separate a radio-active element from thorium. It is obtained from the residues in the preparation of thorium for the manufacture of incandescent gas mantles.

It is by weight more powerful in radio-activity than radium and has seemingly the same kind of rays. Since this new element comes from thorium, which is cheap and accessible, and since pitchblende, the mother mineral, as it were, of radium, is rare and expensive, Dr. Davidson has begun experimenting with mesothorium as a substitute cancer cure agent for radium. It has only one disadvantage over radium, which is more than compensated for by its abundance, so that radium lasts 2,500 years, while mesothorium will last only seven years. Dr. Davidson has already cured a patch of X-ray skin disease with mesothorium.

Like radium rays and radium emanation, Dr. Hahn and Prof. Rutherford have also discovered that there are thorium alpha, beta, gamma and other rays as well as thorium emanations.

Precautions When the King Travels

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger. When the king and queen of England and their suite travel by train, not only are the most elaborate precautions taken to guard their safety, but every effort is made to protect their majesties from the slightest annoyance or inconvenience. It is a time of dreadful anxiety for the railway officials, and few of them breathe freely until the royal special has passed.

Most minute and detailed instructions are issued to station masters, inspectors, engine drivers, guards, plate layers, signal men and all who have anything to do with the route over which the royal train must pass. These are printed in red ink, must be kept strictly private, and must only be communicated to those in the service of the company who, in the discharge of their duty, require to know and act upon them. And these persons must not give any information whatsoever respecting the knowledge of which they have become possessed. Immediately these "sealed orders" are received, they have to be acknowledged by wire to the superintendent of the line.

The line over which the royal train will run has to be cleared, and all facing points clamped and padlocked a quarter of an hour before the special is due. Nothing must be allowed to touch it until the royal train has gone by. Often the train consists of a brake-van, then a saloon, the queen's saloon, the king's saloon, a dining car, another special saloon, and another brake-van.

One guard, provided with a hand lamp and detonators, whose duty it is to go back and protect the train if needed, rides with the rear guard, and there is another man, similarly equipped, whose mission is to afford protection forward, in case of necessity. Artificers, provided with all the needful materials and appliances, accompany the train, and the whole of the carriages are subjected to a most thorough examination before the train starts, and at each place where it calls.

The engine, in charge of a trusted driver, carries four lamps by day—one at the foot of the smokestack, one at each end of the buffer beam, and during foggy weather or falling snow four powerful white lights are carried in the same position.

Competent telegraph men, under the charge of the telegraph superintendent, accompany the train, with instruments and appliances by which communication can be at once established at any place in case of need. The call signal of the train in any case of emergency is "K. T." and messages sent from the train are prefixed "R. L." these taking precedence of all other messages, except those bearing the prefix "D. M."

Even shunting operations on or adjoining the line on which the royal special will run have to be suspended half an hour before its approach, and all trains and engines, other than passenger trains, must be brought to a standstill before the train bearing its king and queenly burden is due. Passenger trains are allowed to proceed, but their drivers are expressly forbidden to whistle, and, if possible, they must reduce their speed to 10 miles an hour.

At the various stations passed en route work which might in any way affect the line on which the royal train will run must cease, and all engineering work near to or on the line, whether in the hands of a contractor or the company's staff, is suspended half an hour before the train is due. Every driver must prevent his engine emitting smoke.

All the approaches to the stations have to be carefully watched, and nothing is allowed to pass over the line at a level crossing for nearly half an hour before their majesties come speeding along.

The most elaborate precautions, too, are exercised in patrolling the line. Men are stationed along the railway at intervals of about a quarter of a mile and patrol it, each man walking about a furlong in each direction and meeting his neighbor, so that, in the event of anything happening, such as goods falling from passing trains, any obstruction would certainly be noticed.

Each opening of all underbridges is examined by the patrols as they pass these structures. The men take up their positions an hour in advance and remain there until the train has passed, to see that everything is in proper order.

Naturally, tunnels are a source of great anxiety to the officials. But so stringent are the precautions that the possibility of an assassin concealing himself is reduced to a minimum. At each end of the tunnel a competent man, with the necessary hand lamp, is placed an hour before the train is due, and his duty is to prevent any unauthorized person being upon the railway in or near the tunnel. Men are also stationed at the top of each ventilating shaft and remain there until recalled by the man stationed at the end of the tunnel when the royal train has emerged.

So far as is possible the public are excluded from the company's premises unless they are on business, and the servants of the company have strict instructions to perform the necessary work on the platform without noise.

SECRET OF GERMAN POWDER

Hubert Evans in Harper's Weekly.

An American manufacturer who had wondered at the success of his German competitors was struck by certain big, flaming, official looking posters on the billboards and around public buildings in Berlin. He might have seen similar posters in every town and city in Germany. Twice a year these official posters summon the youth of the land to obligatory attendance at the trade and commercial schools. Indirectly they tell why the American or the English manufacturer finds in the German such a dangerous competitor. They reveal the secret of Germany's wonderful commercial and industrial prosperity and of her commanding position as a world power. To the philosophically inclined, they suggest interesting questions on the transformation of Germany from a nation of idealists and dreamers into a nation of materialists and doers.

There is scarcely anything in all Germany so new and modern as the continuation schools. This whole movement has been a matter of only a few years, and in its present form the continuation school is a child of yesterday. These institutions receive from the nation more care and solicitude than is bestowed upon the children of the imperial family. They are still in a rapid process of change and development. Their very success has encouraged further changes and more stringent legislation in their behalf. It is only a few years ago that an imperial industrial law was passed giving communities authority to establish and maintain obligatory continuation schools for youths, thus making good the failure of certain German state governments to provide for such schools by state law.

One of the last acts of the old reichstag last December was to amend this law so as to make it apply to all girls employed in offices, stores and factories, as well as to boys. The whole subject is still so new and fresh that every day the German press has some interesting item of continuation school news—the opening of more domestic science schools for girls, the establishment of training colleges for continuation school teachers, the publication of new laws and ministerial

A FIDDLE WITH A BRAIN

From Pearson's Weekly.

The latest invention is a violin that plays itself. People who have heard it say that it possesses the delicacy of touch and sweetness of tone of a finished player.

Really the mechanical violin consists of three instruments. The bow is a circular hoop of horseshair which travels around continually. Standing on end inside the hoop are three violins. Along the necks of the instruments stretch a row of uncanny fingers that run up and down the strings just like real fingers. The violins stand back about an inch from the moving hoop of horseshair, against which they are pushed at the right moment when the note is struck.

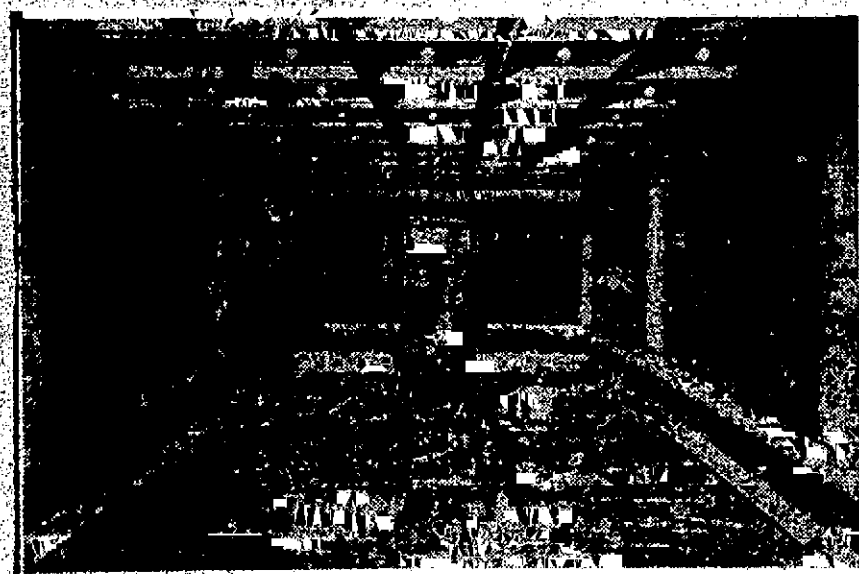

The hardest tunes to play present no difficulties to this marvelous fiddle. It is not likely to replace the human player in the orchestra for some time, at least, as the cheapest kind costs $400.

Like most machines, however, it lacks one thing. It cannot tune itself. When any of the notes get flat the strings have to be tightened by a man in almost the same way as an ordinary violin.

The replica of Henry Hudson's Half-Moon, which was one of the features of the Hudson Fulton celebration, has been overhauled and permanently anchored off Yonkers in the Hudson river.

SWIMMING POOL AT SEA.

All the delights of sea bathing may be enjoyed nowadays on shipboard. The tourist dons his or her bathing suit for a plunge into a surprisingly large body of salt water. If the boat is rolling, so much the better, since the waves set up in the swimming pool will exactly reproduce those of an ordinary surf. The largest and most luxurious of these baths is that aboard the S. S. Victoria Luise of the Hamburg-American line, illustrated in the accompanying photograph. The bath is tiled throughout and brilliantly lighted. The sea water is deep enough for diving, and a large party of bathers may swim freely about without crowding.

The water is pumped in from the sea so that a plentiful supply of fresh or rather salt water is always available. This newest luxury of sea travel is especially welcome on southern cruises made by this steamer to the West Indies. The tourist on overtaking summer weather finds that a daily sea bath makes the day complete. The galleries surrounding the swimming pool are often filled with spectators to watch the exciting games of water polo and other water sports which the great pool makes possible.

YOUNG PHYSICIAN RECEIVES HIGHEST HONOR

Dr. Alex. Carrel, the young wizard physician of Rockefeller Institute, New York, who has just been presented with the $30,000 Nobel medicine prize for 1912, the highest honor that can be bestowed upon a man in his profession. The following achievements won for Dr. Carrel the recognition of the Nobel prize commission: Placed the segment of the aorta of one dog in the aorta of another. The animal thus reinforced recovered full strength. Conducted experiments which showed that bodily development could be controlled by transplanting tissue. Removed the kidney of a dog and after treatment restored it. The animal lived for two years. Cut tissues from a chicken's heart, and by cultivating it in a tube proved that it pulsated with life for more than three months. Discovered a means of joining several parts of the arteries by a kind of stitch that he invented. Transplanted the heart of one dog to the throat of another.

SOCIETY SEES NAVY GOAT WIN FROM ARMY MULE, 6-0

Two Field Goals in Last Quarter Give Middies Hard Fought Game

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9. (In the most stirring football game ever played by the two arms of the national service, the navy, this afternoon on Franklin field defeated the army by the score of 6-0. The midshipmen did not need Jack Dorton, who won the 100 and 200 yards in the navy, to field goals for the Army. The navy team had an other score in 1st H. Brown, a full back, who booted the navy to victory. By two splendid goals from placement. Both goals came in the last period of play from the 2 and 47 yard lines after it began to look as if the heavy struggle would result in a scoreless tie.

Were Not Favorites
It was a wonderful triumph for the navy from the banks of the Severn river. With a record for the season that did not compare favorably as that of the army, with the prevailing feeling that the army on the following made during the year had the advantage, the midshipmen outplayed the army even during the moments when the tide of the struggle was going against them. They held off the army through generalship and guile, and when the opportunity to score came they had the punch to land the victory.

While all credit is due the navy for its splendid success, the army was not disgraced. Annapolis outplayed the navy in all departments of the game, but at times the army outplayed the navy.

Perfect weather conditions prevailed and the game was staged amidst a blaze of color in which golden yellow which has its place in the insignia of both branches of the service predominated.

35,000 Spectators
Outside the army lines, nearly one of the nearly 35,000 spectators who crowded the high stands surrounding the gridiron that did not carry a penny of the navy's blue and gold and the army's black, gold and gray. The florists of this and other cities seemed to have been relieved of their entire supply of chrysanthemums, the official football flower, judging by the number of them in evidence.

The cadets from West Point, in their olive coats stood out like a great gray rectangle against the background of black and assorted colors in the south stand. They carried in pennants or other colors, but the sections on the opposite side of the field where the midshipmen were seated were a mass of gold and blue streamers.

Magaphones Ruled Out.
Although the familiar magaphones of previous games were ruled out by an agreement between the two academies, the midshipmen rendered a new repertoire of songs in a way that kept the enthusiasm of the crowd at top notch. The army cadets also distinguished themselves by their vocal efforts but they did not have so many opportunities as their rivals. At the close of the game it was all navy.

Marvelous Display.
The gray clad cadets sat quietly and watched their victorious brothers of the other branch of the service invade the gridiron in a perfect delirium of joy. Parading behind their famous marine band the midshipmen walked, waltzed and executed every imaginable dance step. Pennants were tossed over the tops of the goals as the victors rushed and danced across the field. Finally came the famous rush to the colors. While the midshipmen formed a great circle, the two big blue and gold silk standards of the academy were placed in the center and a frantic rush was made toward them accompanied by a tremendous waving of blue and gold pennants.

Not must the respective mascots of the teams be forgotten. The navy goat was there, accompanied by a big wool understudy, both led by "Phebes," while the army mule which balked on entering the field was finally brought to the front of the south stand, where he remained quietly during the game.

And Now the Game.
The navy's opportunity to make the first goal from placement came through consistent line bucking and end runs. Bobby's made a rather poor punt in the last period the navy getting the ball on the West Point 45-yard line. McReavy, for the navy, made three years and Leonard added two more. Here the midshipmen were penalized 15 yards but it was more than made up on the next play by Brown who on a fake kick formation, carried the ball around the right wing of West Point to the army's 15-yard line. Roder plunged through left tackle for four yards and the next play against the line failed to gain. Then the navy team showed strategy by running the ball across the field so as to bring it directly in front of the army goal post instead of advancing it. Gillchrist and Brown dropped back to the 25-yard line and with the former holding the ball, Brown kicked an easy goal from placement.

Armies Try Desperately
Breaking the tie so late in the game augured well for the "middles" and they started to play the game safe, kicking the ball back every time it came into their territory any distance. The army realizing that there were but a few minutes left began to play desperately and made a fizzle of a number of forward passes.

The second goal from placement followed closely on the failure of an army punt to recover a navy punt the ball going to the midshipmen on the army's 20 yard line. The West Point line withstood the attacks of the plunging navy backs and the midshipmen decided to have Brown try for another goal. With the ball again in front of the goal posts Brown dropped back to the army's 17-yard line and repeated his trick sending the score up to 6 points.

Had Chance to Score.
The two halves the army had to score came in the first and second quarters. The West Point men after getting the ball on a kickoff, rushed it down the field with almost lightning speed. Keyes and Benedict on two sprints around the ends took the ball to the navy's 30 yard line amid great cheering. Here the navy temporarily stopped the rush but the West Pointers kept pecking away at the line and slowly worked down to the midshipmen.

OFFICIAL PHOTOGRAPH OF MEN WHO MADE TIGER "C" IN 1912

Weather Helps College Treasury; High School Loses Only Three Men; Baseball Outlook Hopeful

With 10 "C" men back in harness next fall Colorado colleges outlook for a 1913 football team promises to be much better than for the last two years at least. Tiger fans are placing much hope in the freshman material at the college which showed up well against the Big Tigers as well as winning all of the games played. The freshmen have speed and weight and they were given some good pointers on the team this fall. They were heavier than the 1912 Tigers and, on many occasions, surprised them in practice. While one says that the scrap for positions next year will be the hottest for some time and that there may be some of the 1912 exiles replaced by Baby Tigers.

The Tigers lose Captain Lowers tackle, Shaw and Shapcott, center, and Deesz fullback. This year's back field, with the exception of Deesz, will be intact. In the freshman backfield (Dawbarg fullback, Elmore halfback and Ross quarterback) show Tiger promise, while Minnick, at center, Gibson at tackle, and Nordeen, at end look good to the casual observer.
Baseball Best Bet.
Spring athletics look good for the Black and Gold, especially baseball. Captain Jackson shortstop, Watt, first

The Terrors made better than a point a minute during their season's football. The Terrors big to the average fan but it is nevertheless true that they are a team of 11 and total of 2 points in the five intercollegiate games played, making 11 points to the game. This does not include the Tiger and Baby Tiger games which the Terrors lost, but these last two were only practice contests. The Terrors goal line was only crossed once that by Centennial.
The Centennial affair will be the only blot on the Brown and White season and had the locals played their usual game they would have had an unobscured right to the state high school title which now they should have on the only basis available—comparative scores and victories. The post-season game next Saturday with Sterling which team has defeated Loveland, Fort Morgan and Fort Collins, north state claimants, will tell what the Brown can do.

Lose Three Stars.
The Terrors lose three star men: Captain Taylor, Eubank and Worth, tackles, but there is a world of material to take these men's places. Quarterback Fowler is slated for captain for 1913, and the election will be held after the Sterling game. The reserve list and a number of husky men who will be enrolled next year in the high school will fill up these three big gaps, although the men leaving are among the best who ever made letters of brown and white.
No successor has been chosen to Coach Stewart, last year's baseball coach, who tutored the Terrors to a state title in the national pastime, but the material looks fairly promising. There has been an influx of ball players this year. "Blondy" Fowler will probably work in the box again. The Terrors were handicapped by the lack of a suitable field for practice, and

CHEESE GETS ALL-COLORADO

DENVER, Nov. 30.—An All-Rocky Mountain football team has been selected by the six coaches of the Rocky Mountain conference and Pyke John, son of the Rocky Mountain News. The players receiving the largest number of votes of the seven making the selections were given position on the team. Three stars each from Utah, Colorado and Colorado School of Mines and two from Denver were given places. Following are the selections:
Ends—O. Romney, Utah; Kemp, Colorado.
Tackles—Schroeder, Denver; Oleson, Utah.
Guards—Cado, Mines; Knowles, Colorado.
Center—Young, Mines.
Quarterback—Harper, Mines.
Halfbacks—L. Romney, Utah; Donovan, Colorado.
Fullback—Koonsman, Denver.
In the All-Colorado selections, Brill, end, Colorado Agricultural college; Crowder, tackle, Colorado; and Cheese, halfback, Colorado college, take the places of the Utah players.

JONES IS AND JONES ISN'T RED MANAGER

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—Field Jones, former manager of the Chicago American, will be next season's leader of the Cincinnati team, according to a story brought back from New York today by Charles W. Murphy, president of the Chicago Nationals. The story told by Murphy was that Frank Chance now the property of Cincinnati, was to go to the American league in a deal which would bring Jones to the Nationals.
CINCINNATI, Nov. 30.—When Murphy speaks of Field Jones as manager of the Cincinnati club, he is evidently joking. I certainly know of no deal for Jones and Jones has never entered my mind as manager for the Cincinnati team. Further than that, he will not be Cincinnati's manager next year.
"This report must be one of Murphy's jokes," so said President Herrmann of the local National league baseball team when he heard the report that Jones was to figure in a trade whereby he would become a National league manager.

LOCOMOTIVE, AEROPLANE, AUTO, MOTORBIKE RACE

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 30.—Plans for a cross country race in which the contestants would be an aeroplane, an automobile, a motorcycle and a locomotive, were announced here today. The race is scheduled for December 7 and is to begin at Los Angeles and end at Bloomington, a small town near San Bernardino. The distance is 54 miles.

TEACH FOOTBALL IN WISCONSIN CLASSES

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 30.—A course known as the special technique of football including methods of coaching, will begin at the University of Wisconsin next Tuesday by order of George W. Ehler, director of physical education.
The course to be given two hours per week during December and January will include history of the game, general principles, theory of offensive and defensive, team politics, individual play, principles of practice, training, instruction, coaching and schedules, rules, duties of officials, equipment, its selection, use and care, management, etc.
The course will be open to juniors, seniors or graduates who have had practical experience in the game. University credit will be given only to those majoring or minoring in physical education.

SLOSSON DEFEATS JAP

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—George F. Slosson of New York defeated Kado Yamada of Japan, 2,400 to 1,214, in a six-night special match at 15.2 ball-line billiards, which concluded tonight. Slosson, with a grand average of 15, made high runs of 105 and 79. Yamada's grand average was 11.54-160, with high runs of 158 and 56.

TERRORS PLAY STERLING DEC. 7

The High school Terrors will line up against the strong Sterling eleven next Saturday at Denver. Sterling acknowledges the Terrors as the southern Colorado champs and sent a challenge down to Manager Nye of the local High school for a post-season game to be played in Denver. Sterling has made a good record, defeating all the northern schools by big scores.
The Terrors, although their season has ended, will be in good shape and will do their best to make up for the poor showing they made against Centennial a week ago. The team is in good condition with the exception of Captain Taylor, whose "charlie horse" is the worst, doctors claim, they ever treated. This kept him out of the game with Monte Vista last Thursday, but it is expected that he will be back in the lineup for the game that will decide the championship of the state.

The Persinger Concert and Mrs. Jewett's Supper

All Colorado Springs society was at The Burns Monday evening to welcome Louis Persinger home. A brilliant audience it was and a gay one, and withal a serious one, that listened enraptured to the first great American violinist, who had gone forth from their midst just a few years ago as a child and come back to them a master.

The stage was banked with palms and ferns and pink and white chrysanthemums from the conservatories of Miraflores. When Persinger appeared a storm of applause greeted him, and from his opening number to the last duet, his playing was a triumph. And when, at last, the audience was ashamed to plead for more of his exquisite music so generous had been, every one in the house rose to shower him with flowers until the stage was a mass of beautiful blossoms, each flower a tribute to his genius. Then Mr. Hall went out upon the stage and spoke the gratitude of the city for the honor young Persinger had brought to it and in behalf of the Musical club, the American Musical society, the Chamber of Commerce and nearly a hundred individual friends, presented to him a beautiful Swiss watch and chain as a memento of their love. Mr. Persinger was deeply touched and responded in just a few words of deep appreciation. It was a thrilling scene, the end of a right royal welcome.

In one of the stage boxes were Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Persinger, the happiest mother and father in the world that night when their son came into his own. Mr. Persinger sat with eyes fixed upon his wonderful boy, seeming unable to realize that it was not a dream. Their guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Wille, Mrs. William E. Bell, Mrs. E. E. Lundstrom and Mrs. J. H. Weiner.

In a box on the other side of the house was Mrs. Jewett, her face beaming with the light of fulfilled dreams, of happiness and love caught and held close. She said it was the crowning moment of her life and one, seeing her, could well believe it. In her box were Madame Farnsworth, Mrs. Gerald Bellum Webb, Miss Ann Gates, Miss William Spicer, Mr. J. Arthur Connell and Mr. Jewett.

Another box were Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Penrose with their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Alan Arthur, Miss Gladys McMillan and Mr. Walter Andrews of Denver.

Mrs. Francis W. Goddard had as her guests Mr. Frank Hale Tourist, Mrs. Booth, Mrs. William E. Hager, Mrs. James T. Anderson and Miss Holmes.

Mr. James Ferguson Burns' guests were seven members of the Burns company and Mr. John T. Hawkins.

Others who occupied boxes were Mrs. William Randol, Mrs. Ebert Smith, Mrs. Theodore F. DeWitt, Miss Bolton, Miss Dorothy Allen and Miss Anna Eyre. In the house were noted Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Shove, Mrs. Rebecca Lowe and Miss Eleanor Young of Denver, Miss Wilfred Robinson and Mr. Ted Robinson, Mrs. J. W. Whitfield, Mr. William Irving Rowbert, Mrs. Gibson Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Carpenter, Mrs. Charles Farnsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Clark Hamlin, Mr. and Mrs. William Wells Price, Judge and Mrs. H. G. Lunt, Dr. and Mrs. C. F. Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Ots, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hagerman, Mrs. Charles A. Jansing, Mrs. Frank E. Kernochan, Mrs. Morgan, Mrs. Boyden, Mrs. E. S. Solly, Mr. J. Addison Hayes, Mrs. Hazelhurst, Mr. William Russell Wray, Mr. and Mrs. E. Giddings, Mr. J. E. McIntyre, Mrs. H. L. Ballou, Mr. Fredrick Ayres Johnson, Mrs. Marie Briscoe, Dr. and Mrs. A. A. Blackman, Prof.

evening at The Burns, and will include the following numbers:

- I. Sonata, E. major.....Haeudel
- Allegro
- Allegro
- II. (a) Aria.....Matsigoni
- (b) Capriccio.....Hagdon
- (c) Andantino.....Martini
- (d) Rigaudon.....Monsigny
- III. Concerto, G. minor, op. 28.....Bruch
- Adagio
- Finale (allegro energico)
- IV. (a) Ave Maria, Schubert-Wilhelmi
- (b) Lied.....Hagdon
- (c) Intermezzo
- Old Viennese Dances.....Kreiser

After the concert, Mr. Persinger will be the guest of honor at a public reception which is to be given at the Antlers hotel by the members of the Colorado Springs Musical club and the local branch of the American Music society. The committee on arrangements includes Mrs. Clarence Clark Hamlin, chairman; Mrs. F. A. Faust and Mrs. John Speed Tucker.

"The Isle of Dreams" Was Charming Little Operetta

"The Isle of Dreams" was a great success. In fact, so great was its success that a second performance has been requested. The opera house was filled Thursday evening with an enthusiastic audience that thoroughly enjoyed every minute of what was undoubtedly the best amateur performance given here in years. It would be unfair to single out any of the participants for special praise, for they were all splendid. Miss Alice Perkins was a lovely empress, while Mr. Duane Nelson as the emperor showed his excellent base voice to good advantage in his few lines. Miss Boyderson, who styled the cast, under whose direction the whole operetta was given and who is responsible for its great success, was herself charming in the role of San Lui; she was a most attractive Japanese maiden and captivated her audience by her clever acting and singing. Her lover, Mr. Vernon Clarke, was splendid in a rather difficult part. Of all the principals, perhaps Mr. Herbert Roe as Ko Ko, attracted the most attention. He kept the audience in an uproar most of the time.

The choruses were very well trained and very attractive. Miss Geraldine Ellis, leading the parasol girls in their striking red and white costumes, was the "chit" of the evening. She was really fetching, as was her chorus, Miss St. John and the girls from Glenwood, who were also received very enthusiastically, and Mr. Joseph Underwood in a splendid imitation of Harry Lauder, repeated encores. The belies and beaux in evening costumes were very attractive, and the little Gelsa girls with their cunning glances convulsed the audience. Miss Floy Sisco in two dainty solo dances was very graceful.

The costumes were faithfully Japanese and the decorations also, giving a hint of real Japan that is rarely found in amateur productions. Miss Epperson deserves great credit for her work in training the cast, which showed throughout the result of careful study. The production was a success financially as well as artistically, and the proceeds will help very materially in raising the fund for the state endowment about $100 being cleared.

Among those who had boxes were: Dr. and Mrs. L. A. Miller whose guests were Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Ellis and Mrs. Weigert; Mrs. Livia Bryant who had with her Mrs. Fullerton of Manitou and Mrs. Black; the Fortnightly club, in whose box was Mrs. Steele; Mrs. Hise, Mrs. Rowton and Mrs. Mrs. Worth; Mrs. Erol Holby and guests; Mrs. George Nolle and Mr. and Mrs. William S. Dixon; Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Kinney with Mrs. Dudley and family; Mrs. R. L. Lackey, whose guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Cox and Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Croft; Mrs. Matthews and family; Mrs. Yates with Mrs. Grafton and her family, and two boxes of college men.

The cast of characters was as follows:

Mrs. W. V. Price will not observe her regular "at home" day next Friday afternoon. She is leaving Wednesday for Denver where she will be a special guest at the elaborate dinner and dance being given Thursday evening at El Hotel temple by the Denver golf association. Mrs. Price and several other members of the Denver and the El Paso associations will endeavor to organize at this dinner a State Federation of Pioneer associations. This has long been a favorite plan of Mrs. Price's, her idea being that "strength in numbers" will help to keep alive in the younger members of interest in the association even when the older ones are gone. Mrs. Price hopes to accomplish an organization at this time.

At the Acacia.

There were several Thanksgiving dinner parties given in the pretty dining room at the Acacia Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fielding Holden had as their guests Miss Marguerite Glass and Mr. Walter Hyer of Denver. Mrs. Marie Crane, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hawkins and Mr. C. M. F. Davis also had parties. The tables were all decorated with yellow chrysanthemums and the center table bore a huge mound of fruit.

Dr. A. A. Blackman entertained the members of the Colorado college football team; the substitutes, the coaches, Mr. Rothgeb, Mr. Black and Mr. Cox, man Thanksgiving evening at an elaborate dinner at the Antlers hotel. The table was arranged as a miniature football field with the yard lines marked with black and gold ribbons, and the places were marked by little leather footballs bearing the names of the guests. After the dinner the party went to The Burns to see "Cozy Cowboys." Here they were joined by Mrs. Blackman, Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. Park and Mrs. Faidley. The boxes were decorated in black and gold and the whole affair helped to celebrate Thanksgiving. If not Tiger victory.

The Mattie-Stark Wedding.

An unusually pretty wedding was celebrated Thursday afternoon at half past 3 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Stark, 614 North Nevada, avenue, when Miss Blanche L. Mattice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Mattice of Toronto, Canada, became the bride of Mr. Earl S. Stark. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Arthur N. Taft of St. Stephens Episcopal church in the living room of the Stark home. A curtain and canopy of smilax studded with white roses had been arranged in one corner and it was here that the bride and groom stood for the ceremony. The rooms of the house were elaborately decorated with balls of palms and ferns and clusters of white roses, and the lights were veiled with shades of smilax. A color scheme of pink and white and green was used throughout.

Professor Pryor played Mendelssohn's wedding march as the bride party came down the stairs. Following the Rev. Mr. Taft were the groom and his groomsmen, Mr. Harry M. Cook. Then the two bridesmaids, Miss Marie Reed and Miss Alvina Volkman, appeared dressed in charming gowns of pink mouseline and pink chiffon trimmed with tiny pink roses, buds, and carrying arm bouquets of pink roses. Following them was the ringbearer, little Miss Marie Stewart, the bridesmaid, who wore a dainty white lingerie frock with blue ribbons. She carried a little silver tray bearing the ring hidden in clusters of valley lilies. Miss Hylle Cameron, the maid of honor, came next, she wore a lovely costume of pink mouseline draped with pale blue silk tulle and trimmed with bands of coral, paeonies, etc. She wore a band of blue in her dark hair, and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. Mr. Stark escorted the bride downstairs. She was gown in an imported dress of white hand-embroidered silk trimmed with shadow lace. It was made after a Grecian model with an extremely high neck and long court train caught up with specially. Her veil of white tulle was held in place with a band of valley lilies and maldenhair fern and her shower bouquet was of bride's roses and lilies.

After the ceremony a wedding luncheon was served. The centerpiece of the table was a beautiful bride's cake, encircled with a wreath of pink roses and plumes, immediately after this the bride and groom left by motor for Palmer Lake where they took the train for Nebraska and the central states. They will visit about for three or four weeks and may decide to go on to visit Mr. and Mrs. Mattice in Canada before returning to the Springs where they will make their home.

Mr. Stark attended the local High school and Culver Military academy, and is now connected with the Lowell-Messervy Hardware company. His bride has lived here for the past five years and has been for some time with the Wilbur Suit company.

The guests were Mrs. Amelia Buchanan, the groom's sister from Savannah, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Miller, an aunt and uncle of the groom, and Miss Maude Roldan, his aunt; Mr. and Mrs. Sweetfinger and little Miss Gladys Swearingen of Pueblo; Mr. W. L. Mattice, the bride's uncle, of Los Angeles, and Mr. Clinton Mattice, her brother; Mr. and Mrs. Coulter, sister and brother of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. F. A. "The 'Isle of Dreams' was a great success. In fact, so great was its success that a second performance has been requested. The Opera house was filled Thursday evening with an enthusiastic audience that thoroughly enjoyed every minute of what was undoubtedly the best amateur performance given here in years. It would be unfair to single out any of the participants for especial praise, for they were all splendid. Miss Alice Perkins was a lovely empress, while Mr. Duane Nelson as the emperor showed his excellent base voice to good advantage in his few lines. Miss Epperson, who drilled the cast, under whose direction the whole operetta was given and who is responsible for its great success, was herself charming in the role of San Lu; she was a most attractive Japanese maiden and captivated her audience by her clever acting and singing. Her lover, Mr. Vernon Clarke, was splendid in a rather difficult part. Of all the principals perhaps Mr. Herbert Ross as Ko Ko, attracted the most attention and captivated the audience in an uproar of laughter and applause.

DESIGNED BY ELEANOR NORRIS

This pretty, little cushion will prove an attractive addition to the dressing table and as it is as easily made as it is dainty it should recommend itself to the woman who has but a limited amount of time to spend on the manufacture of her gifts.

THE FINISHED CUSHION

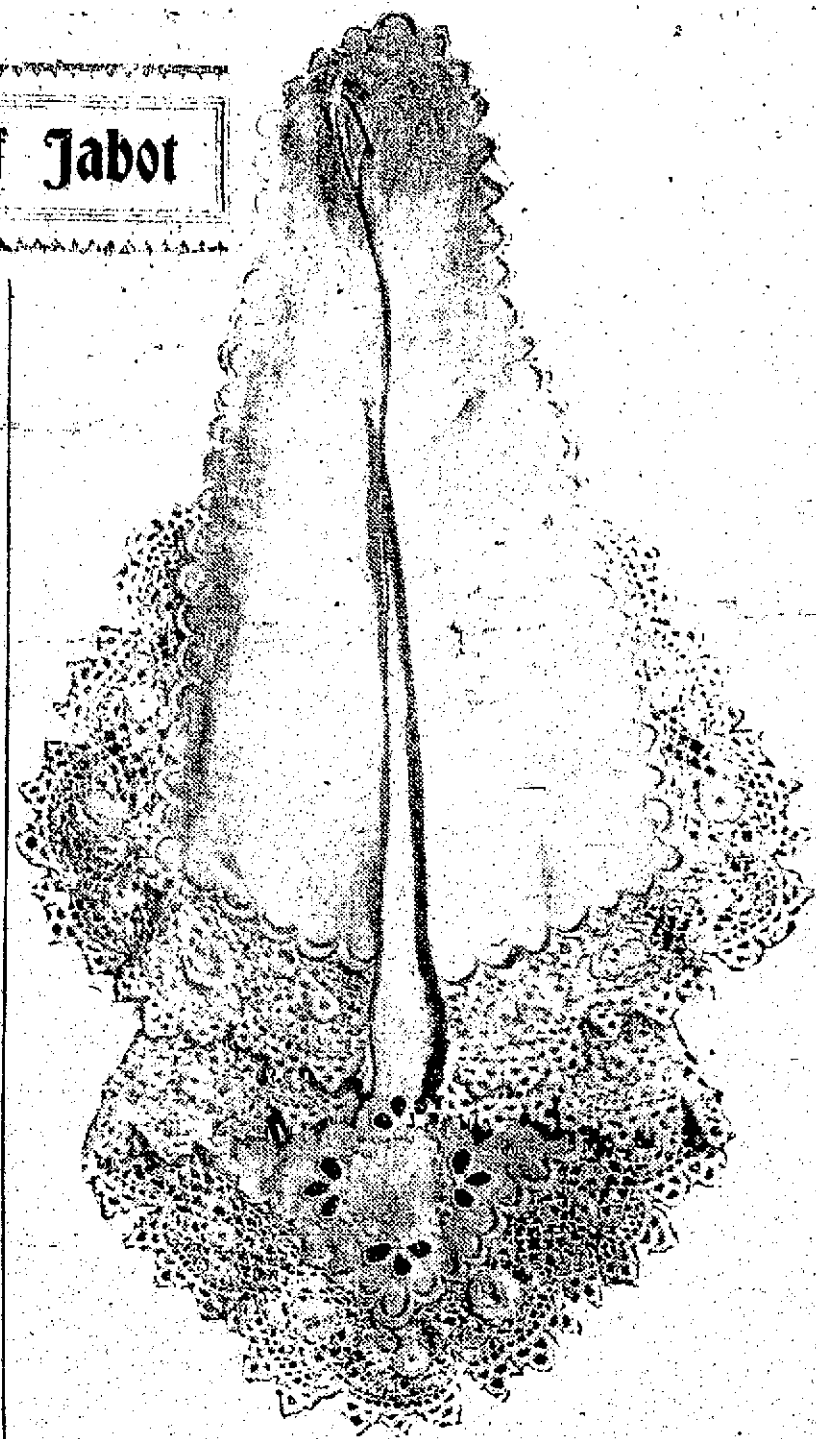

The design is stamped upon heavy linen and the edge button-holed after having been padded slightly. The rose in the center is embroidered in long and short stitch and the eyelets for the ribbon worked in the usual manner. The small illustration shows the completed cushion.

A Handkerchief Jabot

The graceful jabot shown in the illustration can be made in a few minutes. The materials required are—

One "square handkerchief," seven and one-half inches square, twenty-five inches of baby Irish crochet lace, one inch wide. Select a handkerchief with a pretty, small scalloped edge and one embroidered corner, which is to be used for the lower point of the jabot. The one illustrated is hand-embroidered with a corner in Madeira work. The lace is sewed on the two sides of the handkerchief, which adjoin the embroidered corner and half way up the remaining sides, where the ends should run under the scallops as shown. The lace should be slightly gathered at the three corners only. The handkerchief should be folded as shown and the top corner turned in a little to make a firm finish.

Other variations will suggest themselves to the clever needlewoman who wishes to use this idea for several Christmas gifts. For instance, a plain handkerchief with a hemstitched border could be used with a little wider lace, but in that case a little more lace would be needed. When wider lace is used, the lower corner is hidden, but a small embroidered design in the other two corners would add to the daintiness. If Valenciennes, maline or shadow lace is used, it should be plaited or gathered, and in that case an allowance must be made, of course, for the extra amount required. When a plain edge handkerchief is used, the lace should be whipped on with tiny stitches.

A DELL M.—A knitted football makes a very nice gift for baby and is especially nice for the child just learning to walk.

The little football may be done in strips of blue or gray knitting. Make the ball about ten inches long; gather the ends together, fill the ball with cotton and lace together with a gayly-colored ribbon.

A very pretty ball may be made of blue and white, but as the white wool soils easily, it is not so practical as a solid color.

Lace Corner.

M. R.—Since you have no difficulty in making the lace from the illustration, you could also easily turn the corner. Take a hand glass or a bit of a mirror, having a straight edge and place it upright on either a piece of the lace or the illustration and then move the glass until you have formed the very prettiest corner; now prop the mirror in position and work from the reflection. This idea can be used when you wish to turn a corner in any straight embroidery pattern.

Towel Designs.

Mrs. M. L.—Will gladly give the towel designs just as soon as possible and will try to comply with your request for the crochet edging.

Am indeed gratified that you were so much pleased with the first insertion and trust you will find something helpful each week.

Directions Not Given.

Mrs. W.—As the illustration for the lace was made very plain, and the design is not difficult, directions were not deemed necessary.

Perhaps you could pick out the pattern with the aid of a magnifying glass. This useful glass should be one of the necessities of every work basket, for by its use many beautiful lace, cross-stitch and embroidery stitches can be made plain. In fact, entire designs may be copied with its aid.

Monogram.

Mrs. O.—When ladder work is used in an elaborate monogram, the edges as well as the bars which are carried across should be bound as in the Retzella work. The buttonhole-stitch does not look so well in a monogram so the bound work is best because it has to be so carefully done, and gives a more finished look to the letters.

A Knitted Coin Purse

A Gift Which Will Please Any Girl

Materials and directions of making Coin Purse:

1 ball crochet cotton of desired color.
1 steel crochet hook, No. 7.
1 brass ring one inch in diameter.
Ch. means chain; S. C. means single crochet; D. C. means double crochet; * is sign of repetition.

The purse is begun at the lower edge and worked round and round.

Ch. 75, join to a ring.

First Row—Ch. 3, * skip 1 Ch., 1 D. C. in next Ch., Ch. 1. Repeat from * around ring.

Now make 1 D. C. in loop of Ch. 3 at beginning of previous row, * Ch. 1, 1 D. C. in space between next 2 D. C. Repeat from * until the work is 10 rows deep.

Then make 1 S. C. each in next 2 spaces, * Ch. 30, make 1 slip stitch in brass ring, Ch. 30, skip 1 space in edge of purse, 1 S. C. in next space. Repeat from * until you have made 8 slip stitches in ring, being careful not to twist the strands of Ch. 30; then Ch. 30, skip 1 space, 1 S. C. each in next 2 spaces, Ch. 24, lay the last Ch. 30 across over the edge on which you are working and make 1 D. C. in next space (the Ch. 30 will come through the space just made); * Ch. 1, make 1 D. C. in next space, Ch. 1, lay the next 2 strands of Ch. 30 over edge, make 1 D. C. in next space. Repeat from * which brings the double strands through every other space across edge, with a single strand each in first and last spaces, Ch. 4.

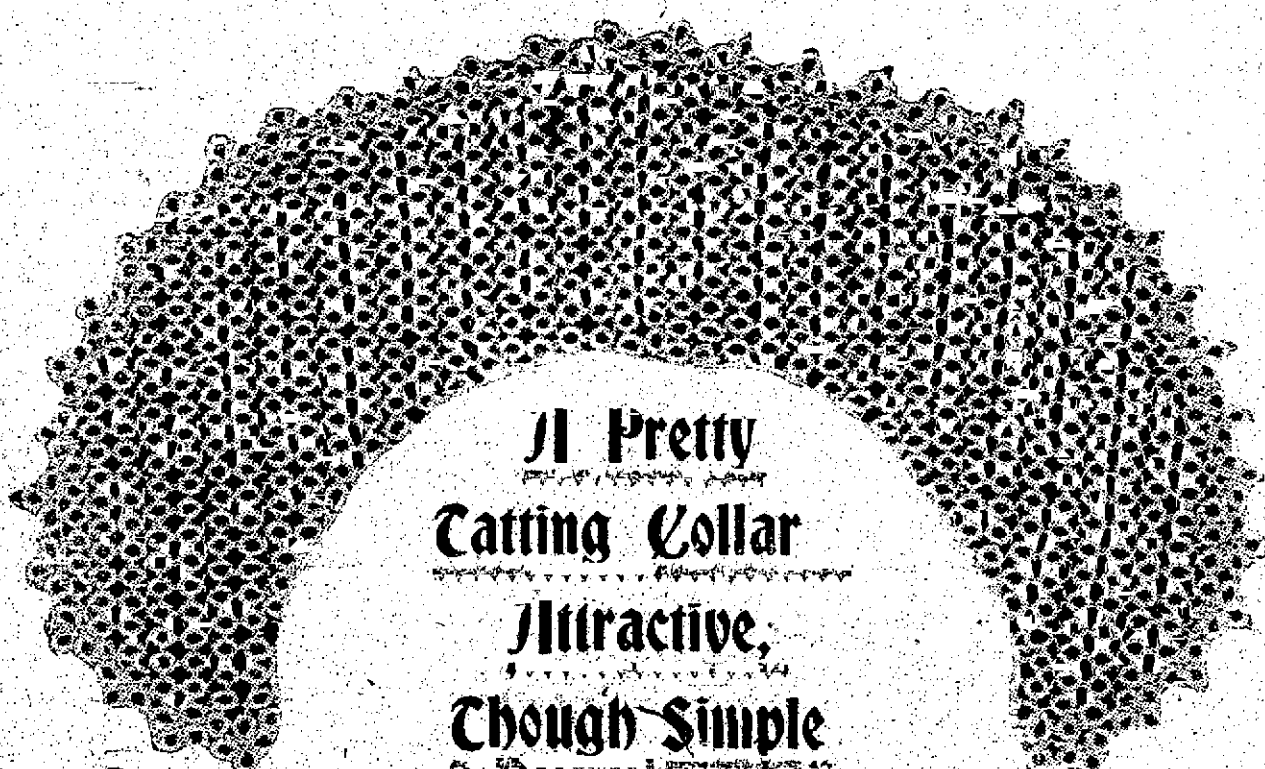

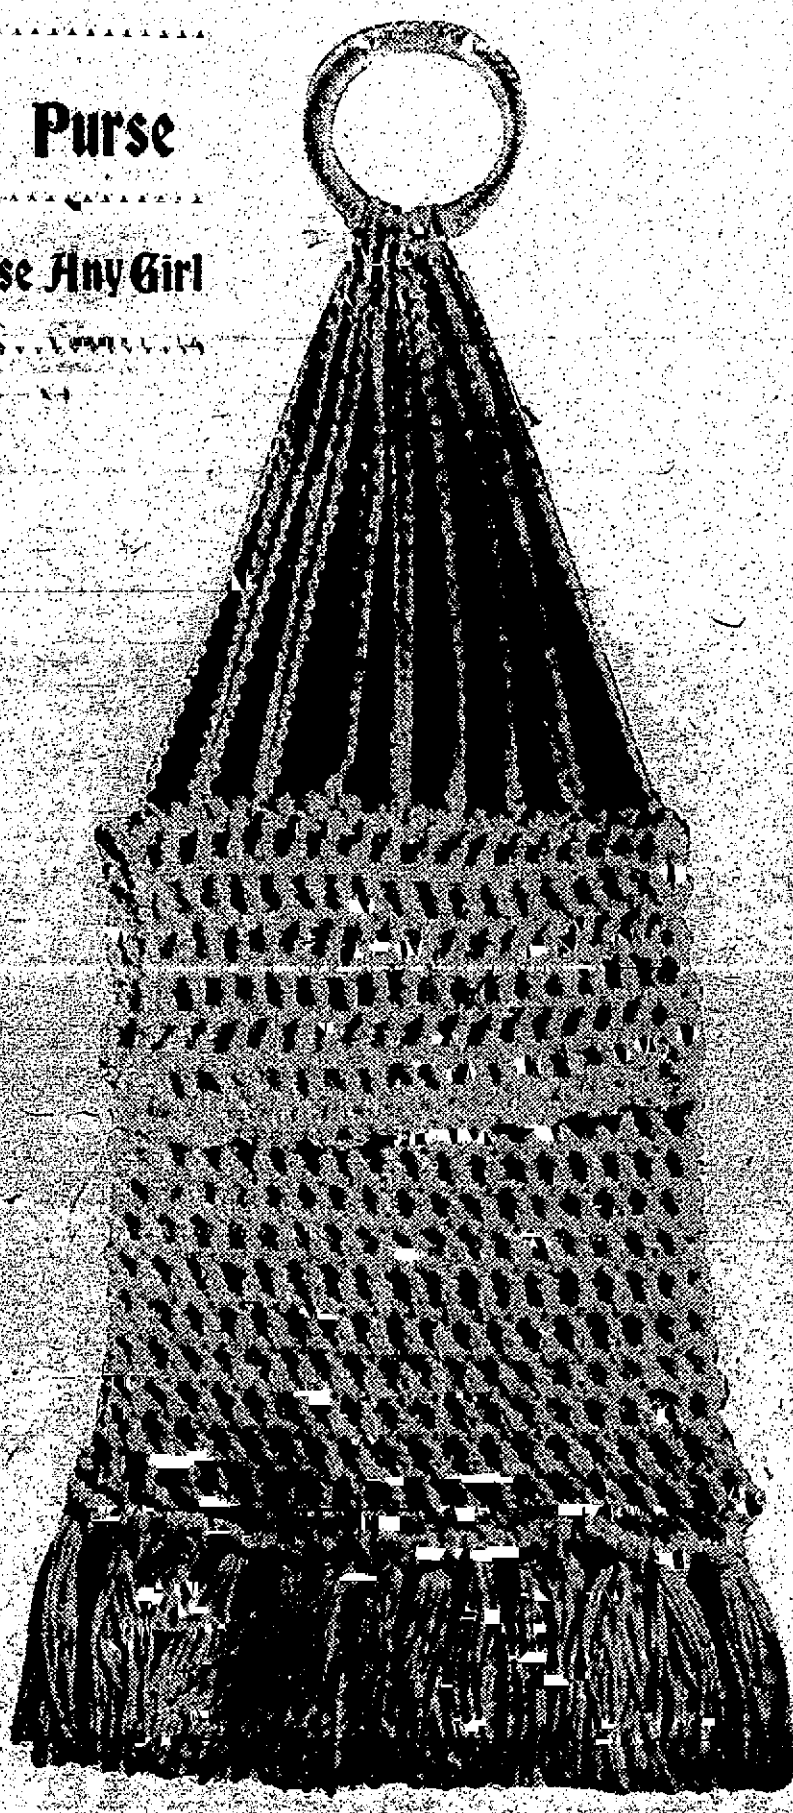

Make 1 D. C. in last space of previous row, * Ch. 1, 1 D. C. in next space. Repeat from * to end of row, making 1 D. C. in third Ch. at beginning of previous row, Ch. 4, turn.

Repeat this row until you have 6 rows in all.

Finish by making 3 D. C. in first space, * 1 S. C. in next space, 3 D. C. in next space. Repeat from * across edge, making both ends to correspond. Cover the ring with S. C.

Hold the two edges at the bottom together, fasten thread in first space, * Ch. 3, 1 S. C. in next space, working through both edges. Repeat from * to end of row.

To make the fringe, cut thread into strands, 5 inches long, tie 8 strands into every loop of Ch. 3 on lower edge, then cut, so that the fringe is a full inch long.

A Pretty Catting Collar

Attractive,
Though Simple

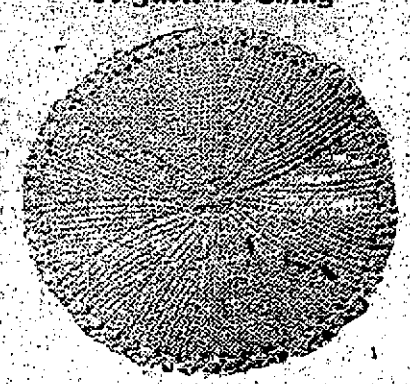

Cut a paper pattern the size and shape you want. Starting in the middle of the back, make a row of the double insertion as deep as the pattern and finish off. Then make the next row and attach to the one just made, and so on, joining each row to the preceding one, and following as closely as possible the shape of the pattern. When the one side is complete, start on the other side of the back and continue until finished. The inner line around the neck is held firm by a row of crocheting. The outer edge is finished by the clover leaf or any catting edge, which is then sewed on. This collar can be made of either fine or coarse thread.

Knitted Cable Mats

A Set of Knit Mats is Protective Cable May be Justly Ching

Use either Dexter cotton or German knitting yarn, No. 10, and two medium-sized steel needles.

Cast on thirty-five stitches and knit one row perfectly plain, leaving two stitches on the end, then turn and knit plain until you come to the other end, leaving one stitch; then put the thread around the needle and knit this last stitch. Then turn, and knit plain all the way, leaving two more stitches on the other needle, having now six stitches. Turn again, knitting a plain row all the way to the end, turn, binding off three stitches, which finishes the scallop, and thread around the needle once, knit one stitch, put the thread around the needle again and knit the last stitch. Turn and knit plain all the way, leaving two more stitches on the other needle, having now six stitches. Turn again, knitting a plain row all the way to the end, turn, binding off three stitches, which finishes the scallop, and thread around the needle once, knit two stitches at the end. Continue so until you have made five scallops, when all the stitches will be on the second needle. Repeat this until you have made twelve of these divisions. Bind off the stitches on the needle on the last one and whip this by hand to the first division, thus forming the round mat.

FUR FORMAL OCCASIONS

Softest Pelts Required for New Swathed Effects—Fur Wraps and Coats Show Decrease in Length - Mole and Seal Lead in Favor for Afternoon Wear.

THE woman who paid a thousand dollars for a fur wrap last season is chagrined this year to find that her costly garment must be discarded at considerable additional expense, in order to conform to the new wrap lines. Though last season's wraps were narrow at the foot and wide at the shoulder, they are not this year narrow enough at the foot or wide enough at the shoulder to give the pronounced oriental effect of drapery now fashionable. Beside one of the new draped wraps of seal, mole or ermine, a last season's model looks positively "straight-up-and-down" in all its graceful sleeves and its lapped front effect.

That quantities of fur are required to make the draped wraps of the moment goes without saying. The amount of seal skin put into a modern limousine wrap on fashionable draped lines, would be sufficient to make two seal skin coats of the hip length style, favored some seasons ago. In spite of the enormous amount of fur in these modern wraps, however, the models are surprisingly light, and are almost as soft and supple in texture as though they were so much crepe de chine. All this is because the finest, most pliable pelts are used and linings are chosen with utmost care. That is not an ounce of needless weight may be added to the garment. The arrangement of the fur is often very interesting, for new wraps seem to be cut in a peculiar manner; the top of the wrap, including the sleeves which are usually in kimono or raglan style with very drooping shoulder lines, being quite separate from the lower portion and the two sections being joined just above the waistline in a more or less fanciful or curved seam. In velvet and plush wraps this joining seam is heavily corded and in fur wraps it is sometimes used to cover the seam. Other wraps have deep, flat yoke pieces, hidden under enormous collars of contrasting fur, the gathered portion of the wrap being attached to the flat yoke. This gives enough fullness for the making of the graceful draperies without adding clumsiness over the shoulders and bust.

Draperies Cleverly Managed.
Two beautiful new draped fur wraps are pictured; one a seal skin model from the house of Hecht & David and the other a striped squirrel wrap in the new three-quarter length. A great many of the new coats are being made in this abbreviated length and several very authoritative houses have brought out fur coats in hip length, so there is no telling what may happen by the end of the season in the length of fur garments. The seal skin wrap has a vest of leopard, the soft seal pelt being draped from the lower edges of this straight vest in an effect which is entirely new. Chantel has brought out a breitschwanz coat which has carriage wrap from the straight-lined coat suitable for wear in the street. Sometimes the afternoon wrap has a collar and cuff trimming of ermine or of the white coney fur that so nearly resembles ermine, and this white trimming enhances the beauty of the wrap and at the same time sets it apart indubitably as a carriage garment, for the well dressed woman never wears ermine with a walking or street costume. A beautiful wrap of the character referred to is by Grunwald, the distinguished Paris furrier, and is of draped mole skin, with a Robespierre collar of spotless or untanned ermine, narrow cuffs of the ermine being set under the deep cuffs of the mole skin. Two long "ties" or streamers of the moleskin, finished at the ends with silk tassels fall over the front of the wrap, the knees and the lower edge wraps closely about the feet though the shoulders and sleeves have the baggy, roomy effect now considered indispensable to smartness.

In contrast to this distinctively carriage wrap for afternoon and evening wear, is a seal skin coat, sheathing the figure below the hips but having loose coat sleeves and a narrow collar band of gray chinchilla which twists about the neck and hangs down at the back with a chenille tassel at the tip. This wrap is suitable for walking as well as for carriage use.

Short Seal Coats are Striking in Design and is not appropriate for evening wear over elaborate opera or ball gowns, rich as its character may be. Muffs To Match Handsome Wraps. Almost invariably now, the fur wrap, whether intended for walking, afternoon limousine, or evening wear, is accompanied by a matching muff and these muffs are wondrously graceful affairs, huge and soft and oblong in shape as a rule, although some of them are more fanciful in design, with envelope flaps, trimmings of fringe and ruffles of velvet. The carriage muff matching a draped wrap, is seldom however trimmed with brushes and paws like a muff intended for use in the street with a walking costume. Typical carriage muffs are illustrated with the gray squirrel wrap and the seal and leopard wraps. The mink coat pictured is a very handsome model mounting into the four figure mark in price, and though this coat is straight in cut its intrinsic elegance makes it suitable for any occasion, though the woman who owned such a coat would be apt to possess also a variety of draped evening wraps for wear with light evening costumes. The mink skins are beautifully matched and the big collar and wide cuffs give much grace to the coat. It falls over the skirt, stopping about six inches from the floor, to show the edge of the gown and dainty buttoned boot. In this instance the coat accompanies a bridge gown of brown satin meter worn with a hat of pink velvet faced under the helm with brown satin and trimmed with a pink plume shading to brown.

Raccoon Coats for Afternoon Wear. Very smart motor coats of raccoon or leopard with collars of long haired fur, are worn by younger women who drive their own electric broughams. These coats have mannish lines, with roomy coat sleeves and belted backs, and they slip on and off very easily, being loose enough for comfortable wear over a coat and skirt suit when desired. Such a coat was worn by a young matron who stepped out of a small electric brougham in front of Sherry's the other day at luncheon hour. The lacy shade of the coat was repeated in the big collar of blue fox which is really not blue at all, but the loveliest fawn shade. Removed in the restaurant, the coat showed a lining of old gold satin. It was worn over a smart frock, the skirt just covering the buttoned top of a neat boot, though the patent leather toe was visible. Since any sort of hat may be worn with the windless shelter of an electric, the frock was accompanied by a dashing little toque of green velvet with two old gold feathers curling around the brim back of the left ear.

Sealskin coats and Broadtail coats are also worn by women who drive those exquisitely appointed little cars; but the draped wrap demands the dignity of a limousine and a hovering footman to open doors and tuck in lap coverings.

Many Short Fur Wraps Appear. Signs seem to point to shorter fur coats for those who fancy them at least. Several very chic models, both in hip length coats and draped wraps were noted at the recent Horse Show and among the coats was the graceful model of breitschwanz pictured on today's page. This coat accompanies an afternoon costume of black velvet overdressed with satin and the coat is cutaway in line, showing more of the skirt in front than at the back. The big pillow muffs matches the coat and completes the elegance of the costume. This coat was removed at tea, in the Waldorf-Astoria tearoom after a session of the Show and the bodices of the costumes proved to be a black satin coat opening over an under-blouse of sheer batiste embroidery and lace, the blouse being mounted over some very thin pink stuff—probably chiffon cloth. Draped revers of black velvet finished the satin coat-bodice in front and a velvet Robespierre collar turned back over the bodice though the throat, rising above the embroidery blouse, was bare at the front.

High Time for CHRISTMAS BUSINESS

THREE weeks—and a day or two, before Christmas comes around. Fingers must be indeed every-thing is to be finished up in time, and with must be busy also, if new things are to be thought of for ones score or more of friends.

Six pretty gifts, all of them possessing new features are illustrated on today's page, and each may be fashioned in an hour, or less by the skillful needlewoman. The pin cushion-sachets are intended for the friends who are likely to go traveling shortly, for these handy pin cushions may be tucked into the traveling bag or trunk-tray and will leave their trace of sweetness behind among gloves, handkerchiefs and blouses when the pin-cushions are brought forth to grace dresser or bureau.

Pin cushion No. 1—that is, farthest to the left in the picture—is made of two strips of pale violet moire ribbon and a long, square-cornered pin cushion. The picture shows the shape of this cushion which may be made of ordinary muslin filled with bran. Over the cushion goes a thin wadding sprinkled thickly with sachet powder, and over this the violet ribbon. Lay the ribbon strips across each other in the form of a cross (the ribbons of course being exactly the width of the cushion). The point where the two ribbons cross each other is the bottom of the cushion, and the ribbons are brought up to cover the four sides of the cushion and fastened at the top. The rows of pins apparently hold the strips of ribbon in place, but the latter must be sewed neatly by hand in addition, also the sachet powder will escape. The top of the pin cushion is decorated with a full bow, or choux, of narrow violet printed Pampadour ribbon and a little cluster of artificial violets is tucked among the loops. If one has special artistic skill, the pattern of a violet might be outlined with pins on each panel of the cushion. Pin cushion No. 2 is made in the same way except that it is heart-shaped and covered with flowered ribbon woven in basket effect. Flowered Pampadour ribbon is pleated into a ruche for the edge, and the heart hangs on a ribbon loop. Allover embroidery over pale colored satin, with ribbon trimming to match, will make a pretty cushion of this sort. The rose cushion is dainty enough for a bridal shower. It is made of white satin with green velvet leaves and a stem of wire bound with green girls' bureaus. The tiny doggie, or pussy, is fashioned from two shaped pieces of satin, joined on the wrong side and turned over. The eyes are small buttons on the whiskers black and white pins. The satin dog or cat sits in a small fancy basket, the pin-whiskered head just showing above the edge, and a bow of ribbon decorates the basket.

The hatpin holder will please any woman for one never knows what to do with long hatpins when they are not in use. Three tall slender glasses such as the chemist will furnish, are covered with jacks of mousquetaire satin ribbon as the picture indicates, and the three glasses are mounted in the centre of three heart shaped satin cushions, intended of course for smaller pins. Full loops of ribbon and ribbon flowers encircle the base of the hatpin glasses and hide their attachment to the pin cushions. In the same picture is shown a vanity puff-bag for theatre use. The little ribbon powder

MISS JUSTINA WAYNE
Leading Lady at the Burns

"The Little Gray Lady" At The Burns

Channing Pollock, who wrote "The Little Gray Lady," which is to be presented on Tuesday night at the Burns theater, began his career in Washington, D. C., as a reporter, and later dramatic editor upon one of the morning papers of the national capital. It is a matter of record, and something that Mr. Pollock is always rather proud to make known, that he lost his position as dramatic editor owing to the protests of certain New York managers against his criticisms. Mr. Pollock refused to be reduced to a mere "business office" puffer of the drama, and was summarily "fired." He at once went to New York, where he found a very cold reception and was obliged almost to starve before securing his first opportunity to earn adequate wages. His experience in this regard almost resembles the years of hardship and poverty which Eugene Walter passed through just before his success as a playwright. Mr. Pollock succeeded in becoming press agent for Manager William A. Brady, and it was while in that position that the novel romance of the Chicago wheat market, "The Pit," occasioned so much talk. Pollock and Brady together dramatized the novel. The success of this piece, with Wilton Lackaye as the hero, Curtis Jadin, put Mr. Pollock on the road to fame and fortune, although he continued for some time to press agent work for Mr. Brady and later was general press representative and all-round business manager for the Shuberts. Although one of the best known men in theatrical circles, Mr. Pollock is no longer active in the business end of theatricals. He devotes his time now to writing plays and magazine articles and gathering in royalties. ("Mr. Pollock's subsequent plays have been "The Great Adventurer," "The Little Gray Lady," inspired by his ex-

Something About "The Little Gray Lady"

The play deals to some extent with the love of "The Little Gray Lady" for a playmate of her childhood, who, like many others maturing to manhood, becomes wayward and careless. The four principal characters are employed in the redemption agency of the treasury department at Washington. It is their duty to sort and count all the torn and defaced greenbacks. Perry Carlyle conceives the idea of tearing off a small piece of each hundred-dollar bill that comes to his desk, paying them together and making a bill of his own. When his theft is discovered by a secret service man working in the same department, Carlyle is given a hurried trip to Venezuela, but he soon returns, when he realizes the position he has left his sweetheart in. Luckily, the missing greenback turns up in time to bring the play to its proper conclusion.

NEWS NOTES—THE BURNS

Little Editha James will again appear at the Burns in a bright boy's part. Her work before insures pleasure for our patrons.

We aim to make this one of our best weeks. The play is sure to appeal to the house needs no recommendation. We shall take, as usual, the greatest care as to ventilation and temperature.

Mr. William Flik is out to beat his record.

To see the best in the best way means to go to the Burns.

The Burns players will be seen in a specially suitable play this week, opening on Tuesday night.

One matinee this week—Saturday.

Picks within the reach of all: 30c, 25c.

Come and see "The Little Gray Lady."

One of the prettiest romances of the day.

Helen Ware is not going into vaudeville at present, nor has she refused any offer of vaudeville engagements. The facts are a vaudeville tour wasn't tendered her. Her present management is considering two new plays.

In speaking of the Wm. A. Brady production of "Bought and Paid For" by George Broadhurst at the Grand Opera House, which will be the attraction at the opera house tomorrow evening for the first time only, The Evening Post of September 3, said:

"Bought and Paid For," Broadhurst's drama, which has been running for over a year in New York city, opened at the Grand Opera House yesterday. This play will be with us three weeks and it is a safe prediction that it will run to capacity houses for that space of time. One skeptic expressed some doubt as to this yesterday, declaring that a play without stars would not run that long in this city. We beg to take issue. There are four stars in this vast playing the characters of Robert Stafford, James Gilley, Virginia Blaine and Fannie Blaine, and before those three weeks are up, it will be generally admitted that this is one of the best companies that ever came to this city. The production is a perfect piece of machinery. Intelligence and understanding on the part of the actors and the producers make it that. It is rather late in the day to discuss "Bought and Paid For," even in this neck of the woods, for it is one of the most discussed plays of many a season. Financially, its success has been phenomenal, and, artistically, it has been awarded the high praise that has been deserved. "Bought and Paid For" is a much more absorbing play than "Paid in Full." It holds its audience from the opening curtain to the last. The production at the Grand Opera House will create enough discussion to keep it in the limelight for the three weeks stay.

Acton Davies, one of the New York Evening Sun, who sometimes writes with cynicism can go quite as far the other way, when a play really appeals to his fancy. This is showing the manner in which Mr. Davies treated "Bought and Paid For" upon its first production at the Wm. A. Brady playhouse. Said the noted critic:

"Bought and Paid For" scores a triumph—one of the best plays that an American dramatist has produced in years, one of the best comedies of New York life that any American playwright has shown in many a long day.

"Bought and Paid For" is a better play than "Paid in Full."

It is a delight to hear an audience roar with laughter as they did at the playhouse last night, for it was laughter with a great deal of the time had a tear in the eye.

He (Broadhurst) has created a serious human comedy and given us a serious character study.

There are many paradoxes in life and not a few of them in the great stage world. One of the most striking paradoxes occurs twice a day at the Hippodrome, New York, where the new spectacle of "Under Many Flags" is being produced. When the performance begins the curtain is rung down, and when the spectacle is over the curtain is rung up.

The twin deers, which were born in the Hippodrome, New York, about a month ago, will have a christening this week. At the present time, all the 1,200 members of the huge production of "Under Many Flags" are selecting names for the bright-eyed little twins.

George Ober, one of the few remaining actors of the days of Booth and Barrett, died November 17, at his home at Hastings-on-Hudson, aged 62. He is survived by a wife, known professionally as Adelaide Power.

"The Rose Maid" As Sweet as Its Title—Monday and Tuesday, December 9 and 10, at the Grand Opera House

A sweeter scene could hardly have been selected for an opera than that of "The Rose Maid," which opens at the Grand Opera House, Monday and Tuesday, December 9 and 10. "The Rose Maid" is another Japanese importation, and, like its sister opera, "The Spring Maid," it took New York by storm on its opening night.

The authors happily christened "The Rose Maid" in honor of Daphne, the country girl who charms the prince. The plot of the opera is a story of love and adventure, and is full of interest and excitement.

This latest importation is a most successful one, including "The Rose Maid" and "The Spring Maid." The opera is a most successful one, and is full of interest and excitement.

Vaudeville at 'The Majestic'

Empress vaudeville is the treat in store for Colorado Springs theatergoers. Final arrangements have been made, and beginning Wednesday, December 11, Sullivan & Considine vaudeville circuit, the largest in the country, affiliates with it. The Colorado Springs Majestic, which will now be known as the Empress theater, is a move that local lovers of high-class vaudeville have long hoped for. By the terms of the agreement, the Colorado Springs Empress becomes an integral part of the great Sullivan & Considine circuit, with a school of houses from coast to coast, and plays the most expensive and most profitable circuit now in vaudeville.

The entire Empress group, composed of thirteen theaters, comes to Colorado Springs and Denver, which cities are now included in the Sullivan & Considine vaudeville circuit.

The importance of this announcement may be better understood by the consideration of the importance of the Sullivan & Considine circuit. By recent arrangements with the Sullivan & Considine vaudeville circuit, a new main office is in St. Louis, Mo., and the Majestic now vaudeville circuit, which controls vaudeville theaters in and around New York, Sullivan & Considine will transfer entire those houses to a booking agency in New York. This will mean that the Majestic will be able to book the best vaudeville acts in the country.

Between these places will also be booked by Sullivan & Considine.

About a year ago Mr. Considine succeeded in establishing an agreement with Marcus Loew, which gave Sullivan & Considine a constant coast circuit. Through the recent agreement, the shows will come intact from New York in special cars. Some 30 cars are to be fitted up especially for carrying Sullivan & Considine shows out of New York as far west as the Pacific coast. Two cars will be required for each show, a combination sleeper and chair.

A very recent announcement, made in New York by Mr. Considine, that arrangements had been entered into between himself and Joseph Hart and John H. Barker for the exclusive rights of their vaudeville productions, and the recent announcement of the agreement between the Sullivan & Considine circuit and the Loew circuit, makes it possible for them to produce some of the largest and most successful vaudeville acts in the country.

These shows, which will open the Empress theater, will be a revelation to the audience. Announcement of the show will be made by Mr. Barker tomorrow in a short time.

The show of Pileen, the Pixley and the Pixley, which, according to a reliable source, is the most successful vaudeville act in the country, will be one of the attractions of the show.

New York Theatrical Letter

By EMORY CALVERT.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The Thanksgiving holiday called forth an unusually large crop of plays, this week, no less than nine virgin productions being staged for the benefit of New York's first nighters. Among these were "The Paper Chase," at Wallack's; "Mere Man" at the Harris theater; "The Road to Arcady" at the Berkeley Lyceum; "Much Ado About Nothing" at the Thirty-ninth Street; "The High Road" at the Hudson; "Mrs. Xmas Angel" at the Winter Garden; "Rolly Polly" and "Without the Law" at the Weber and Fields Music Hall; and "The Whip" at the Manhattan opera house.

"THE PAPER CHASE."
Louis N. Parker, the playwright, and Miss Simone, the actress, both scored successes on Monday night in the latter's presentation of the former's latest play, "The Paper Chase," which opened at Wallack's theater.

"The Paper Chase" is billed as "an irresponsible comedy." Its scenes and characters are drawn from the year 1780, and its lines from the wit and humor of the French Revolution.

Miss Simone plays the part of Bettina, the Baroness von Schöenberg. The action takes place in the court of Versailles during the time that the Austrian princess, then queen of France, was supposedly threatened by the Red Cap club, a band of revolutionaries headed by the Duke of Richelieu.

The Duke of Richelieu, as head of this secret organization, made out a list of 300 members which was stolen by Bettina before the play opens. The entire four acts of the comedy are, therefore, devoted to endeavoring to recover this valuable paper, hence the name "The Paper Chase."

Throughout the chase to recover the list of names is woven a love story, whose bright lines and humorous situations are based upon mistaken identity. The love passages take place between the Marquis of Belange and Bettina, whom he has met at a ball disguised in a domino. Belange is an ardent supporter of Richelieu and does not know that he has given his heart to the woman that stole the duke's papers until the third act when he raids her apartment in an effort to secure these documents. To further complicate matters the pair are discovered by the Duke of Richelieu and the other paper chasers.

The play has a pleasant ending in the fourth act when Bettina is shown at a dinner party given by the Marquis of Belange and the list of names is discovered and returned to its rightful owner.

It is true that many of the things that Mr. Parker has portrayed in his plays have never been chronicled by historians of France, but he can be forgiven his inaccuracies because of the height of his comedy success.

Besides Miss Simone, whose vivid acting lent luster to the piece, Julian Estrange as the Marquis of Belange and Edgar Kent as the Duke of Richelieu gave notable performances.

"MERE MAN."

A queer mixture of astrology and suffragism was offered by Mr. Augustus Thomas, at the Harris theater on Monday night under the title of "Mere Man." Mr. Thomas has labeled his new play "a comedy" and has devoted himself so assiduously to developing humor in his lines, that he seems to have quite forgotten the plot, or at any rate, to have so complicated that very necessary adjunct to either comedy or tragedy that Mr. Average Playgoer found it rather difficult to follow the thread of the story.

The astrologer, it might be mentioned is Esther Lennard, a very beautiful young lady. Beyond that it seems unsafe to venture.

In general it seems to have been Mr. Thomas' aim to show that mere man is some thousand times or so more complicated with regard to his mental makeup than is an enigmatic woman. On the whole, however, it may be said that Mr. Thomas has confused his issues and might as well have done nothing at all.

Of the acting praise is justified. Here Mr. Thomas, who has personally rehearsed the players, has done much more than in the play itself. He has taken actors and actresses, who, with the exception of Miss Chrystal Hume, were practically unknown and has drilled them so well that they are almost a constant pleasure.

Among these DeWitt C. Jennings stands with special force for a clear cut and forceful, yet well graduated bit of work as an unsuccessful suitor for the hand of the follower of the stars.

As for Miss Hume, her sweetness, sincerity and appealing art give to the astrologer the sympathy which is not often granted to a follower of her practices in real life.

"THE ROAD TO ARCADY."

The second play produced by the National Federation of Theater clubs had its premier at the Berkeley Lyceum on Monday night. It was called "The Road to Arcady" and was written by Edith Sessions Tupper.

The story of the play deals with an ambitious mother who is anxious to marry her daughter to a rich man. Her daughter objects strenuously having already given her love to a college mate of her younger brother.

The brother on hearing of his mother's intrigues, arranges for the elopement of his sister with his college friend. He calls his friend on the wire and arranges for the runaway match.

In the meantime, however, the mother, in order to gain her end, has willfully told her daughter a lie. She says that the father has been accused of wrongfully taking funds from the firm he is working for and makes it evident that he cannot be saved other than through the daughter's marriage to her mother's choice. The daughter believes this story and, knowing that she can save her father, eventually marries the man whom she hates.

In the cast were Frank Weston, as Oliver Gerard, the father; Albert Latscha, as Robert, his son; Wilson Humme, as Wilson Churchill, the hateful rich man; Lilly Cahill, the charming daughter; Ida Waterman, as Mary Hamilton, who was the mother of John Hamilton, the college friend, acted by Franklin Ritchie and Leona Ball was an exceedingly pretty French maid of the Gerard household.

"MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING."

The revival of Shakespeare, which seems to have swept over the metropolis of late was added to on Monday night by Miss Annie Russell's production of "Much Ado About Nothing" at the Thirty-ninth Street theater.

Miss Russell seems to have an abiding faith in the efficacy of Shakespeare to compete with the products of our latest Broadway playwrights, and so far her successes have given credit to her perspicacity.

As Miss Russell has not interpolated new lines in the somewhat tiresome version of "Much Ado About Nothing" so familiar to playgoers there is little necessity for reviewing the play at length. We proceed, therefore, to a survey of the actors.

Miss Russell acted the part of Beatrice and a bright and sparkling Beatrice she made. Frank Reicher played the part of Benedick, the cousin of Beatrice, and George Giddens had the role of Dogberry. Each of these three principals gave a brilliant performance. Though it might be said of Miss Russell that her comedy could have been a little less forced. In her defense of her maligned cousin and in the subsequent love scene, with Benedick she could hardly have been better, however.

From the standpoint of the casual Shakespearean playgoer, the performances of Frank Reicher and George Giddens, were perfect. The rest of the cast appeared to be well drilled and thoroughly conversant with Shakespearean interpretation according to the edicts of the principals.

"THE HIGH ROAD."

Edward Sheldon's latest play "The High Road," which was produced at the Hudson theater on Tuesday night, proved to be an altogether remarkable performance. The story, which is divided into five parts, is woven about the adventures of a country girl, Mary Page. The first act opens upon the New England farm of old Silas Page, a hard fisted product of a stony soil. Old Page has browbeaten his daughter into complete submission, but has overlooked the fact that the rigid regime he has laid down for her is susceptible to love.

In his home is a young artist, Allen Wilson, who spends his odd moments inculcating in Mary Page a love of the beautiful and incidentally of himself. In this act another character is also introduced, Winfield Barnes, a young country lawyer, whom old Silas Page has cheated out of money justly due him and who towards the close of the first period sets off from New England to seek his fortune. Mary Page and Allen Wilson also leave the farm, clandestinely.

The succeeding acts cover three years of the life of Allen Wilson and Mary Page. They show her, after months spent in Paris and Rome, installed in a Riverside Drive apartment with the artist. Here another character is introduced, John Stephen Maddock, prospective capitalist and owner of a newspaper, and friend of Allen Wilson.

She becomes interested in a strike of laundry workers, leaves Wilson and takes up the cause of these downtrodden women. Her espousal of the oppressed takes her to the capital of the state, where she favors a woman's factory bill law and visits the governor, whose aid has meant much to her and the other workers in the field. The governor she finds is no other than the Winfield Barnes whom she knew at her father's home. In a well-devised love scene, the lawyer whom her father defrauded in his youth, confesses his love for the former country girl and is accepted.

By the standards of honesty it now devolves upon her to confess that she has lived with Allen Wilson as his wife for three years without the formality of a wedding ring. Barnes is stunned at her revelation but at last forgives her and her indiscretion.

Beyond this point, which would make an obvious and happy ending, the playwright carries the story to the successful political career of the governor. Now he is a presidential candidate with good chances of election. Maddock, however, grown to financial influence and owner of a string of newspapers opposes his election, and knowing the past story of the candidate's wife, threatens to expose her unless she consents her husband to compromise on a labor plank in his party platform.

Mary sends for Maddock, whom she seeks to placate by an appeal to his generosity. This failing, she threatens to tell the story to the Associated Press and to allow the men and women of the country to judge of her conduct for themselves. Maddock feels himself beaten and notifies his associates not to make the exposure. The termination is especially lame and labored, and the play would have been better had it been ended at some earlier stage of the story.

The acting, however, was exceptionally fine. Frederick Perry, playing the part of Winfield Barnes, "Charles Waldron taking the role of Allen Wilson; Arthur Byron, as John Stephen Maddock, and Mrs. Fiske, as Mary Page all gave excellent performances.

"MRS. XMAS ANGEL."

A delightful little Christmas play had its premiere at the Harris theater on Tuesday afternoon. The name of this Yuletide confection was appropriately "Mrs. Xmas Angel."

Laurence Lyre, the playwright, has built a story of the play about the longing of an invalid child for a real Christmas. The scenes are cast in an east side tenement. The son of Mrs. Henrietta Hennaberry, now deceased, has married an actress, much to his mother's chagrin. The actress widow of Frank is living in a tenement, eking out an existence by sewing. Her child is ill and about to submit to a surgical operation, when the grandfather comes secretly on a mission of charity and the grandmother follows.

The best scene of the play involves the meeting of the grandmother and the child to whom the old lady, of course, succumbs. The child has been longing for a real Christmas, and mistakes the grandmother for an angel. The idea is charmingly handled and the role of the child is delightfully done by Edwina Mae Wilson.

Old Jacob Hennaberry was played by Albert Reed and Henrietta Hennaberry by Florine Arnold.

Both of these artists distinguished themselves by their performances, as did the cast in general.

"Mrs. Xmas Angel" is now in Philadelphia.

"BROADWAY TO PARIS."

A new winter garden review entitled "Broadway to Paris," made its appearance on Wednesday night. It immediately won fame as the most extravagant of the late productions in that playhouse.

The first number revealed Gertrude Hoffman, as a vampire in the Danco Dracula with Less Chaplin. Later in the evening, she appeared in "The Garden of Girls," supported by a ballet by nymphs. This Garden of Girls was one of the most attractive features of a long program of specialties.

There was not as much of a continuous story in the new review as there is in the romantic plots which are hatched in the Hippodrome spectacles. It was simply one episode after another, all the things happening in or near Paris and largely at the Tivoli Olympia.

Among the profusion of features Miss Bordonni struck a moderate and quite pleasing note in a little French song which she followed with her first effort in English. He it recorded that the English was perfectly good, too.

Other leading contributors to the entertainment in its various parts were Marion Sunshine, Sam Mann and Louise Dressler. The books and lyrics were by George Brownson Howard and Harold Atteridge. The music was by Max Hoffman and Anatol Friedland.

WEBER AND FIELDS' NEW OPENING.

Those ancient entertainers, Joe Weber and Lew Fields, made their appearance this year in "Rolly Polly" and "Without the Law," both burlesques. These laughter provoking entertainments were staged at the new Webster & Fields Music Hall and had their premiere on Thursday night.

In "Rolly Polly" the three scenes of which are laid at the spring of Raatendad, the characters, all precariously related to one another, were for themselves a thread of plot and used it to string specialties on.

Nora Bayes and Jack Norworth were especially prominent in "Rolly Polly." As a college bred son of an ex-mine owner, Jack Norworth looked his naivest, while Nora Bayes, constantly changing from one costume creation to another, added greatly to the fun. At the end of the program came a capital burlesque of "Within the Law," which gave Marie Dressler an opportunity to take off Jane Cowl as Merry Urner, "a victim of honesty." Handcuffed to Inspector Bunk (Joe Weber) she dashed on the stage with the inspector coming through the air after her.

The new home of Weber & Fields is done in white and red and is spacious enough, especially between seats, to be comfortable. It is illuminated by means of golden bowls of lights hanging from the ceiling.

"THE WHIP."

"The Whip," a Drury Lane melodrama of English sporting life, was produced on Friday evening at the Manhattan Opera house. This play had a record-breaking run in London because of the thrilling situations it presents. The melodrama has an automobile smash-up, a train wreck and a real horse race right on the stage.

"The Whip" is the name of a race horse, bred by the Marquis of Boverly, a gallant old sportsman who has sought to hide the fitness of his horse so that no wagers could be made upon it. The marquis' affection is divided between the horse and his granddaughter, Lady Diana Sartoris. As the horse is being trained for the race, Earl Hubert, of Brancourt, appears in the guise of an artist. He falls in love with Lady Diana and wishes to break away from Mrs. D'Aquila, a designing woman with a past. At this juncture the earl drives an automobile wrecklessly on the stage and wrecks it. He is wounded and when he recovers he forgets what happened for a few weeks before the accident.

As Lady Diana nurses the earl, Captain Sartoris, the villain, by fraud succeeds in having records entered on the pastor's books of the marriage of Mrs. D'Aquila and Earl Hubert. That spoils temporarily the earl's romance with Lady Diana and causes him to waste the greater part of his fortune. Lady Diana, meeting him by accident, tells him of her belief in him and gives him a "rip on the nose." When Captain Sartoris learns of that he plans to wreck the earl's carrying the horse to the race track.

The earl is smashed and scores of persons hurt, but the horse escapes injury. Then Sartoris obtains a warrant for the arrest of the jockey, who has threatened to kill him. He serves it a moment before the race is to begin. A moment before the race is to begin the jockey from the sheriff's hands and toss him on "The Whip." The horse races to the post at the last second and, of course, wins.

The story is told in four acts and 13 scenes, every one of brilliant acting and picturesque effect.

Otis Harlan, who is making people laugh by his delineation of the detective in Henry W. Savage's "Little Boy Blue," is one of the richest actors in the profession. When Harlan began his professional career—it was with the late Charles H. Hoyt—he signed a contract for three years at a figure that was ridiculously small. It was not long, however, until the comedian was getting "real" money for acting. Then he began investing in theatrical properties. One of his earliest ventures was in a stock company in Richmond, Va., with Jake Wells, the southern theatrical magnate. He then became interested with Wells in several theaters in the south, eventually forming a circuit which extended until it included theaters in every large town south of the Mason and Dixon line. He has also been interested in many traveling organizations, among them being "Babe in Toyland," "Nancy Brown," "Wonderland" and several others of lesser importance.

William Faversham in his production of "Julius Caesar" has been booked for a southern tour in the spring.

"Uncle Josh Perkins"

NEXT SATURDAY, MATINEE AND NIGHT

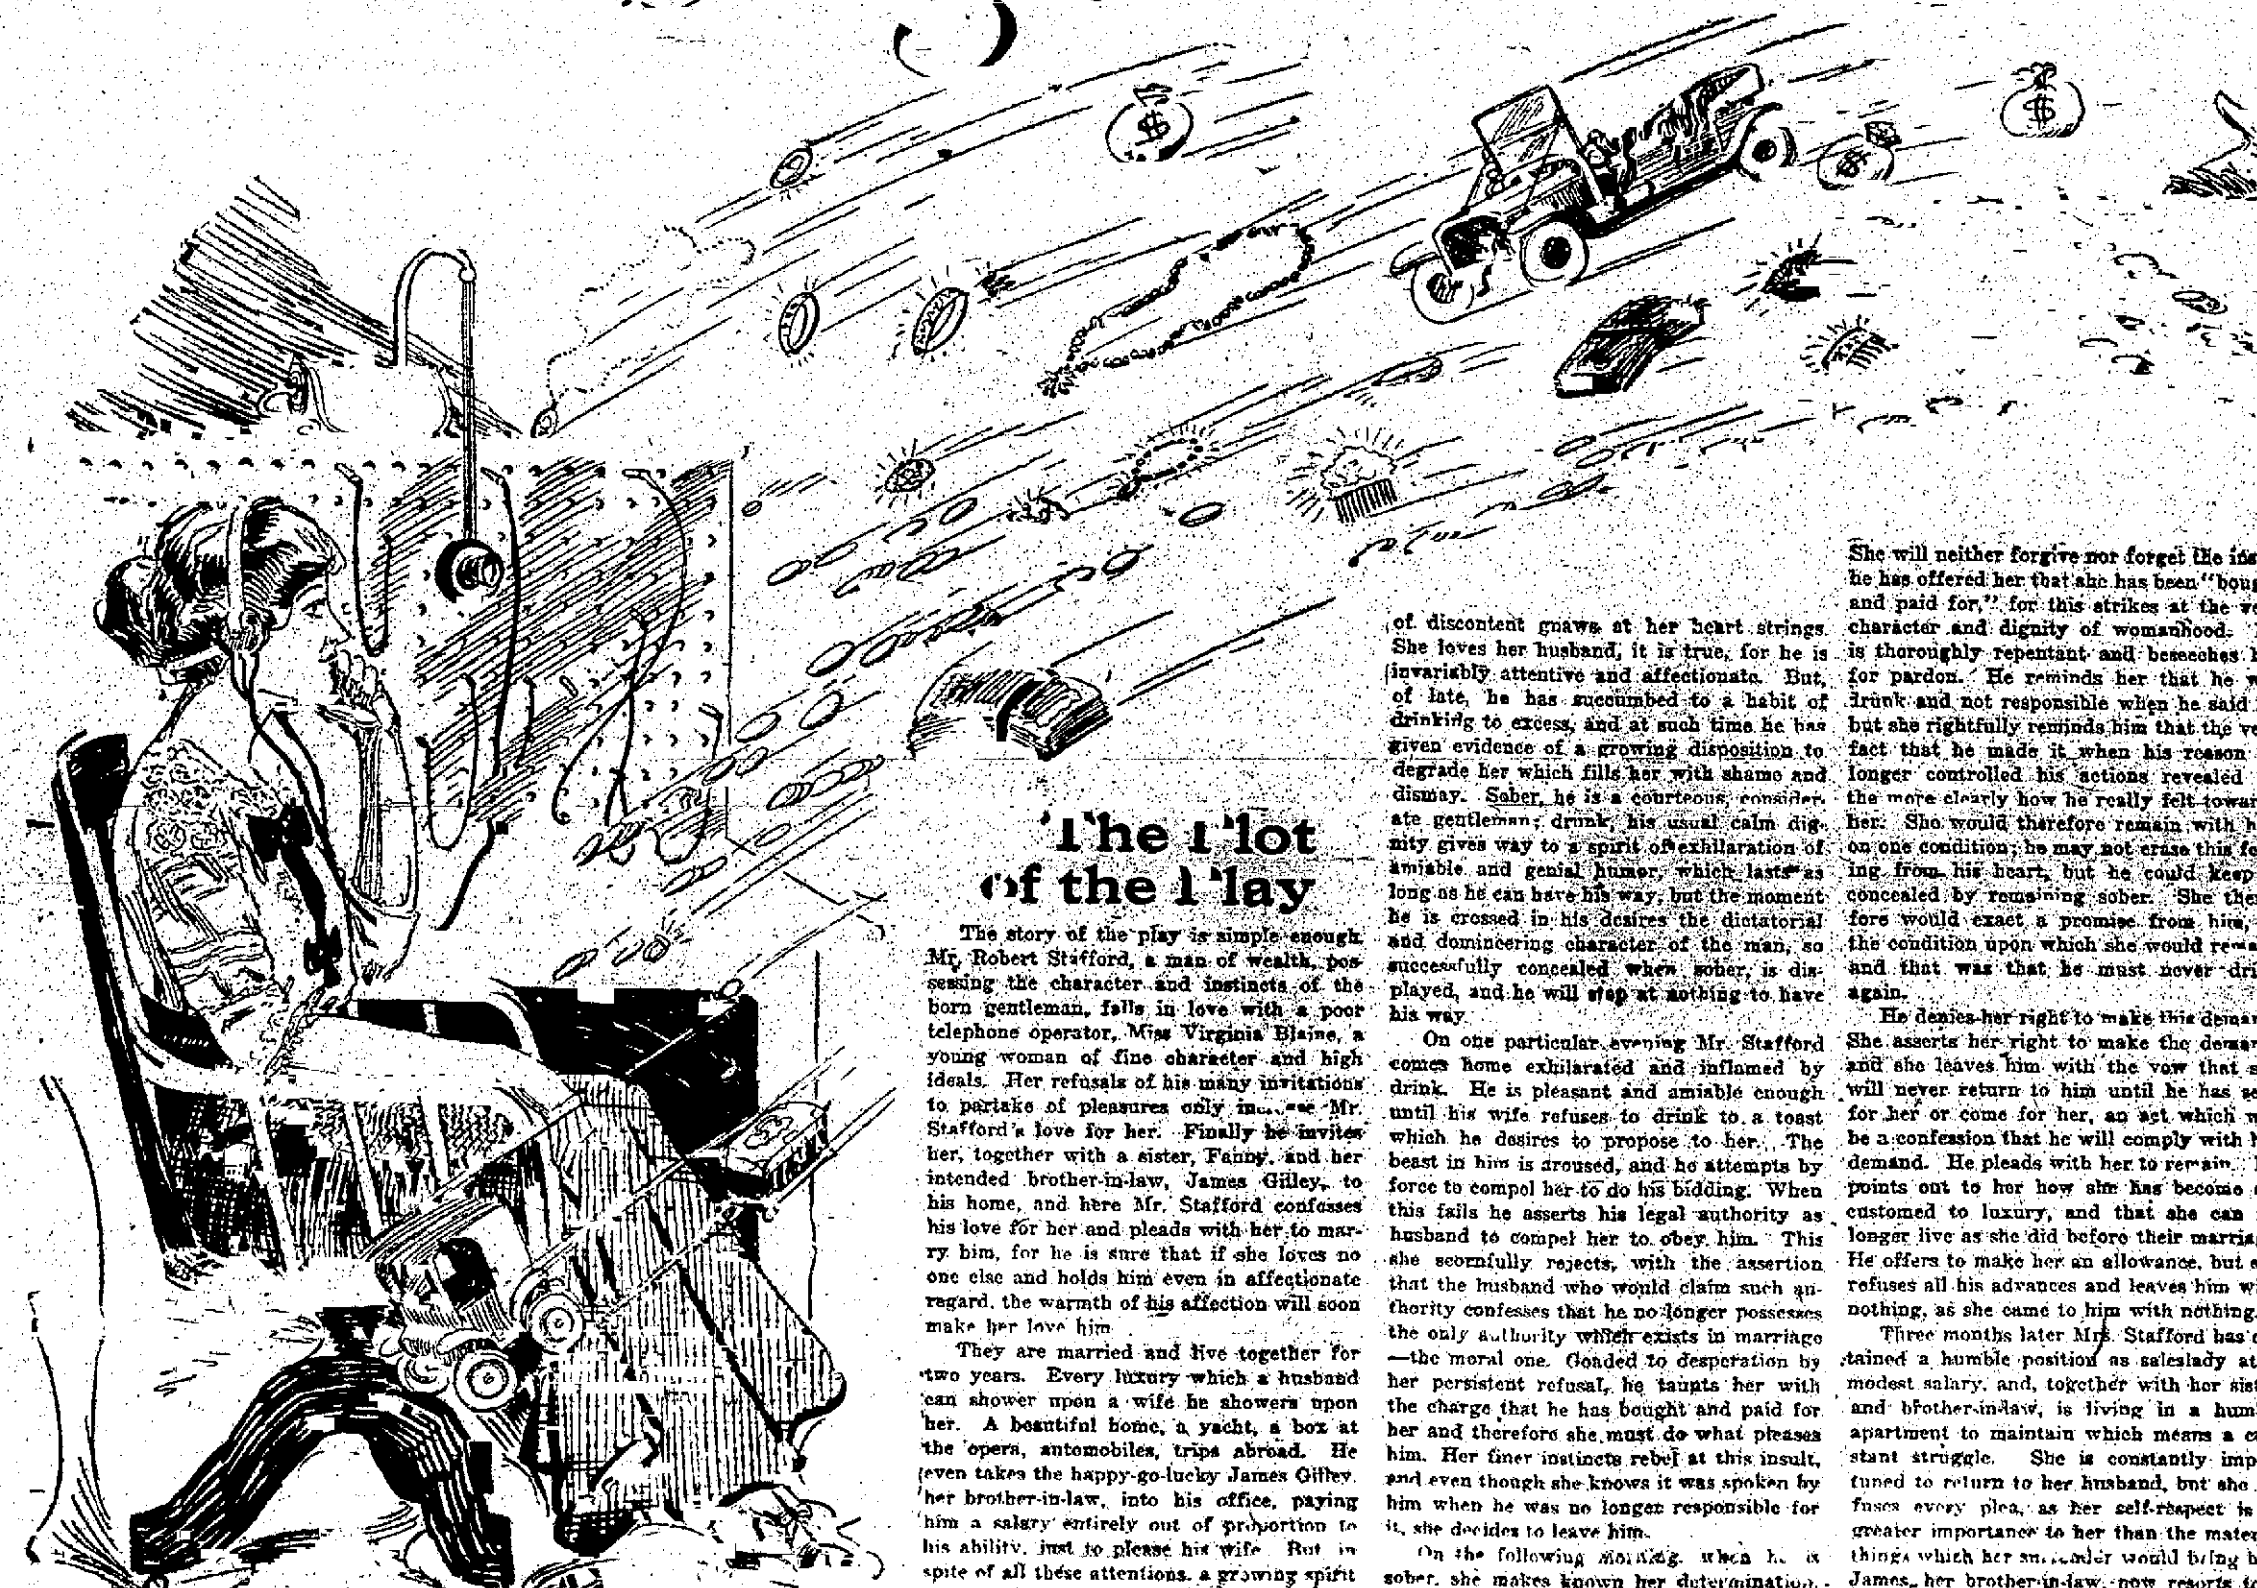

"Uncle Josh Perkins," described as a rural comedy drama in four acts, with locales in New York and Vermont, is booked for a return engagement at the Grand Opera house, next Saturday, matinee and night.

This is a play which has outlived in popularity all other offerings of its kind. With its attractive romance, clever drama, wholesome comedy and interesting stage, "Uncle Josh Perkins" has come to be recognized as the exponent of New England. The title role is probably the best known of its type in the American theater of today. No more lovable character than Uncle Josh has been visualized, and even though he has emanated from the playwright's creative ability, the story in which Uncle Josh is the central figure re-creates with human interest and good philosophy. In addition to the attractiveness of "Uncle Josh Perkins" as a play, and to the fact that this season the entire company comprises a list of capable actors, a number of entertaining new specialties are introduced to enhance an already popular successful offering. No play of this decade has attained the popularity enjoyed by "Uncle Josh Perkins" for the simple reason that no other theatrical offering has been able to command the successful attention of the patrons year after year as does this annually welcome rural comedy. Each season some new feature has been introduced to enhance the value of its wholesome New England flavor, and while specialties are carefully introduced without disturbing the action of the play, the story of Uncle Josh, and how he permeates the development of the play with firm but lovable character, is sufficiently interesting to hold the attention of young and old.

'The Plot of the Play'

The story of the play is simple enough. Mr. Robert Stafford, a man of wealth, possessing the character and instincts of the born gentleman, falls in love with a poor telephone operator, Miss Virginia Elaine, a young woman of fine character and high ideals. Her refusal of his many invitations to partake of pleasures only increases Mr. Stafford's love for her. Finally he invites her, together with a sister, Fanny, and her intended brother-in-law, James Gilley, to his home, and here Mr. Stafford confesses his love for her and pleads with her to marry him, for he is sure that if she loves no one else and holds him even in affectionate regard, the warmth of his affection will soon make her love him.

They are married and live together for two years. Every luxury which a husband can shower upon a wife he showers upon her. A beautiful home, a yacht, a box at the opera, automobiles, trips abroad. He even takes the happy-go-lucky James Gilley, her brother-in-law, into his office, paying him a salary entirely out of proportion to his ability, just to please his wife. But in spite of all these attentions, a growing spirit of discontent gnaws at her heart strings. She loves her husband, it is true, for he is invariably attentive and affectionate. But, of late, he has succumbed to a habit of drinking to excess, and at such times he has given evidence of a growing disposition to degrade her which fills her with shame and dismay. Sober, he is a courteous, considerate gentleman; drunk, his usual calm dignity gives way to a spirit of exultation of amiable and genial humor, which lasts as long as he can have his way, but the moment he is crossed in his desires the dictatorial and domineering character of the man, so successfully concealed when sober, is displayed, and he will step at nothing to have his way.

On one particular evening Mr. Stafford comes home exhilarated and inflamed by drink. He is pleasant and amiable enough until his wife refuses to drink to a toast which he desires to propose to her. The beast in him is aroused, and he attempts by force to compel her to do his bidding. When this fails he asserts his legal authority as husband to compel her to obey him. This she scornfully rejects, with the assertion that the husband who would claim such authority confesses that he no longer possesses the only authority which exists in marriage—the moral one. Goaded to desperation by her persistent refusal, he taunts her with the charge that he has bought and paid for her and therefore she must do what pleases him. Her finer instincts rebel at this insult, and even though she knows it was spoken by him when he was no longer responsible for it, she decides to leave him.

On the following morning, when he is sober, she makes known her determination. She will neither forgive nor forget the insult he has offered her that she has been "bought and paid for," for this strikes at the very character and dignity of womanhood. He is thoroughly repentant and beseeches her for pardon. He reminds her that he was drunk and not responsible when he said it, but she rightfully reminds him that the very fact that he made it when his reason no longer controlled his actions revealed all the more clearly how he really felt towards her. She would therefore remain with him on one condition; he may not erase this feeling from his heart, but he could keep it concealed by remaining sober. She therefore would exact a promise from him, as the condition upon which she would remain, and that was that he must never drink again.

He denies her right to make this demand. She asserts her right to make the demand, and she leaves him with the vow that she will never return to him until he has sent for her or come for her, an act which will be a confession that he will comply with her demand. He pleads with her to remain. He points out to her how she has become accustomed to luxury, and that she can no longer live as she did before their marriage. He offers to make her an allowance, but she refuses all his advances and leaves him with nothing, as she came to him with nothing.

Three months later Mrs. Stafford has obtained a humble position as saleslady at a modest salary, and together with her sister and brother-in-law, is living in a humble apartment to maintain which means a constant struggle. She is constantly importuned to return to her husband, but she refuses every plea, as her self-respect is of greater importance to her than the material things which her ampler would bring her. James, her brother-in-law, now resorts to a little ruse to bring the husband and wife together. He sends for Mr. Stafford, and leaves him under the impression that Mrs. Stafford has a lot for him. In the meantime Mrs. Stafford comes from her day's toil thoroughly exhausted by the monotonous and confining labor. Just as she goes to her own room to change her clothes and rest, Mr. Stafford enters, and when she returns to the living-room again and sees her husband there, waiting and with outstretched arms to receive her, she falls into his arms. She again professes her deep love for him, especially because of the sacrifice he has made in coming to her unbidden, and he immediately perceiving the ruse that has been practiced upon them both, though he does not reveal his discovery, tells her how he has fought the battle and how she had won, for he now could promise her that he will never drink again, that he will make himself worthy of her. She, too, discovers the deception, which has been practiced to bring them together, but the plea of her husband is so earnest, and his admission that as she did not send for him she had therefore really won the victory, is so convincing, that she forgets and forgives him and then returns to him again, and renders complete and permanent the happiness that should exist between husband and wife.

Among these were "The Paper Chase" at Wallack's; "Mrs. Xmas" at the Harris theater; "The Road to Arcady" at the Berkeley Lyceum; "Much Ado About Nothing" at the Thirtieth Street; "The High Road" at the Hudson; "Mrs. Xmas Angel" at the Winter Garden; "Rolly Polly" at the Winter Garden; "The Law" at the Weber and Fields Music Hall; and "The Whip" at the Manhattan opera house.

"THE PAPER CHASE."
Louis N. Parker, the playwright, and Mme. Simone, the actress, both scored successes on Monday night in the latter's presentation of the former's latest play, "The Paper Chase," which opened at Wallack's theater.

"The Paper Chase" is billed as "an irresponsible comedy." Its scenes and characters are drawn from the year 1780, and its lines from the wit and humor storehouse of Louis N. Parker, 1912.

Mme. Simone plays the part of Bettina, the Baroness von Schoenberg. The action takes place in the court of Versailles during the time that the Austrian princess, then queen of France, was supposedly threatened by the Red Cap club, a band of revolutionaries headed by the Duke of Richelieu.

The Duke of Richelieu, as head of this secret organization, made out a list of its members which was stolen by Bettina before the play opens. The entire four acts of the comedy are, therefore, devoted to endeavoring to recover

this valuable paper, hence the name "The Paper Chase."
Throughout the chase to recover the list of names is woven a love story, whose bright lines and humorous situations are based upon mistaken identity. The love passages take place between the Marquis of Belange and Bettina, whom he has met at a ball disguised in a domino. Belange is an ardent supporter of Richelieu and does not know that he has given his heart to the woman that stole the duke's papers until the third act when he reads her apartment in an effort to secure these documents. To further complicate matters the pair are discovered by the Duke of Richelieu and the other paper chasers.

The play has a pleasant ending in the fourth act when Bettina is shown at a dinner party given by the Marquis of Belange and the list of names is discovered and returned to its rightful owner.

It is true that many of the things that Mr. Parker has portrayed in his play have never been chronicled by his forlans of France, but he can be forgiven his inaccuracies because of the light of his comedy success.

Besides Mme. Simone, whose vivid acting lent luster to the piece, Julian (Estrange as the Marquis of Belange and Edgar Kent as the Duke of Richelieu, gave notable performances.

"MERE MAN."
A queer mixture of astrology and suffragism was offered by Mr. Augustus Thomas, at the Harris theater on Monday night under the title of "Mere Man." Mr. Thomas has leveled his new play "a comedy" and has devoted himself so assiduously to developing humor in his lines, that he seems to have quite forgotten the plot or at any rate, to have so complicated that very necessary adjunct to either comedy or tragedy that Mr. Augustus Thomas found it rather difficult to follow the thread of the story.

The astrologer, it might be mentioned is Esther Lennard, a very beautiful young lady. Beyond that it seems unsafe to venture.

In regard to it seems to have been Mr. Thomas' aim to show that men are some thousand times or so, more complicated with regard to their mental makeup than is enthralling woman. On the whole, however, it may be said that Mr. Thomas has confused his issues and might as well have done nothing at all.

Of the acting praise is justified. Harry Mr. Thomas, who has personally rehearsed the players, has done much more than in the play itself. He has taken actors and actresses, who, with the exception of Miss Christy Hume, were practically unknown and has drilled them so well that they are almost a constant pleasure.

Among these DeWitt C. Jennings stands with special force for a clear cut and powerful yet well studied bit of work as an unsuccessful author for the hand of the follower of the stars.

As for Miss Hume, her sweetness, sincerity and appealing art give to the astrologer the sympathy which is not often granted to a follower of her practices in real life.

"THE ROAD TO ARCADY."
The second play produced by the National Federation of Theater clubs had its premier at the Berkeley Lyceum on Monday night. It was called "The Road to Arcady" and was written by Edith Kensington Tupper.

The story of the play deals with an ambitious mother who is anxious to marry her daughter to a rich man. Her daughter objects strenuously having already given her love to a college mate of her younger brother.

The brother on hearing of his mother's intrigue arranges for the elopement of his sister with his college friend. He calls his friend on the wire and arranges for the runaway match.

In the meantime, however, the mother, in order to gain her end, has willfully told her daughter a lie. She says that the father has been accused of wrongfully taking funds from the firm he is working for and makes it evident that he cannot be saved other than through the daughter's marriage to her mother's choice. The daughter believes this story and, knowing that she can save her father, eventually marries the man whom she hates.

In the cast were Frank Weston, as Oliver Gerard, the father; Albert Latscha, as Robert, his son; Wilton Hume, as Wilson Churchill, the hateful rich man; Lilly Cahill, the charming daughter; Ida Watkinson, as Mary Hamilton, who was the mother of John Hamilton, the college friend, acted by Franklin Ritchie, and Leona Bell was an exceedingly petite French maid of the Gerard household.

"MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING."

The revival of Shakespeare, which seems to have swept over the metropolis of late, was added to on Monday night by Miss Annie Russell's production of "Much Ado About Nothing" at the Thirtieth Street theater.

Miss Russell seems to have an abiding faith in the efficacy of Shakespeare to compete with the products of our latest Broadway playwrights, and so far her successes have given credit to her persistency.

As Miss Russell has not interpolated new lines in the somewhat time-worn version of "Much Ado About Nothing" so familiar to players there is little necessity for reviewing the play at length. We proceed, therefore, to a survey of the actors.

Miss Russell edited the part of Beatrice and a bright and sparkling Beatrice she made. Frank Reicher played the part of Benedick, the cousin of Beatrice, and George Giddens had the role of Don Pedro. Each of these three principals gave a brilliant performance, though it might be said of Miss Russell that her acting could have been a little less forced. In her defense of her mellancholic cousin and in the subsequent love scenes, with Benedick she could hardly have been better, however.

From the standpoint of the usual Shakespearean playgoer, the performances of Frank Reicher and George Giddens were perfect. The rest of the cast appeared to be well drilled and thoroughly conversant with Shakespeare. Interpretation according to the edicts of the principals.

"THE HIGH ROAD."

Edward Sheldon's latest play "The High Road," which was produced at the Hudson theater on Tuesday night, proved to be an altogether remarkable performance. The story, which is divided into five parts, is woven about the adventures of a country girl, Mary Page. The first act opens upon the New England farm of old Silas Page, a hard-fisted product of a stony soil. Old Page has browbeaten his daughter into complete submission, but has overlooked the fact that the rigid regime he has laid down for her is susceptible to love.

In his home is a young artist, Allen Wilson, who spends his odd moments of his day in writing plays. He is a lover of the beautiful and incidentally of himself. In this act another character is also introduced, Winfield Barnes, a young country lawyer, whom old Silas Page has cheated out of money justly due him and who towards the close of the first period sets out from New England to seek his fortune. Mary Page and Allen Wilson also leave the farm clandestinely.

The succeeding acts cover three years of the life of Allen Wilson and Mary Page. They show her, after months spent in Paris and Rome, installed in a Riverside Drive apartment with the artist. Here another character is introduced, John Stephen Maddock, prospective capitalist and owner of a newspaper, and friend of Allen Wilson.

She becomes interested in a strike of laundry workers, leaves Wilson and takes up the cause of these down-trodden women. Her espousal of the oppressed takes her to the capital of the state, where she favors a woman's factory bill and visits the governor, whose aid has meant much to her and the other workers in the field. The governor also finds in no other than the Winfield Barnes whom she knew at her father's home. In a well-devised love scene, the lawyer whom her father defrauded in his youth, confesses his love for the former country girl and is accepted.

By the standards of honesty it now devolves upon her to confess that she has lived with Allen Wilson as his wife for three years without the formality of a wedding ring. Barnes is stunned at her revelation but at last forgives her her indiscretion.

Beyond this point, which would make an obvious and happy ending, the playwright carries the story to the successful political career of the governor. Now he is a presidential candidate with good chances of election. Influence, however, grown to financial independence, and of a kind of newspaper, opposes his election, knowing the past story of the candidate's wife, threatens to expose her unless she compels her husband to compromise on a labor plank in his party platform.

Mary sends for Maddock, whom she seems to placate by an appeal to his generosity. This failing, she threatens to give the story to the Associated Press and to allow the men and women of the country to judge of her conduct for themselves. Maddock feels himself beaten and notifies his associates not to make the exposure. The termination is especially lame and labored, and the play would have been better had it been ended at some earlier stage of the story.

The acting, however, was exceptionally fine. Frederick Perry, playing the part of Winfield Barnes, Charles Waldron taking the role of Allen Wilson; Arthur Byron, as John Stephen Maddock and Mrs. Fiske, as Mary Page all gave excellent performances.

"MRS. XMAS ANGEL."

A delightful little Christmas play had its premiere at the Harris theater on Tuesday afternoon. The terms of this Yuletide confection was appropriately "Mrs. Xmas Angel."

Laurence Hyde, the playwright, has built a story of the play about the longing of an invalid child for a real Christmas. The scenes are cast in an east side tenement. The son of Mrs. Henrietta Hennabery, now deceased, has married an actress, much to his mother's chagrin. The actress widow of Frank is living in a tenement, eking out an existence by sewing. Her child is ill and about to submit to a surgical operation, when the grandmother comes suddenly on a mission of charity and the grandmother follows.

The best scene of the play involves the meeting of the grandmother and the child to whom the old lady, of course, succumbs. The child has been longing for a real Christmas, and mistakes the grandmother for an angel. The idea is charmingly handled and the role of the child is delightfully done by Edwina Wilson.

Old Jacob Hennabery was played by Albert Reed and Henrietta Hennabery by played by Florine Arnold.

Both of these artists distinguished themselves by their performances, as did the cast in general.

"BROADWAY TO PARIS."

A new winter garden review entitled "Broadway to Paris" made its appearance on Wednesday night. It immediately won fame as the most extravagant of the late productions in that playhouse.

The first number revealed Gertrude Hoffman, as a vampire in the Dance Dragon with Less Chapin. Later in the evening, she appeared in "The Garden of Girs," supported by a ballet by nymphs. This Garden of Girs was one of the most attractive features of a long program of specialties.

There was not as much of a continuous story in the new review as there is in the romantic plots which are hatched in the Hippodrome specialties. It was simply one "act" after another, all the while happening in or near Paris and is only at the theater Olympia.

Among the profusion of features, Mlle. Baront struck a moderate and quite pleasing note in a little French song which she followed with her first effort in English. As it recorded that the singer was perfectly good, too. "Other leading contributors to the entertainment in its various parts were Marion Sunshine, Sam Mann and Louise Dressler. The books and lyrics were by George Brownson Howard and Harold Altfield. The music was by Max Hoffman and Anatol Friedland.

WEBER AND FIELDS' NEW OPENING.

Those ancient entertainers, Joe Weber and Law Fields, made their appearance this year in "Rolly Polly" and "Without the Law," both burlesques. Their laughter provoking entertainments were staged at the new Weber & Fields Music hall and had their premiere on Thursday night.

In "Rolly Polly" it's three scenes of which are laid at the spring of Raatendad, the characters, all precariously related to one another, vove for themselves a thread of plot and used it to trip up specialists.

Nora Bayes and Jack Norworth were especially prominent in "Rolly Polly." As a college bred son of an ex-mine owner, Jack Norworth looked his native, while Nora Bayes, constantly changing from one costume creation to another, added greatly to the fun.

At the end of the program came a capital burlesque of "Within the Law," which gave Marie Dressler an opportunity to take off Jane Cowd as Mary Usher, "a victim of honesty." Handcuffed to Inspector Bunk (Joe Weber) she dashed on the stage with the inspector coming through the air after her.

The new home of Weber & Fields is done in white and red and is especially enough, especially between seats, to be comfortable. It is illuminated by means of golden bowls of lights hanging from the ceiling.

"THE WHIP."

"The Whip," a Drury Lane melodrama of English sporting life, was produced on Friday evening at the Manhattan Opera house. This play had a record-breaking run in London because of the thrilling situations it presents. The melodrama has an automobile smash-up, a train wreck and a real horse race right on the stage.

"The Whip" is the name of a race horse, bred by the Marquis of Roverly, a gallant old sportsman who has sought to hide the fitness of his horse so that no wagers could be made upon it. The marquis' affection is divided between the horse and his granddaughter, Lady Diana Sartoris. As the horse is being trained for the race Earl Hubert, of Brancaster, appears in the guise of an artist. He falls in love with Lady Diana and wishes to break away from Mrs. Maquill, a designing woman with a past. As this situation the earl drives an automobile recklessly on the stage and wrecks it. He is wounded and when he recovers he forgets what happened for a few weeks before the accident.

As Lady Diana, nurses the earl, Captain Sartoris, the villain, by fraud succeeds in having records entered on the race's books of the marriage of Mrs. Maquill and Earl Hubert. That spoils temporarily the earl's romance with Lady Diana and causes him to waste the greater part of his fortune. Lady Diana, meeting him by accident, tells him of her belief in him and gives him a "tip on the Whip." When Captain Sartoris learns that he plans to wreck the earl, carrying the horse to the race track.

The ear is smashed and scores of persons hurt, but the horse escapes injury. Then Sartoris obtains a warrant for the arrest of the jockey, who has threatened to kill him. He serves it a moment before the race is to begin.

At the moment before the race is to begin, the play is to be a battle between the earl and Sartoris. Sartoris has won the race and toss him on "The Whip." The horse gets to the post at the last second and, of course, wins.

The story is told in four acts and 13 scenes, every one of brilliant coloring and picturesque effect.

Otis Harlan, who is making people laugh by his delineation of the detective in Henry W. Savages' "Little Boy Blue," is one of the richest actors in the profession. When Harlan began his professional career—it was with the late Charles H. Hoyt—he signed a contract for three years at a figure that was ridiculously small. It was not long, however, until the comedian was getting "real" money for acting. Then he began investing in theatrical properties. One of his earliest ventures was in a stock company in Richmond, Va., with Jake Wells, the southern theatrical magnate. He then became interested with Wells in several theaters in the south, eventually forming a circuit which extended until it includes theaters in every large town south of the Mason and Dixon line. He has also been interested in many traveling organizations, among them being "Babes in Toyland," "Monkey Brown," "Wonderland" and several others of lesser importance.

William Faversham, in his production of "Julius Caesar," has been booked for a southern tour in the spring.

"Uncle Josh Perkins"

NEXT SATURDAY, MATINEE AND NIGHT

"Uncle Josh Perkins," described as a rural comedy drama in four acts, with locales in New York and Vermont, is booked for a return engagement at the Grand Opera house, next Saturday, matinee and night.

This is a play, which has outlived in popularity all other offerings of its kind. With its attractive romance, clever drama, wholesome comedy and interesting story, "Uncle Josh Perkins" has come to be recognized as the exponent of New England. The title role is probably the best known of its type in the American theater of today. No more lovable character than Uncle Josh has been visualized, and even though he has emanated from the playwright's creative ability, the story in which Uncle Josh is the central figure teems with human interest and good philosophy. In addition to the attractiveness of "Uncle Josh Perkins" as a play, and to the fact that this season the entire company comprises a list of capable actors, a number of entertaining new specialties are introduced to enhance an already popular successful offering. No play of this decade has attained the popularity enjoyed by "Uncle Josh Perkins," for the simple reason that no other theatrical offering has been able to command the successful attention of the stagegoers year after year as does this annually welcome rural comedy. Each season some new feature has been introduced to enhance the value of its wholesome New England flavor; and while specialties are easily introduced without disturbing the action of the play, the story of Uncle Josh, and how he permeates the development of the play with firm but lovable character, is sufficiently interesting to hold the attention of young and old.

The Plot of the Play

The story of the play is simple enough. Mr. Robert Stafford, a man of wealth, possessing the character and instincts of the born gentleman, falls in love with a poor telephone operator, Miss Virginia Blaine, a young woman of fine character and high ideals. Her refusal of his many invitations to partake of pleasures only because Mr. Stafford's love for her. Finally he serves her, together with a sister, Fanny, and her intended brother-in-law, James Gilley, to his home, and here Mr. Stafford confesses his love for her and pleads with her to marry him, for he is sure that if she loves no one else and holds him even in affectionate regard, the warmth of his affection will soon make her love him.

They are married and live together for two years. Every luxury which a husband can shower upon a wife he showers upon her. A beautiful home, a yacht, a box at the opera, automobiles, trips abroad. He even takes the happy-go-lucky James Gilley, her brother-in-law, into his office, paying him a salary entirely out of proportion to his ability, and so pleases his wife. But in spite of all these attentions, a growing spirit of discontent gnaws at her heart strings. She loves her husband, it is true, for he is invariably attentive and affectionate. But, of late, he has assumed to be a habit of drinking to excess, and at some times he has given evidence of a growing disposition to degrade her which she is unable to ignore. Sober he is as kind as a saint, but when drunk, his usual calm dignity gives way to a spirit of exultation, of amiable and genial humor, which, like a long as he can have his way, but the moment he is crossed in his desire, the dictatorial and domineering character of the man is unconsciously coming into play, and he will say or do anything to have his way.

On one particular evening Mr. Stafford comes home exhilarated and inflamed by drink. He is pleasant and amiable enough until his wife refuses to drink to excess, which he desires to propose to her. The beast in him is aroused, and he attempts to force to compel her to do his bidding. When this fails he asserts his legal authority as husband to compel her to obey him. This she scornfully rejects, with the assertion that the husband who would claim such authority confesses that he no longer possesses the only authority which exists in marriage—the moral one. Goaded to desperation by her persistent refusal, he takes her with the charge that he has bought and paid for her and therefore she must do what pleases him. Her finer instincts rebel at this insult, and even though she knows it was spoken by him when he was no longer responsible for it, she decides to leave him.

On the following morning, when he is sober, she makes known her determination to leave him. He is utterly broken down by the charge that he has bought and paid for her and therefore she must do what pleases him. Her finer instincts rebel at this insult, and even though she knows it was spoken by him when he was no longer responsible for it, she decides to leave him.

THE SATIRE THAT MAKES NEW YORK WINCE

It Is Called the "Story Without End," but It Is Written With Considerable Finish and Touches the Greatest Problem of the Day

By ELLIS

"She Went to Reno."

understood the terms of the contest as prescribed by himself and the postal authorities, he bade Percival begin, and suggested that he make it as short as possible consistent with the rules and regulations.

"Once upon a time," began the dauntless and ambitious Percival in a low, velvet voice, "there was a city called New York. It was a city of noise and joys, of ways that were great and ways that were white. A city that knew no night, a continuous performance from the opening of the first picture show in the morning to the closing of the last cabaret show the next morning.

"There came to that city from Wisconsin a young and unsophisticated couple, who, however, were willing to be taught. They looked upon New York, or at least upon a part of it, and lo, it was good. It was especially good in the parts that were bad. So they threw themselves into the maelstrom to the utmost limit of their resources. The gentleman labored and gambled in stocks. The lady went to the matinee and gambled in bridge. The more the lady went to the matinee and gambled the more the gentleman labored and gambled."

"SEE your finish," interrupted the king. "They can't keep that up long. I don't care where it is, much less in New York. You are a nice young man, but you are going to fail. Too bad! Too bad!"

"No, I'm not," replied Percival with considerable heat. "I don't want to brag, but I warn you now that

"And He Said to the King"

"I'm going to get this prize. Let me go on with the story, for it is a very long one. After a time, as you have already guessed, the gentleman grew tired of this arrangement, and, truth to tell, the lady also grew tired, for she had formed the conclusion that traveling in double harness was not fast enough for her. Accordingly, the gentleman went down to the railroad station, took a train to Reno and secured a quick divorce."

"Look out," warned the king. "You are getting into trouble. That is plainly to be seen."

Percival did not heed the interruption of the king and went on with his story. "And when the gentleman came back from Reno he married another gentleman's divorced wife and they lived together for a few years. When the wife grew tired and went to Reno and got a divorce and came back and married another lady's divorced husband and they lived together for a few years, when the husband grew tired and went to Reno and got a divorce and came back and married another gentleman's divorced wife and they lived together for a few years, when the wife grew tired and went to Reno and secured a divorce and came back to New York and married another lady's divorced husband and they lived together for."

"I know what you're up to," exclaimed the king after Percival had spent three weeks reciting this effort of New York to alter the character of its population. "You are finally going to have the original wife and the original husband get remarried and settle down. That's where you fail."

"Not on your life," retorted Percival. "and they lived together a few years, when the husband grew tired and went to Reno and secured a divorce and once in awhile? It couldn't make the story any shorter and it might make it more interesting."

"The rules of the contest said nothing about quality. This is a purely quantitative matter. and secured a divorce and came back and married another lady's divorced husband and they lived together a few years, when the husband grew tired and went to Reno and secured a divorce and came back and married another gentleman's divorced wife and they lived."

JUST then—it was the end of the tenth year—an elderly maiden stuck her head in the door and anxiously inquired: "What luck, father?"

"I hope we're pretty nearly through," replied the king.

"So do I," responded the girl heartily as she closed the door.

Percival went on for six weeks longer, when, suddenly he stopped and looked at the king, a quizzical expression on his face. Then he asked: "Is that the daughter I'm doing all this work for?"

"It is," said the king. Then he added apologetically: "Of course, you must remember that these endless stories take a long time in the telling and beautiful maidens will inevitably grow old with the lapse of years."

"So I perceive," retorted Percival. "But fear not, I shall be through in a few moments."

"Remember the penalty if you end your story," warned the king.

"I don't care what the penalty is," said Percival decisively. "Anything at all rather than marry that frump."

Whereupon the king had him beheaded for high treason, which was a bit tragic, but under the circumstances by no means the unpleasantest fate.

NOW LAUGH SOME MORE

Like the Crab.

A jolly old boy from the Midlands entered into one of the hotels at the seaside, and seeing on the slab on the right a crab dressed on the shell with legs, claws and parsley ranged round, said to the landlord: "What d'ye call that?"

"Crab," was the answer.

"Looks good. I'll have 'un, and give us a pint o' ale."

Bread and butter was added and the diner left to his dinner. In about an hour the genial landlord entered the dining-room to see if his guest was getting on all right. He found him chawing up the last claw, the chawer red in the face, but beaming.

"Like the crab, sir?"

"Yes, he was capital. I never tasted one afore. But I think you baked 'em a little too long; the crust was hard. Let's have another pint."

He had eaten the lot, shell, claws and all complete.

Among the Girls.

The room was full of little girls in pink ribbons and pigtail. They sat in rows at wooden desks as quiet as mice. Over them presided a sweet-faced damsel, stern withal.

The lesson concerned coins of the United States, and they had been through the entire range, from pennies to eagles.

One little miss, however, was singularly inattentive. Her gaze was fixed upon a playful sparrow on the window sill, and she had no thought for coins. Suddenly the teacher pounced upon her. Placing a quarter on the pupil's desk, she demanded:

"What's that?"

"Eads," came the instantaneous reply.

A lady whose friends had arrived unexpectedly got up an impromptu dinner party and was compelled to send to the nearest bakery for some large tarts. All went well until the lady, unluckily wishing to show off by pretending not to know what was at her own table, pointed to the dish with an air of great dignity and inquired:

"John, what are these tarts?"

Whereat John briskly replied: "Ten cents apiece, mum."

"Pa, what does it mean when it says a man has arrived at years of discretion?"

"It means, sonny, that he's too young to die and too old to have any fun."

He—They say that the face is an index of the mind.

She—I doubt that. It doesn't follow because a woman's face is made up that her mind is.

"Does my boy," inquired the parent, "seem to have a natural bent in any one direction?"

"Yes, sir," said the teacher. "He gives every indication of being a captain of industry some day. He gets the other boys to do all his work for him."

Mrs. Shortley was discussing the latest fashions with a young lady caller.

"Did you say your husband was fond of those clinging gowns, May?"

"Yes, he likes one to cling to me for about three years."

Pat had joined the navy and was being drilled with his shipmates on a pier.

"Fall in!" came the order.

Immediately Pat fell into the water.

"Two deep!" was the next order.

Pat (spluttering in the water)—Bad scum to get! Why didn't ye tell me it was too deep before I fell in?"

"There's a difference in time, you know, between this country and Europe," said a gentleman in New York to a newly arrived Irishman. "For instance, your friends in Cork are in bed and fast asleep by this time, while we are enjoying ourselves in the early evening."

"That's always the way," exclaimed Pat. "Ireland never got justice yet."

"He Welcomed the Waffle With Open Arms."

By Mark Telfair.

COUNT DE MONTESQUE, exquisites, whose distinguished presence wrote "The Spirit of the Laws," was amazed to find in America so many things he did not expect to find, but, nevertheless, was persistent in his quest for what he thought should be there. Those included everyday homespun suitings, butternut jeans and the man with his trousers tucked in his rawhides, who, regarding the newcomer from under the shadow of an exaggerated Stetson, welcomes him with: "Wall, stranger, what ya doin' in these parts?"

He had expected to find a primitive, homely state, or at least robust traces of it, not exactly a sun-fight removed from barbarism, but instead found himself in the midst of a civilization barbaric in its opulence of luxuries and adornment; a civilization that held the homespun and the butternut jeans as an amusing tradition, which, so far as their influence on the present was concerned, might never have had any reality. The Count was, therefore, infinitely sad, for the failure of his desire was edged with the bitterness that comes to a man who realizes he has holed with painstaking care on a foundation of error.

He reasoned that the sturdy spirit that made us a nation apart and typified democracy, the brotherhood of man—and all that sort of thing you heard during the campaign—had vanished like moving pictures. The plain spirit of Americanism has fled, he lamented. "I have been unable to discover a single symbol of it."

He had found the cooking French and Italian; the dress French and English; much of the complexion of thought German; the men, a new race, branded, like range cattle, with the dollar mark; the women, likewise, a new order of beings—superior beings—made to fit into the luxurious era and to absorb its golden plenty with the natural function of breathing. Alas! His ideal America seemed as remote as the lost Atlantis.

HE even lamented with overwhelming rhetorical brilliancy to Henri, the red-footed servant, deft as a wizard and possessor of a generous depth of wisdom which rewards the man who discreetly listens for the greater part of his life. One morning, shortly before his return to Europe, the Count was in a discordant humor. And Henri so found him despite the profusion of violets in the room and the clear, stimulating sunshine that touched with glowing vitality the warm patterns in the rare Turkish rug under his delicately shed feet.

"What is the desire of his excellency this morning?" Henri bowed obsequiously.

"My consuming desire is to be back in my dear Paris."

"What, then, is his excellency's consuming desire to consume this morning?" Henri could not for the life of him guess such a propitious opportunity.

The well-made, weary nobleman smiled. "You are a droll fellow. And, being so clever in speech, I am in the grateful anticipation that you can bring me the typical American dish—the dish which when you eat, you feel you are dining on the country's past, present and future. Give me, Henri, the gustatory symbol of the nation. But, for once I have handed you the dilemma—the insurmountable, the impassable, the unattainable. You can more readily have me served with the kitchen masterpiece of dear, old, dead Babylon. Ah! You turn pale."

"That," respectfully corrected Henri, "is the palor of joy, maitre, for I have become possessed of the inspiration—so simple but yet so splendid. I shall humbly try to gratify your desire."

WITHIN the next half hour Henri returned to the room where the French aesthete sat in his wonderful incandescent peacock dressing robe looking absently out of the window. Nor did he turn his head as the waiter entered. Henri, silently as a shadow, laid the table with snowy napery and gleaming silver. There were two covered dishes, the coffee and cream.

"It awaits your excellency."

"You may go," ordered the Count, his face still averted. "I wish to spare you the humiliation of failure."

"Yes, your excellency." Henri opened and closed the door noiselessly and vanished. He stopped to chat with Annette, the hall maid, when they were startled by a sharp cry from the Count's room, followed by several others which indicated something like a delirium.

"I wonder what's the matter with him?" debated Annette. Her bewildered expression caused Henri to smile a smile of craft and sophistication. "I guess his excellency has delivered himself of a fit," he remarked, as he walked back to the room.

The Count was in a state of delicious agitation, pacing the room and crying: "Magnifique! Found! Found at last! Wonderful! Wonderful!"

And, behold, Henri, he came to him and embraced him. "Marvelous man! What is this you have brought me; which have in them the entire essence of actual America? The symbol, the real symbol at last! What is it so rapidly sweet in its meats, and so celestially condimented? Oh, transcendental creation!"

"That," enlightened Henri, the impressiveness of an epochal event making his speech measured, "is Philadelphia country sausage!"

"DIVINE! divine!" The Count clasped his hands ecstatically. "And what are these peculiar cakes which, in their rugged front and back remind one of the log cabin of Abraham Lincoln?"

"They," replied Henri reverently, "are waffles."

"What?" The Duke made an impatient gesture. "Acclaim the glorious word with verve, praise and loud acclaim and laudation!"

"WAFFLES! WAFFLES! WAFFLES!"

Having a deep, vibrant voice with some of the quality of Renaud or Sammarco, Henri, who fairly sang the word, was heard from one end of the hall to the other, for the door had remained ajar. And the Count joyously repeated it.

That was the beginning of the renaissance of the waffle in social New York, for the titled Frenchman took every occasion to speak of the historical value and dignity of it—not omitting the Philadelphia sausage, and its poetic potency and sweet symbolism. In fact, he expanded on the waffle with as much eloquence and pictorial investiture as Gautier gave to his worship of pure, abstract beauty. He harked it and invested it with a sentiment as fervid as first love. WAFFLE! Appetite and adoration. And so the femininely attractive delicacy has grown socially in favor until its position is now beyond question.

MISS HELEN GOULD, who recently gave a "waffle luncheon" in honor of Mrs. John Astor and Mrs. John Seely Ward, may not be given to the rapture of the imaginative Frenchman, but she is scarcely less enthusiastic; for the waffle is one of her household familiars and she can deftly mix the batter herself and turn out the crepe-like tasters in deep, rich buff and old ivory, whose indentations await, with hot impatience, the butter, the maple syrup or the strained honey. The luncheon was given at the New York Women's Exchange, and, while it had a wholly social aspect, it could not compare in enthusiasm with the "waffle day" which had preceded it.

"Waffle Day" was an open-air affair in which the shop girl, the cloak model or the artificial flower maker was as much of a guest as the most imposing society matron or maid interested in the organization. And the genius in the kitchen must have worked with bewitched moulds, for the heaps of waffles that came continuously to the diners seemed to indicate that the service was inexhaustible. It is doubtless true that the delicacy came as a delightful surprise to many of the women, who will spread the fame of the waffle and declare its democratic influence.

Piles of cakes disappeared like snow before the noon sunshine, and when a photographer touched off his flash-light, the sudden and startling glare lit up a collection of perfectly bearded faces, with something so paradoxical in the expression as to give the idea of a company of saints. It is a remarkable photograph, with Miss Gould in it, for it is one of the records of a notable event in social progress. Count de Montesque, who is completely waffle-woman, or Maud Malone, who makes a specialty of the social progress stuff, might tell more in detail of the significance of "waffle day," but that it was a memorable treat all were heartily agreed.

INDICATIONS are not lacking that during the winter festivities in New York and Washington the waffle will come prominently to the front, a place it once held with honor and dignity, but from which it has been ruthlessly elbowed by more effete things. And, it is a striking anomaly that the effect of the effete should have sounded the vigorous note that has given a lasting impulse to the renaissance of the dear, old homespun delicacy.

Harry Lehr, a young man of varied resource, and who came into fame as a society cut-up, once was asked why he did not take to the waffle habit, just as some of the exquisites daily with the chafing dish. "There's no fun in that," he commented. "The bally things are locked in moulds and you can't toss 'em up in the air."

Therein is the waffle exclusive, for an irreverent person, whether for personal show or to exhibit a merry juggling, can take no liberties with it. Besides a demonstrated set of irons is a treasure to be treated with respect and appreciative care. As a baseball catcher loves and nurses a certain glove; as a violinist is devoted to his Strad; or Cremona, so the waffle enthusiast regards her waffle irons, sensitive to their moods and bestowing a degree of watchful concern on them beyond the understanding of one who has never felt the lure of the delicacy.

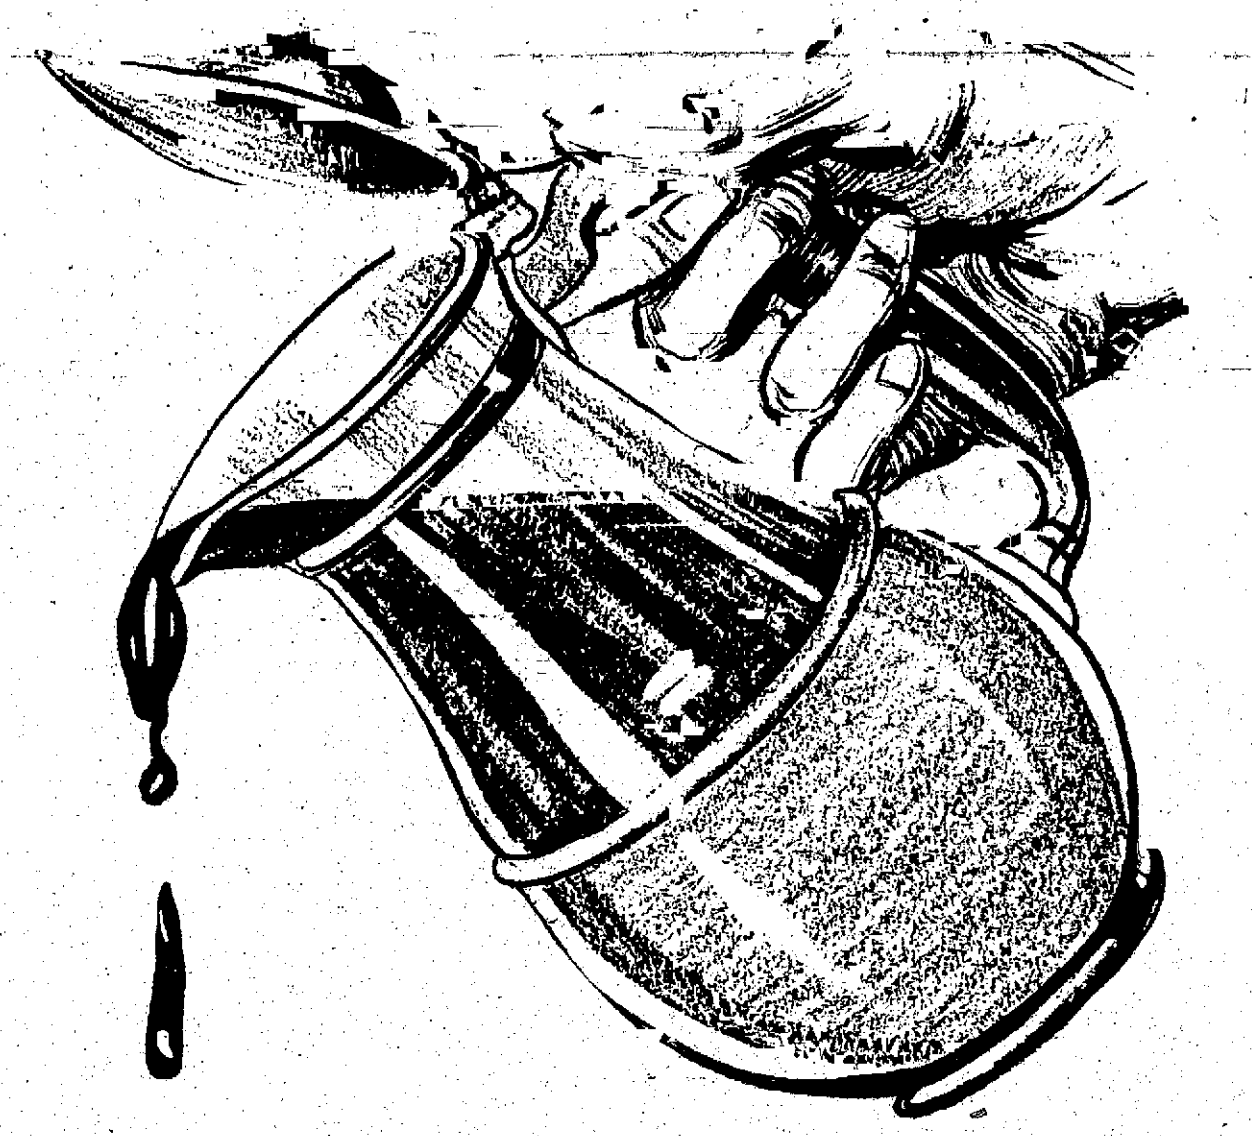

If you have any doubts and do not believe that there is character in the insensate irons, ask Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Clarence Mackay, Mrs. Russell Sage or any woman of wealth whose knowledge of her household affairs very wisely comprehends the kitchen.

THE modern labor-saving spirit may cook waffles by machinery, but experts say that these mechanical products can never have the individuality and the satisfying perfection of those to which is given both the hand, the mind and the enthusiasm of the person who loves the work. It is the hand touch that makes the perfect product, and, for that reason, well attested irons are in great demand.

James P. Caddigan, epicure, student and philosopher, while in charge of the Hoffman House prided himself that he had the most perfect irons in the country. The house had always been famous for its waffles, and, long before the advent of the Count de Montesque, Col. Thomas P. Ochiltree of Texas and the wide, wide world, who made his home in the hostelry, obtained there from a set of irons and presented them to Mrs. Faran Stevens, one of the powerful social leaders of the day; but society was not in the mood to return to humble necessities—it was well under way along the prodigal, pampered, primrose way. But the gallant colonel and the matron have passed on, but if those irons have been saved from the scrapheap and are intact to-day, maybe having as an unproductive curiosity on the wall of some "den," the possessor is in the position of a person who entertains a genuine old master unaware.

The most prized irons in the hotel were the half-century old handwork of Mulken, the farmer of Salamanca, N. Y., and a relative of Caddigan. The venerable moulds were the perfection of casting and temper. For some reason never material did not give the same rounded results, and the veteran hotel man doubted if the Salamanca master could have ever repeated himself. When the effects of the hotel were sold these irons were eagerly sought by society folk who had eaten the product and heard their merits sung at many a board.

ALFRED of the Hoffman House may not have had the servatorial diplomacy of the Waldorf waiter who waffled the distinguished Frenchman, but what Alfred lacked in perfumed satire he made up for in straightforward politeness and a far-seeing business instinct. He watched the waffle with a speculative eye. When the slowly developing social boom was in its infancy he at once noted it and his calculations gave it the widest breadth. "If the swells like it the general public will like it," he reasoned. "And, again, there is more than a fad in this proposition. It's a good thing and can run along on its own irons."

When the time and the money were propitious

Alfred pooled his issues with one of the waffle experts of the hotel and they opened a small place in Thirtieth street, not far from Broadway. His judgment was more than justified. Every one in that particularly sophisticated section of the Tenderloin seemed literally ravening for waffles. Policemen, actors, gamblers, chauffeurs and all of the army who live in the waking night; stenographers, shop girls, shirtwaist makers, cloak models and all sorts of business folk of both sexes, by day, clamored for the waffles. Through the river tubes, from New Jersey and Long Island, came the good old homestead groups to enjoy the moulded delicacy. The place was so often crowded that persons waited outside, unmindful of wind or damp fog. They were the old guard of the great, growing waffle legion.

NOW the story runs that Alfred heard of a wonderful set of irons in Paris, made under the direction of the titled French apostle, and at once set out to acquire them. His mission was entirely successful, and he moved to a location further uptown, followed by both his humble and his wealthy patrons. The place has not the style of Delmonico's or the Ritz-Carlton, but, being a humble treasure house, its heterogeneous company does not deter a millionaire or two from dropping in regularly for a treat of waffles. A. S. Stern, one-time owner of the Cincinnati ball club, is something of a regular when he is in the city, and his big automobile is a familiar object in front of the building.

Alfred himself has been honored in being called to several palaces of the hopelessly wealthy to give instructions in the exquisite art. He has been offered amazing sums for his irons. But why sell the goose that lays the golden eggs? It has already made him wealthy. The nationalism of the waffle is deeper seated than the man on the street would surmise. Some dwellers in this fair land who cling to tradition regard it with the deepest respect and admiration. The Bull Moose standard-bearer, who by no chance overlooks a bet, however small, arouses intense enthusiasm during his comings and goings from the county's bullet when he ordered waffles for breakfast. He might have sent for "sinkers" and coffee or "three-off-the-griddle" and coffee, yet would have missed the entirely, but by choosing waffles he made a patriotic appeal to all hearts. And it may have been that at some time in the past Senator Billy Mason told the story.

THOUGH the Senator was light of fancy he was obviously abundant in flesh. During one of the national conventions some one conceived the hilarious idea during a late night session of good fellowship of removing the hair mattress from the statesman's bed, leaving him with only the wire contraption upon which to impose his impressive bulk. When ready to retire he was in a condition of fatigue that asked nothing more than a place for the tired body to relax, and he probably neither noticed nor cared that only a sheet separated him from the wire mattress. But he slept as peacefully as a babe.

A Kentucky delegate broke in upon the Senator's repose rather early.

Mason raised himself up painfully and wonderingly rubbed his indented body.

"How do you find you feel this morning, Senator?" queried the Blue Grass man, bowing ceremoniously.

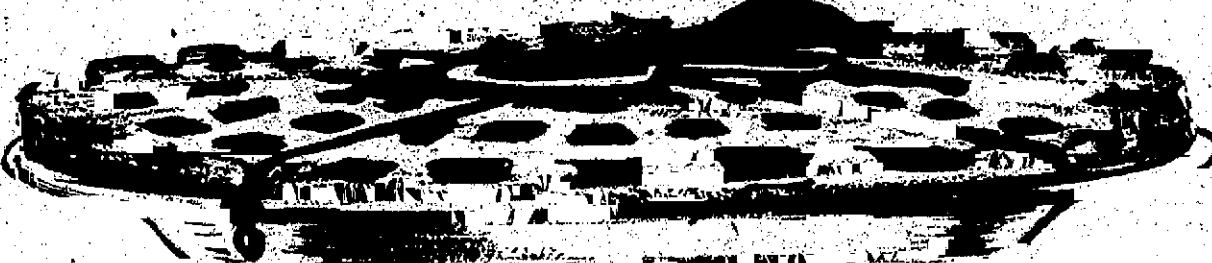

"I feel like a human waffle," answered Mason.

"I congratulate you, but I sholly does envy you, suh! Feelin' like a waffle!" And the speaker shut his eyes in ecstatic reverence. "And there should be more waffles in the statesmanship of this country, suh. We are driftin' away from our sturdy ideals. I always did admire you, Senator—I always marked you up, suh, as a waffle statesman!"

FRANK CORNELIUS MULCAY, of Salamanca, son of the farmer, and a cousin of Caddigan, who became a familiar figure at the Hoffman House as a "gambler," has noted the waffle phenomenon with the eyes of a philosopher. One of his most prized possessions is a set of the old irons. He has had a scarfpin modeled after them, and it is a fit companion of the miniature broiler—meaning cold, insensate metal, this time of the Gridiron Club. "The revival of the waffle spirit reaches a fitting culmination in the election of Woodrow Wilson," declared Mr. Mulcay, "as the people are returning to the simple, honest ideals. The waffle stands for democracy in its widest sense. It is the cake of the magnate and the laborer alike. Its simplicity is Jeffersonian, yet no party may claim its symbolism wholly for its own. It is broad as the word American and inspiring as the Star Spangled Banner."

"Its adoption by society shows an altruistic breaking of the shabby class demarkation which high-browed sociologists regarded as a menace to the nation. No, I would not say the waffle is socialist. It is simply human in its mellowing influence, and has a well-bred distinction lacking in wheat cakes, flap-jacks or corn muffins. And, let me impress it upon you, little one, that waffle statesmanship is less a laugh than you imagine."

"I know a perfectly charming lady who denied numerous social demands to give her energies and voice to the interests of Mr. Wilson, and who intends to have him presented with a set of the old Salamanca moulds. Mr. Taft, I have been told, was fond of waffles, but his publicity staff was evidently not jerry to the general reawakening of the new force, so did not give the fact the prominence it really deserved. What makes me marvel is that there are people in the land who have not known the calm joy and the placid content of the waffle. But we are in a period of revelation and restoration. The people have come into their own and the waffle will be the commemorative feast cake. Ask the most discriminating eaters what they think of the waffle and they will give it twenty-four karat rating as the real gold of breakfast foods."

SILVER FORD, wit and raconteur, who is melancholy to contemplate, becomes still more woful of aspect when he speaks of cookery, for he has dignified eminence as an expert. "I am delighted to observe that the waffle has come back and taken a front seat, where it belongs. It has made happy thousands of lives in the past and stood for the ideals of pure living and honest government."

"Still I have heard of an old-time reformer to whom the gentle habit became an overpowering, mad passion. He ate waffles morning, noon and night. Then, after dreaming of them, he began all over again, drinking his ample cup of pepsin. He was a hopeless usspective, but he didn't seem to care so long as the waffles held out. And he outlived all his enemies, who, though they metaphorically threw the boots into him, couldn't even make a dent in him; he was always so full of the indentations he had eaten."

"I've heard the waffle likened to a simple pretty girl. But a fellow should think twice before calling his best girl a waffle."

And yet the waffle may still be the demure Priscilla of cakes, whose dimpled simplicity, touched by honey, in a slow, serpentine, golden kiss, makes a picture to fill the eye with beauty and start the expectant mouth to delicious champing.

NAZIMOVA TALKS OF THE AMERICAN WOMAN

Theodore Deen

"American women may be cold marble or white flame I cannot distinguish" says the famous Russian actress.

"They never indicate that loving and living are taking up their time and attention."

"If the American woman awoke as a 'universal' woman possibly she would not kill the thing she loves."

If a woman is genuinely keen to win the affection of a man she is a universal woman of the real sexy sort, even if the original setting of the plot is in England, or New Hampshire, the British provinces or the New Jersey coast.

"Couldn't she be merely Anglo-Saxon and get away with it—I mean the man, and incidentally the art?" I put to Madame Nazimova, and then she quickly blurted forth the substance or essence of the opening paragraph.

"Do American or English women win men?" she repeated in answer to a part of a question. "I don't know. I never saw an American or Englishman who admitted he was won—who acknowledged he was a closed door to emotion, to experiences—I don't know. Do your women hold men? I don't know."

"Isn't it because their training is all repression, scant expression?" I asked.

"I don't know. I don't know the mysteries of Anglo-Saxon getting and holding. If I have seen it, it wasn't labeled—I am not Anglo-Saxon. I can't tell how they affect men; how they fascinate, bewitch, conquer; they never told me. They may have temperament—I wasn't born with their understanding. I follow the lives of the universal woman, who is rearing and appreciating the big event, the big love, is dominated by it and by desire. One doesn't exist without the other."

"And the Anglo-Saxon recognizes?"

"The universal woman recognizes more."

"Then the serpent grows, the poses, the stamping on the tail of the gown signify?"

"Yes, the image of woman is clothed a serpent bites his tail in moments of abandon to hatred, to disdain, to all things that have tormented, annoyed; a woman stamps her foot—on the serpent's tail she expresses herself. I mean the Bella Donna I portray."

"AND other women—American women?"

"When they are awakened, if they are awakened—I do not know, as I told you—they will be dominated, they will know what they want. Nothing else matters."

"Even murder?"

"Murder or any other fine expression of well-temperament."

Sounds like a decoration, a psychological adornment, the well lost for love.

Nazimova was in her dressing-room at the Empire Theatre, wearing the serpent-like costume, or rather streak of cloth that draped her sinuous form, when she got such an awfully bad deal from Fate in the last act of "Bella Donna."

This gown of thrilling vampire dame was not made for Nazimova, the actress; it dressed the image of Bella Donna, the "universal" woman. It carried a chill and a thrill in symbolic defiance and fire. She had wandered in it out to the water's edge, or further still, into damp mystery. She had hoped, bated, suffered and even crushed in it, had gone broken, silent, into space, with a weariness of limbs and numbness of brain, a crucifixion of spirit and annihilation of soul that is not easily understood nor sympathized with in Mother England, New England and Manhattan.

Don't you see, if she had played the Anglo-Saxon woman she would necessarily be obliged to change the costume, and the details that went with it. There are no more lives to suffer. She would also have to alter her poses and features and other essential situations, and likely, as not the plot.

She would, maybe, maybe not, conform to the American way of winning, wooing, loving, but how is she going to set about it? She wasn't born here, you know. Her grandmother never lived in Connecticut. Nazimova never went to school at Vassar, and besides, she was equipped with imagination.

If the Anglo-Saxon, perhaps I would better from now on say the American woman, if the American ever awoke as a "universal" woman, sympathetic and all that, you know, what would happen? I suggested seriously.

"Possibly she would not kill the thing she loves—she would be alive to every moment of its existence. She would strive to please it, to charm it, to understand it, at least struggle to hold its attention and to absorb it with all her power of allurements, her brains, beauty, whatever she has that compels, appeals. The awakened or interested woman doesn't want her talents to go by default. If she is controlled by desire she will study to hold."

"I am told I made a mistake to wear in my last two acts Egyptian clothes," she continued. "The universal woman would have done that. She has an Egyptian lover, she is in the spell of his glow, she wants his warmth of eyes and heart. She doesn't want to be divorced from his brain. She doesn't know that geographical facts exist; ages are nothing to her. She knows only this is the one thing she adores, the one man she aims to hold. And she is too artistic to put herself out of the picture."

"She might wear only frocks, draw her hair in the easiest way and permit her dressmakers and milliners to choose her wardrobe," she went on. "But she would be taking a losing chance with destiny—her destiny. A woman who loves wildly, extravagantly, is fearful of losing ground. All the mechanism of her brain and fancy must sustain and direct her. Desire is rampant in her. You see, I am still in the part and you will understand I cannot get out of it."

Supposing that I had chosen to hold the Egyptian by clinging to traditions, conventional, stupid traditions, I doubt if he would have called the second time, and even if he had, he would have wanted something more human on his way home. And she closed her sentences with something in her throat very like a chuckle.

"WHAT would have spoiled the play?" I asked.

"That would spoil life, it would make every day a drab fact."

"Holding a man's attention is not a simple thing, I take it?"

"If it is well done it is constant employment. Reno is popular here, isn't it?"

"It is on the marriage map."

"And perhaps every dream of it who haven't the courage to break into it."

"Because few know why they marry."

"Now know how to love."

It wasn't by any means the first time I had talked with this remarkable woman. First when she was with the Russian players, seven years ago, then when she was under Henry Miller's management at the Bijou Theatre, when she had learned her English words.

Just because Nazimova, passed her examinations in the English language she did not in consequence promise she would understand, love, honor and obey the English customs, traditions, practices. She was a universal woman, that was the thing. A Russian, and her instincts were finely alert, developed, trained, well maintained attributes of her organization. She has been faithful to them since and on good terms with them.

Nazimova is unusual in that she is original, a quality from which she cannot escape. Some in her audiences may call her way of doing things by the hackneyed term "Mannerisms," but if they take a peep into her brain they will see she has ideas, that she is not afraid to have, even if the disclosing does not always occur at that vague "psychological" moment.

If they don't like the cut of her gowns then they must look into her brains again and discover that she is clothing an attitude, a pose, a pose, a fancy or an actual something that exists for her, as vital, throbbing and very much on the job.

NAZIMOVA doesn't lock her atmosphere in a safety deposit nor check it at the stage door. Neither does she flaunt it as a chaperone, a friend of the family or something to which she is under obligations. It is a co-operative thing—they are partners and well acquainted with one another—one doesn't work without the other. A little household in itself. And they can act. Yes? No? The eyes have it.

In those early days she didn't clothe her characters in outward, visible signs, yet even then she trailed in a snake's path, curiously, realistically. But her brain has furnished her with a new set of ideas. A resourceful brain, it is.

Is the woman snake universal?

"They are in all countries—I mean snakes, except Ireland. But once they were planted there, as well. In some countries, or neighborhoods, or acts, or clubs they are too indolent to step on their own tails or to hiss out disapprobation or fire or fever. They have been studying culture, I suppose, or grown too weary for action after long mornings at the dressmaker's or seances with the cook, or."

"Marching for suffrage?"

"I have nothing against that."

"Did you march?"

"No, I was in Trenton."

"Yet you believe in?"

"Not in marching. So far as I am concerned my work must show I believe in equality in every way—sex hasn't any way in art—we are all workers."

AND all the time the long, narrow serpent gown glittered and breathed accompaniment. It shifted, once when the maid came to take off madame's wig, and madame turned to the mirror to see if her own hair was on straight. It was.

"I wish I had a wig in my life."

"Don't you like your hair? It looks perfectly good!"

"A wig behaves better and I don't like to wear out of the theatre anything that has served its purpose on the stage."

Was she about to be stingy with her atmosphere?

"You don't forget your lines on that account, do you?"

"Sometimes I wish I could—I think an actress makes a mistake in being too familiar with her lines. She should let the audience help her to remember them. It is a sympathetic something I can't definitely explain."

"Does it hurt your feelings to be called a snake?"

"I am one—Bella Donna is one—she is a snake, but not in the beginning. In the first act she is a woman of the world."

"With the heart of a snake?"

"With a careless heart, not a dead one."

"It is only when the dominant passion comes to her that the snake assumes ascendancy in her nature?"

"She is prepared for defense."

"Is that a quality in love, true love?"

"It is a necessary good. One has to be equipped with all weapons to obtain and secure what one desires."

I wonder if one's desire is only a step-sister to Heart's Desire? Somehow it doesn't sound so much like a New Year's greeting, does it?

HER words were beginning to stand up on their tail and coil-and-twine like all the cobra lines in art nouveau.

To get one's desire it is apparent that one begins and works from the ground up, so the hiss and coil will have a meaning when the desire reaches the high pitch of expression. Small wonder we don't find such preparation for life's battle or love's battle in our seminaries and colleges. It would be rather difficult to collect faculties capable of instilling the climactic power in the pupils, and doubtless the wisdom procured thus conscientiously would not convey its ripe message of equipment to the family and intimate friends, handicapped from the start by stubborn opposition and relentless antipathy. The spirit of the Orient would lose its fragrant note. To be universal I fancy one has to arrange for her birth on the border of the East.

Traveling doesn't supply it. The breath, the flame must be in the original setting, and no one assumes or presumes that this actress omitted these factors in her mental composition.

"I want to go to Egypt," and the soft hiss of the words were out by a glowing certainty she would get her wish.

"Why not England?"

"What can I learn there? I'd get no response in any way."

"The 'universal' woman has a spirit, a soul not easily understood nor sympathized with in Mother England, New England and Manhattan."

"Love does not exist without desire, a condition many American women are afraid to recognize."

"The woman snake is 'universal.'"

"What do you get here outside of the breath, the sky, the fire of Egypt?"

"I go to moving pictures—I learn a lot—they are my delight, my recreation, action, movement—all pantomime is fascinating."

"You can't rehearse your Bella Donna part there, can you?"

"Why not? I carry my thoughts with me. I study every pose, the meaning of each gesture. In Berlin I was absorbed by the work of Max Reinhardt's pantomime; moving pictures contain wonderful drama. Never a dull moment."

The laughter of the East departed and the actress was on the verge of tangible enthusiasm. The serpent robe was losing its cunning. It rested peacefully, coolly, like a dinner gown in New York or Boston. It was, of course, draping a modern idea that suddenly rushed through her brain. Rather serviceable gown after all, and somewhat comfortable after its night of glides and wriggles, tortures, seething animation, wickedness, tenderness, joy, despair and pain.

I COULD not but wonder what Fifth Avenue and Broadway would look like if every woman dressed her mood, her purpose, aim, her heart's desire, mind's desire, or any other desire that is reckoned as a feminine adjunct.

It would be a strange psychological parade. There would be new traffic laws for auras, and streets set apart for the yellow, mauve, crimson, purple and pale pink souls; special police escorts for the snakes, tigers, cats, she wolves, hens, polar bears, chickens, monkeys, elephants.

Active imaginations need never grow stale in the presence of the Russian.

The humanizing process of the actress was almost asserting itself—moving picture memories had dissolved the snake-like glints.

"Would the cinematograph help in the average woman's development—the American woman's, I mean?"

"Do they develop? I don't know. They never told me."

"Yet you must admit they do love and live?"

"Do they love? I never saw it. Do they live? I never noticed it. They never speak of it to me they never indicate that loving and living are taking up their time and attention. If I knew, if somebody would only show me, I might be able to learn, though I would not be a success because I am not English and cannot get a thrill in Anglo-Saxon methods. I do not pretend to know anything about the ways and means they use to accomplish what they go out to gain. If they achieve the end they may or may not declare their knowledge. It couldn't affect me in any way. I would be only a patient listener. I was not created with their interpretation, was I? They may be cold marble or white flame I cannot distinguish, and I don't have to do it?"

The right foot of the actress was slowly feeling its way toward the train of the robe; the snake was waking up. It wouldn't devour the train, but it gave evidence of resting uneasily, and the thought of life in the open came stealing quickly, quietly over me.

"How's your husband this morning, Mrs. Finnigan?" "Oh he's very poorly, very reverent! And it's a mighty expensive disease he's got. The doctor says I've to keep him in good spirits."

Johnson—Ah, I see the newspapers are speaking about me again this morning.

Simpsen—Indeed! In what connection?

Johnson—Well, they say that at the close of last week there were over five millions of people in London. I am one of them.

Mr. Piggs is altogether too literal.

How so?

"The last time he was at my house I told him to make himself thoroughly at home and in less than five minutes he had quarreled with my wife, kicked the cat out of doors, discharged the cook, spanked the baby and told me I was a fool."

A County Kerry man about 70 years old, who had spent most of his life in Ireland, finally went to Chicago. He had a job as night watchman at a North Side house.

One day the daughter of the house had a talk with the old man. He told her his life story. He longed for Ireland.

"Why, miss," he said, "I'm so lonesome I can't even get to a funeral and enjoy it!"

Professor—Mr. Fussum, what tense is "I love"?

Mr. Fussum (looking at the girl with knowing eyes)—Intense!

"If the American woman awoke as a 'universal' woman possibly she would not kill the thing she loves."

IF a woman is genuinely keen to win the affection of a man who is a universal woman of the real sexy sort, even if the original setting of the plot is in England, or New Hampshire, the British provinces or the New Jersey coast.

"Couldn't she be merely Anglo-Saxon and get away with it—I mean the man, and incidentally the act?" I put to Madame Nazimova, and then she quickly bitted forth the substance or essence of the opening paragraph.

"Do American or English women win men?" she repeated in answer to a part of a question. "I don't know. I never saw an American or Englishman who admitted he was won—who acknowledged he was a closed door to emotion, to experiences—I don't know. Do your women hold men? I don't know."

"Isn't it because their training is all repression, scant expression?" I asked.

"I don't know. I don't know the mysteries of Anglo-Saxon getting and holding. If I have seen it, it wasn't labeled—I am not Anglo-Saxon. I can't tell how they affect men; how they fascinate, bewitch, conquer; they never told me. They may have temperament—I wasn't born with their understanding. I follow the lives of the universal woman, who is realising and appreciating the big event, the big love, is dominated by it and by desire. One doesn't exist without the other."

"And the Anglo-Saxon recognizes?"

"The universal woman recognizes more."

"Then the serpent gowns, the poses, the stamping on the tail of the gown signify?"

"Yes, the image of woman is clothed—a serpent bites his tail in moments of abandon to hatred, to disdain, to all things that have tormented, annoyed; a woman stamps her foot—on the serpent's tail she expresses herself. I mean the Bella Donna I portray."

"AND other women—American women?"

"When they are awakened, if they are awakened—I do not know, as I told you—they will be dominated, they will know what they want. Nothing else matters."

"Even murder?"

"Murder or any other fine expression of—well, temperament."

Sounds like a decoration, a psychical adornment, the world well lost for love.

Nazimova was in her dressing-room at the Empire Theatre, wearing the serpent-like costume, or rather streak of cloth that draped her sinuous form, when she got such an awfully bad deal from Fate in the last act of "Bella Donna."

This gown of thirsting vampire flame was not made for Nazimova, the actress; it dressed the image of Bella Donna, the "universal" woman. It carried a chill and a thrill in symbolic defiance and fire. She had wandered in it out to the water's edge, or further still, into damp mystery. She had hoped, hated, suffered and been crushed in it; had gone broken, silent, into space, with a weariness of limbs and numbness of brain, a crucifixion of spirit and annihilation of soul that is not easily understood nor sympathized with in Mother England, New England and Manhattan.

Don't you see, if she had played the Anglo-Saxon woman she would necessarily be obliged to change the costume and the details that went with it? There are too many to suit. She would also have to alter her poses and gestures and other essential situations and likely as not the plot.

She would, maybe, maybe not, conform to the American way of winning, wooing, loving, but how is she going to set about it? She wasn't born here, you know. Her grandmother never lived in Connecticut. Nazimova never went to school at Vassar, and besides, she was equipped with imagination.

"IF the Anglo-Saxon—perhaps I would better from now on say the American woman—if the American ever awoke as a "universal" woman, sympathetic and all that, you know, what would happen?" I suggested anxiously.

"Possibly she would not kill the thing she loves—she would be alive to every moment of its existence. She would strive to please it, to charm it, to understand it; at least struggle to hold its attention and to absorb it with all her power of allurements, her brains, beauty, whatever she has that compels, appeals. The awakened or interested woman doesn't want her talents to go by default. If she is controlled by desire she will study to hold."

"I am told I made a mistake to wear in my last

two acts Egyptian clothes," she continued. "The universal woman would have done that. She has an Egyptian lover, she is in the spell of his glow, she wants his warmth of eyes and heart. She doesn't want to be divorced from his brain. She doesn't know that geographical facts exist; ages are nothing to her. She knows only this is the one thing she adores, the one man she aims to hold. And she is too artistic to put herself out of the picture."

"She might wear ugly frocks, dress her hair in the easiest way and permit her dressmakers and milliners to choose her wardrobe," she went on. "But she would be taking a losing chance with destiny—her destiny. A woman who loves wildly, extravagantly, is fearful of losing ground. All the mechanism of her brain and fancy must sustain and direct her. Desire is rampant in her. You see, I am still in the part and you will understand I cannot get out of it."

"Supposing that I had chosen to hold the Egyptian by clinging to traditions, conventional, stupid traditions, I doubt if he would have called the second time, and even if he had, he would have visited something more human on his way home." And she closed her sentence with something in her throat very like a chuckle.

"HAT would have spoiled the play," I ventured. "That would spoil life. It would make every day a drab fact."

"Holding a man's attention is not a simple thing. I take it?"

"If it is well done it is constant employment. Reno is popular here, isn't it?"

"It is on the marriage map."

"And perhaps many dream of it who haven't the courage to break into it."

"Because few know why they marry?"

"Few know how to love."

It wasn't by any means the first time I had talked with this remarkable woman. First when she was with the Russian players, seven years ago, then when she was under Henry Miller's management at the Bijou Theatre, when she had learned her English words.

Just because Nazimova passed her examinations in the English language she did not in consequence promise she would understand, love, honor and obey the English customs, traditions, practices. She was a universal woman then, even though she was a Russian, and her instincts were finely alert, developed, trained, well-mannered attributes of her organization. She has been faithful to them since and on good terms with them.

Nazimova is unusual in that she is original, a quality from which she cannot escape. Some in her audiences may call her way of doing things by the hackneyed term "Mannerism," but if they take a peep into her brain they will see she has ideas, that she is not afraid to have, even if the disclosing does not always occur at that vague "psychological" moment.

If they don't like the cut of her gowns then they must look into her brains again and discover that she is clothing an attitude, a pose, a pose, a fancy or an actual something that exists for her, as vital, throbbing and very much on the job.

NAZIMOVA doesn't lock her atmosphere in a safety deposit nor check it at the stage door. Neither does she haunt it as a chapote, a friend of the family or something to which she is under obligations. It is a co-operative thing—they are partners and well acquainted with one another—one doesn't work without the other. A little household in itself. And they can act. Yes? No? The eyes have it!

In those early days she didn't clothe her characters in outward, visible signs, yet even then she trailed in a snake's path curiously, realistically. But her brain has furnished her with a new set of ideas. A resourceful brain, this.

"Is the woman snake universal?"

"They are in all countries—I mean snakes—except Ireland. But once they were planted there as well. In some countries, or neighborhoods, or sets, or clubs, they are too indolent to step on their own tails or to hiss out disapprobation or fire or fever. They have been studying culture, I suppose, or grown too weary for action after long mornings at the dressmaker's or seances with the cook, or"

"Marching for suffrage?"

"I have nothing against that."

"Did you march?"

"No, I was in Trenton."

"Yet you believe in?"

"Not in marching. So far as I am concerned my work must show I believe in equality in every way—sex hasn't any sway in art—we are all workers."

AND all the time the long, narrow serpent gown glittered and beathed accompaniment. It shifted once when the maid came to take off madame's wig, and madame turned to the mirror to see if her own hair was on straight. It was.

"I never have acted without a wig in my life," said she.

"Don't you like your hair? It looks perfectly good!"

"A wig behaves better and I don't like to wear out of the theatre anything that has served its purpose on the stage."

Was she about to be stingy with her atmosphere?

"You don't forget your lines on that account, do you?"

"Sometimes I wish I could—I think an actress makes a mistake in being too familiar with her lines. She would let the audience help her to remember them. It is a sympathetic something I can't definitely explain."

"Does it hurt your feelings to be called a snake?"

"I am one—Bella Donna is one—she is a snake, but not in the beginning. In the first act she is a woman of the world."

"With the heart of a snake?"

"With a careless heart, not a dead one."

"It is only when the dominant passion comes to her that the snake assumes ascendancy in her nature?"

"She is prepared for defense."

"Is that a quality in love, true love?"

"It is a necessary good. One has to be equipped with all weapons to obtain and secure what one desires."

I wonder if one's desire is only a step-sister to Heart's Desire? Somehow it doesn't sound so much like a New Year's greeting, does it?

HER words were beginning to stand up on their tall and coil and twine like all the cobra lines in art nouveau.

To get one's desire it is apparent that one begins and works from the ground up, so the hiss and coil will have a meaning when the desire reaches the high pitch of expression. Small wonder we don't find such preparation for life's battle or love's battle in our seminaries and colleges. It would be rather difficult to collect facilities capable of instilling the climactic power in the pupils, and doubtless the wisdom procured thus conscientiously would not convey its ripe message of equipment to the family and intimate friends, handicapped from the start by snubborn opposition and relentless unipathy. The spirit of the Orient would lose its fragrant note. To be universal I fancy one has to arrange for her birth on the border of the East.

Training doesn't supply it. The breath, the flame, must be in the original setting, and no one assumes or presumes that this actress omitted these factors in her mental constitution.

"I want to go to Egypt," and the soft hiss of the coils was heard as a glowing certainty she would do so.

"Why not England?"

"What can I learn there? I'd get no response in any way."

"The 'universal' woman has a spirit, a soul not easily understood nor sympathized with in Mother England, New England and Manhattan"

"Love does not exist without desire, a condition many American women are afraid to recognize."

"The woman snake is 'universal.'"

"What do you get here outside of the breath, the skin, the fire of Egypt?"

"I go to moving pictures—I learn a lot—they are my delight, my recreation, action, movement—all pantomime is fascinating."

"You can't rehearse your Bella Donna part there, can you?"

"Why not? I carry my thoughts with me. I study every pose, the meaning of each gesture. In Paris I was absorbed by the work of Max Reinhardt's pantomime; moving pictures contain wonderful drama. Never a dull moment."

The last act of the last departed and the actress was on the verge of tangible enthusiasm. The serpent was losing its cunning. It rested peacefully, gently like a dinner gown in New York or Boston. It was, of course, draping a modern idea that suddenly rushed through her brain. Rather serviceable gown after all, and somewhat comfortable after its night of glides and wriggles, tortures, seething animation, wickedness, tenderness, joy, despair and pain.

I COULD not but wonder what Fifth Avenue and Broadway would look like if every woman dressed her mood, her purpose, her heart's desire, mind's desire, or any other desire that is reckoned as a feminine adjunct.

It would be a strange psychological parade. There would be new traffic laws for auras, and streets set apart for the yellow, mauve, crimson, purple and pale pink souls; special police escorts for the snakes, tigers, cats, she wolves, hens, polar bears, chickens, monkeys, elephants.

Active imaginations need never grow stale in the presence of the Russian.

The humanizing process of the actress was almost asserting itself—moving picture memories had dissolved the snake-like glints.

"Would the cinematograph help in the average woman's development—the American woman's, I mean?"

"Do they develop? I don't know. They never told me."

"Yet you must admit they do love and live?"

"Do they love? I never saw it. Do they live? I never noticed it. They never speak of it to me—they never indicate that loving and living are taking up their time and attention. If I knew, if somebody would only show me, I might be able to learn, though I would not be a success because I am not English and cannot get a thrill in Anglo-Saxon methods. I do not pretend to know anything about the ways and means they use to accomplish what they go out to gain. If they achieve the end they may or may not declare their knowledge. It couldn't affect me in any way. I would be only a patient listener. I was not created with their interpretation, was I? They may be cold marble or white flame. I cannot distinguish, and I don't have to, do I?"

The right foot of the actress was slowly feeling its way toward the train of the robe; the snake was waking up. It wouldn't devour the train, but it gave evidence of resting uneasily, and the thought of life in the open came stealing quickly, quietly over me.

"How's your husband this morning, Mrs. Finnigan?"

"Oh he's very poorly, very nervous. And it's a mighty expensive disease he's got. The doctor says I've to keep him in good spirits."

Johnson—Ah, I see the newspapers are speaking about me again this morning.

Simpson—Indeed! In what connection?

Johnson—Well, they say that at the close of last week there were over five millions of people in London. I am one of them.

Mr. Pigeon is altogether too literal.

How so?

The last time he was at my house I told him to make himself thoroughly at home and in less than five minutes he had quarreled with my wife, kicked the parrot out of doors, discharged the cook, spanked the baby and told me I was a fool.

A County Kerry man about 70 years old, who had spent most of his life in London, suddenly went to Chicago. He had a job as night watchman at a North Side house.

One day the daughter of the house had a talk with the old man. He told her his life story. He longed for Ireland.

"Why, miss," he said, "I'm so lonesome I can't even get a funeral and enjoy it."

Mr. Fussum—Mr. Fussum, what tense is "I love"?

Mr. Fussum looking at the girl with knowing eyes—Intense!

ARE OUR CLOTHES RIDICULOUS?

The Argument to the Contrary, the Best Argument You've Heard, Is Here—With Presented The Presentation of the Facts Is New, Bigger and Different.

By JANET VALE.

"That Was Before."

It wasn't cruel. It was downright thoughtless, but she may be won over to our side yet. It will take a feminine clothesline four years long to show the evidence, but the defense is so well prepared that any jury of men will decide against the plaintiff.

Who is the plaintiff, and why are her feelings hurt? She lives in Columbus, O., is a member of one of the best fashionable families in the State, and as in the preferred list of the social register in Columbus. By name, Mrs. W. K. Liggett.

Mrs. Liggett recovered her sight a few days ago after four years of wretched blindness, and her first glimpse was directed toward the clothing of those who try to be conspicuous.

"The new styles are dreadful," she exclaimed. "Women in perfect fragility. I never imagined they could dress so unbecomingly."

When the light faded for Mrs. Liggett she and the women of her set were wearing:

Skirts that trailed over the streets—long, full skirts, wide at the top and narrow at the bottom, refusing to be tucked up and away along with them refuse to be tucked up and away along with them.

Come to think of it, one street never have been what you might call clean since women abandoned the flapping, saucer-like costume for the present one, which is so constructed that the dirt and unpleasantness remains where it was originally deposited—on the sidewalk or in the street.

HATS that perched distantly on the head, tilted forward in the background of pompadours, or rested precariously over the ear.

Openwork stockings for the street.

Sleeves with a flying tendency at the shoulders. Tennis and golf skirts that contained more than three times the necessary amount of material.

Tight corsets, drawn in at the waist and ready to fall upon the slightest exertion of exercise. A man who impersonated women on the street died the other day because he had so dreadfully tight thought corsets were worn that way—the way of four years ago.

When Mrs. Liggett looked over the styles she saw the transgression of Gladys Vanderbilt and Theodore Shonts' citations from Paris—all created as described above, all beautiful, conventional and eminently fitting for the occasion.

She remembered too that her friends dressed more extravagantly for afternoon bridges for receptions in their homes. They did not attire themselves in now a trim, rather tight fitting frock or long blouse and narrow skirt. She overlooked in her summation that one of the skirts of the costumes prevailing in those days would make tolerable acceptable gowns for a mother and daughter to day. If daughter's skin seems a bit skimp here and there then the dress may be blamed for it and the tendency for straight and narrow lines must assume the responsibility.

WHAT if Mrs. Liggett had awakened to things as they were early in the Spring, when the painter with his audacious threat, was in our midst? She soon would have found she had been summoned to a false alarm. The painter never went much farther than from the models to the camera.

Who were them in Paris? Models and certain actresses who found them a sure medium by which to break into print.

The Parisienne is a conservative sort of a person. Her clothes drape her ideas, and her ideas don't loop the loop in paper form of expression.

Hear ye! Hear ye! The sheath skirt? It was four years ago when the first one was seen on Broadway, and it was four years ago less one or two days that the last was given an outing. Yet the sheath was the beginning of things as they are to-day. It was ridiculed shamefully and, according to many, justly. It was too sudden. It didn't glide in and take your fancy unawares.

AMERICAN women went abroad to investigate, and after a careful survey, accepted the judgment of French dressmakers and secured "modified" sheaths, meaning narrow skirts, with a little underskirt showing. The narrowing process has been going on ever since.

Next, attention was turned to the corset, which had been trained to emphasize the waist line. Women no longer laced in at the waist, they laced in at the hips. In all happened quickly, and the straight front corset became the best seller on the market. No household was complete, no apartment was furnished without it.

Enter now Dr. Reducers!

It became apparent straight fronts are more comfortable when accompanied by lean and lanky loins. Women began to diet, to walk, to stand after eating, to drink nothing but hot water, to regard a cocktail as a small-pox germ, and potato as a calamity more to be feared than a Turkish invasion.

Women bathed in Epsom salts, wore rubber harnesses over the chest and hips at night, tied up chins in rubber, read while standing, slept on their stomachs to prevent the fat from increasing in the neck, steamed and roasted themselves in Turkish baths, were content to live and move among us hungry, thirsty, sleepy and weary for Art's sake, for the sake of the new dawn heralded by that dreadful sheath skirt.

NOW when they see a tight skirt they want to be led to it. If they like it they will shape themselves so they may get into and be a part of it.

Think of the control, the moral discipline, the self-sacrifice embodied in a tight skirt!

True, some rash souls rush in without preparation, but they pay the price. Oh, they pay the price at home and abroad. Husbands, fathers, sons, brothers, laugh if the hips have not overcome the fadeaway process. Neighbors, kind souls, maybe, make merry jests, paragraphs use them for copy, traffic halts, ministers deplore, the stage portrays, but what is the result? Few persist, and styles are kind, often providing a wider opening here and there or a falling drape that relieves the long embarrassment.

All women know that in the trend of fashion there is ever likely to be an avenue of escape, and they sort of specialize on the day, waiting to take advantage of the trend.

But women mustn't rely too much on paper patterns. The kind that are mapped out with little rows of pinholes. They must try them on their aunts' best in pleasant homelike spirit and take a straw vote at the bedside before investing in material. It would be difficult to live down the venture otherwise.

It has been said lately about America being the place for the best, safest and most correct designs for women's costuming. While Paris is on the map this dream will not come true. Paris is the only place in the world where creative ability is actually shown. The dressmakers there are never too busy to spend days weeks in museums, art galleries and libraries in order to find some more effective way to drape women. Paris never took the paper seriously—it never tried to copy it on the world. It wanted it to grow used to it, and so in the Spring after everybody had a new wardrobe for the Summer, Paris exhibited her new and then. Heretofore, said the world. But she has the world rushed to the French metropolis to find it the horror to view, suspect and shudder at it, and a few gall-less souls adopted it.

Oh, how sorry they were!

In the Autumn, said the dressmakers of the heads of the Parisian fashion, the new style was to be the new style.

And there it is, to-day. It has fallen gracefully and kindly to the bottom of the skirt and left the skirt to follow its own way, so that every one in the way of a skirt is wearing it, as if it were in her own slippers.

Now there are draped skirts, draped evening coats, and long, smart, trim, trimmed coats of broadened skirts and plush with long lines sloping from the front into the back.

There is one actress in Paris who a fairly sets the styles. She is always the first society woman, home and abroad, to follow her. She never has been to this country, but she frequently goes to England. They call her "the one" in Paris and her dressing. She is a woman who has done much for the world, but a woman who has done much for the world.

It suggests a whole lot of things for so much of the world's taste of beauty, so many men servants waiting so much and standing so high. Truly, if that is her idea of beauty in the home, she does well to put herself in the hands of master minds and grow a reputation for individuality and originality in dress.

Truly, if that is her idea of beauty in the home, she does well to put herself in the hands of master minds and grow a reputation for individuality and originality in dress.

ONE of the best little advertisements among the opera singers was given once on going into a Paris restaurant for supper to find a music man only personally clothed in a gown identical with hers. She was on her way to New York. This was no secret—the musical comedy and was located in London. The dressmaker took a chance but he met with a reckoning in the morning when the opera personality found in her teeth vocabulary words sufficient to indicate his traits, his instincts, destination and the character practices and origin of his ancestors.

Of course you know this refers to Mary Garden and her efficient way of handling situations, no matter how unpleasant they are for the other fellow or for herself for that matter.

And there is Mrs. Philip Lydie who wears exquisite things but doesn't let her extravagance end with our ward and visible signs. Mrs. Lydie believes in costuming from the ground up, and spent $65,000 in lingerie in Paris the past few months.

Really, the only way to judge fashions to day is to inspect the women who actually know something about them.

It is a fine achievement to possess a gown, but it is a fine art to know how to wear it.

To the woman who wants to rush into a tight frock, regardless of art and public opinion listen to these few words. Don't, unless your figure has been trimmed for it. Because Mrs. Lydie is equipping in a straight up and down costume topped with a little tailored hat, it is no sign it is the chosen thing for you.

ROAST your friends—don't toast the styles. Look at the fashion pages, read over—the fashion pages of the past—realize your escape from crinoline and bustles, and know that to-day there is plenty of opportunity for you to be a part of the artistic present.

If you don't know how to come in, stay well outside the portals until you do, and then enter as if you were used to it. You will get away with it, and rest and sit naturally after the first is over.

Remember, too, you don't have to monopolize all the plumes and flowers in trying out a new hat. Take a few at a time, a hat at a time. Don't decorate yourself and don't wear all you possess on your head simply because you had it in the house or you saw it in stock. Share it with yourself or with others.

And beware of white feathers—few, oh so few can wear them. They make any skin ugly, and the competition with beauty is too apparent and too sad.

Why do large women wear purple and pink?

Always hesitate before you select a large hat—only a pretty woman can take a chance. If you do, then we are grateful for the confession, but usually you are brave and frequently you are mistaken.

Another thing—in order to appear attractive when you choose a gown that gives an impression of loose and easy lines you must be well corseted. Otherwise you are sloppy—and sloppy is a near-sister of sloppy.

It is well to bear these things in mind, because there are plenty of critics in the world who, unlike Mrs. Liggett, are not inclined to tell the truth to your face, but do a lot of suggesting behind your back.

Could it be that Mrs. Liggett found little to attract her in the way the modern woman walks? Doesn't the poor dear know that the quick step in a hobble requires faithful preparation, practice and concentration? That the absent minded wearer is likely to tie up her wardrobe for repairs?

Think of the character you thus have a chance to develop while muscle bound in skirts! You can't run for a car, you can't run out of the path of one. All this may annoy you, but you may count ten or ten times ten over and gain until you have forgotten what you are peevish about.

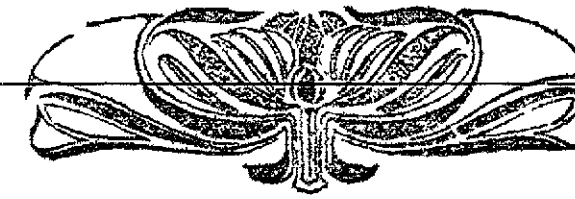

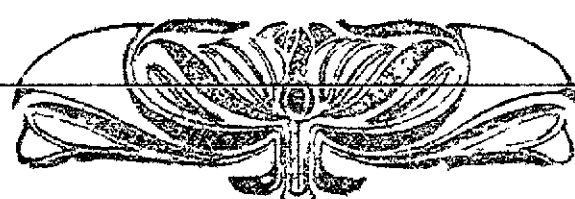

How queer it all is! Four years ago women in the east were not marching for the suffrage, even if they were then more becomingly costumed for street battle. Now with the narrow skirts binding us round and round, we march to red light, we climb on wagons and boxes we expound and implore, but the records have yet to show any unpleasantness resulting from scantiness of cut.

No fatalities—rather remarkable when one considers—

"This Is After."

Neighbors, kind souls, may be made merry, jealous, paragraphs use them for copy, traffic halls, ministers deplore, the stage portage, but what is the result? They persist, and styles are kind, often providing a wider opening here and there, or a falling drape that relieves the long embarrasment.

All women know that in the trend of fashion there is ever likely to be an avenue of escape, and they sort of specialize on the day, waiting to take advantage of the trend.

But women mustn't rely too much on paper patterns, the kind that are matted up with little rows of punches. They must try them on their aunts first in pleasant, homelike spirit, and take a straw vote at the fireside before investing in material. It would be difficult to live down the venture otherwise.

MUCH has been said lately about America being the place for the best, safest and most correct designs for women's costumes. While Paris is on the map this dream will not come true. Paris is the only place in the world where creative ability is actually shown. The dressmakers there are never too busy to spend days or weeks in museums, art galleries and libraries in order to learn of some more effective way to drape women.

Paris never took the panier seriously—it never tried to impose it on the world. It wanted it to grow used to diaphanities, and so in the Spring, after everybody had acquired her wardrobe for the Summer, Paris exhibited a panier now and then. "Horror!" said the world. But novertalness the world rushed to the French metropolis to look at the horror, to view, inspect and shudder at it, and a few guileless souls adopted it.

Oh, how sorry they were!

"In the Autumn," said the dressmakers of the heads of Dreyer, Paquin, Callot, Beer, Monge, Worth, Doucet, "the drapery will have fallen to the feet."

And there it is to-day. It has fallen gracefully, gently and kindly to the bottom of the skirt and left the smooth outline in its wake, so that every one in any way qualified for wearing it is glowing in her own slenderness.

Now there are draped skirts, draped evening coats, chiffon tunics, smart, fur trimmed coats of broad velvet and plush with long lines sloping from the front into the back.

THE woman who finds fault with the fashions to-day has a rather bad dressmaker, and she ought to be ashamed to talk that way about a man or woman who works so hard for his living.

Madame Monge said recently: "People cannot justly laugh at to-day's fashions—they may laugh occasionally at the figures of the women who adopt them. All American women know how to dress well—few French women do. But that same few are superior in taste to Americans and all others for that matter."

To one who makes up after four years it might be well to question the artistic taste of individuals before condemning the fashions that prevail, for if a woman looks absolutely hopeless in the styles of to-day she may create some of her own. Individuality was an opening always and the entrance doors are never forced by a crowd.

There is one actress in Paris who actually sets the styles—she is always the first society woman, home and abroad, follow her. She never has been to this country, though she frequently goes to England. They follow her in clothes, in hats and hair dressing. She is not a passing music hall favorite, but a woman who has done big roles for years, yet her house is furnished most atrociously. It suggests a wholesale order for so much plush, so many yards of tapestry, so many men servants weighing so much and standing so high. Truly, if that is her idea of beauty in the home she does well to put herself in the hands of master minds and grow a reputation for individuality and originality in dress.

ONE of the best little advertisers among the opera singers was greatly vexed once on going into a Paris restaurant for supper to find a musical comedy personality, clothed in a gown identical with hers. She was on her way to New York. This was no secret—the musical comedy girl was located in London. The dressmaker took a chance, but he met with a reckoning in the morning when the opera personality found in her ready vocabulary words sufficient to indicate his traits, his instincts, destination, and the character, practice and origin of his ancestors.

Of course you know this refers to Mary Garden and her efficient way of handling situations, no matter how unpleasant they are, for the other fellow or for herself, for that matter.

And there is Mrs. Philip Lydig, who wears exquisite things but doesn't let her extravagance end with outward and visible signs. Mrs. Lydig believes in costing from the ground up, and spent $65,000 in lingerie in Paris the past few months.

Really, the only way to judge fashions to-day is to inspect the women who actually know something about them.

It is a fine achievement to possess a gown, but it is a fine art to know how to wear it.

To the woman who wants to rush into a tight frock, regardless of art and public opinion, listen to these few words: Don't, unless your figure has been summed for it. Because Mrs. Lydig is cunning in a straight up and down costume, topped with a little tailored hat, it is no sign it is the chosen thing for you.

ROAST your friends—don't roast the styles. Look the fashion pages well over—the fashion pages of the past—reading your escape from criminal and bustles, and know that to-day there is plenty of opportunity for you to be a part of the artistic present.

If you don't know how to come in, stay well outside the portals until you do, and then enter as if you were used to it. You will get away with it, and rest and sit naturally after the first is over.

Remember, too, you don't have to monopolize all the plumes and flowers in trying out a new hat. Take a few at a time, a hat at a time. Don't decorate yourself and don't wear all you possess on your head simply because you had it in the house or you saw it in stock. Shake with yourself or with others.

And beware of white feathers—few, oh! so few can wear them. They make any skin ugly, and the competition with beauty is too apparent and too sad.

When in doubt wear black, or black and white.

Why do large women wear purple and pink?

Always hesitate before you select a large hat—only a pretty woman can take a chance. If you do, then we are grateful for the confession, but usually you are brave and frequently you are mistaken.

Another thing in order to appear attractive when you wear a gown that gives an impression of loose and easy lines you must be well corrected. Otherwise you are floppy—and floppy is a near-sister of floppy.

It is well to bear these things in mind, because there are plenty of critics in the world who, unlike Mrs. Liggett, are not inclined to tell the truth to your face, but do a lot of suggesting behind your back.

Could it be that Mrs. Liggett found little to attract her in the way the modern woman walks? Doesn't the poor dear know that the quick step in a hobble requires faithful preparation, practice and concentration? That the absent-minded wearer is likely to tie up her wardrobe for weeks?

Think of the character you thus have a chance to develop while muscles bound in skirts! You can't run for a car, you can't run out of the path of one. All this may annoy you, but you may count ten or ten times ten over and again until you have forgotten what you are peevish about.

How queer it all is! Four years ago women in the east were not marching for the suffrage, even if they were then more becomingly costumed for street battle. Now with the narrow skirts binding us round and round, we are asked to yell fight, we climb on wagons and boxes, we expound and implore, but the records have yet to show any unpleasantness resulting from scantiness of cut.

A CHILD LABOR HORROR

"AND they were bringing unto him little children, that he should touch them; and the disciples rebuked them." But when Jesus saw it, he was moved with indignation, and said unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me; forbid them not; for to such belongeth the kingdom of God. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall in no wise enter therein. And he took them in his arms, and blessed them, laying his hands upon them. * * * Whosoever shall receive one of such little children in my name, receiveth me, and whosoever receiveth me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me."

Nineteen centuries have passed since Jesus took the little children in his arms and blessed them. Nineteen centuries during which his gracious words of love and brotherhood have been preached to all the world.

But the world has been slow to accept his teachings. There are little children today, thousands and thousands of them, whose weary bodies would so gladly welcome the soothing arms of the master who held to his breast the little Jewish children of nineteen hundred years ago!

It seems inconceivable that such things could happen, in the richest state of our Christian nation, as have come to light during an investigation of New York canning factories. A Vassar girl, Mary Elizabeth Chamberlain, her name deserves to be remembered, worked in many factories in order actually to observe conditions. And here are some of the facts to which she testified, under oath, before the investigating committee of the legislature:

Children as young as 6, 5 and even 4 years worked in the factories, "snipping beans." Their hours were often from 4 in the morning, sometimes until midnight. "Some of the children would fall asleep. Others would cry and want to quit work, but I have seen them whacked by their parents and compelled to stay at their tasks."

"One little fellow, Jack I called him, told me one morning he had been pulled out of bed at 3 o'clock, and he had been up until 12 o'clock the night before. 'Honest, Miss Chamberlain,' said he, 'it didn't seem as if I was in bed a minute.'" Think how gratefully little Jack would have cuddled up in the arms of the Nazarene.

For their work the children receive a pitifully few cents a day. "After the factory commission visited one of the canneries where I was working the boss said children under 5 years of age could not work there any more."

And that is how the greatest state in the Union is suffering little children to come unto Jesus!

The blame for such conditions rests directly upon the church that Jesus founded and left to carry on his work. In New York more than half the population is affiliated with some church. A majority of the people are professedly followers of Jesus. Christian people, then, could, united, control New York's government.

Can there be the least doubt that if the men and women of the church were in earnest in following out Jesus' commandment concerning the little children such facts could be brought to light, in this year 1912, as have just been testified to in open court?

The lesson Christianity must learn is that Jesus came to do more than merely to teach a creed. He gave the world a complete scheme of life, a brotherhood in which it should be the highest pleasure of the strong to protect the weak; in which he should be greatest who should serve most; in which the highest ideal for his followers should be to love others with something of the same heroic self-sacrifice he had shown in loving them.

Divided for centuries into warring sects, splitting hairs over abstruse theological abstractions, Christianity has in the past largely failed to recognize its tremendous mission. But a new day is dawning. The cessity of creeds is vanishing; the necessity of work is more and more receiving recognition.

Is it too much to hope that within a very short time now the iniquity of child labor will be forever done away with? Or that, in the warfare on this and all other social evils, humanity shall be led by the Christian church, which was founded by Jesus for that very work?

NOT THE MIDDLEMAN'S FAULT

VARIOUS and numerous are the remedies suggested for the high cost of living. Some suggest revision of the tariff, others destruction of the trusts, still others elimination of the middleman. It is usually agreed, by American politicians, that the one thing above all others necessary to a reduction of the cost of living is the preservation or restoration of competition.

But Albert W. Atwood shows, in an article on "The Middleman" in the November Review of Reviews, that competition itself is one of the most potent elements in increasing the cost of living. The Sherman law prohibits trade agreements among competitors. Thus it results that, at one apartment house in New York delivery wagons from 20 different grocery concerns were counted in one day. One wagon might have made deliveries for the entire house. But this could have been done only if the grocers had been permitted to enter into an agreement for the division of territory.

Probably the biggest waste in modern industry occurs in distribution. Retail business is done at a frightful cost. Each grocery store must deliver all over the city, possibly only to one house in a block. While production has been largely organized, in spite of the Sherman law, distribution has scarcely been touched by modern organization.

And society pays for it all. Mr. Atwood estimates that retail stores add on the average 33 1-3 per cent to the cost of articles sold by them, yet that their profit averages less than 5 per cent. While a large part of the increased cost of living is due to the sale of goods in package and in tins and jars, rather than in bulk, much of it is due to lack of organization in retail distribution.

Mr. Atwood suggests that agreements be permitted, under restrictions forbidding unfair practices. He would have all agreements reported to a trade commission, which would publish all details. Publicity, he declares, will prevent the evils of consolidation. "And it will then be found that as wrongful methods of competition disappear before the light, in which they cannot thrive, much of the dreaded tendency toward the concentration, consolidation and centralization of our industries will dissolve into thin air."

"The problem of the cheap production of manufactured goods," he says, "has, broadly speaking, been solved. Improvements in farm machinery and better methods in farming tend toward cheaper production of agricultural products. The problem of today is to secure cheaper distribution of these products to the consumers. It cannot be solved by throwing hindrances and obstacles in the way of the producers. On the contrary, every consideration of policy and good sense demands that they be permitted to eliminate all possible waste and duplication of service."

NOT A QUITTER

REPORTS that "Boss" Flinn of Pennsylvania would renounce the Progressive party and return to the Republican fold prove to have been somewhat premature. He announces that he will attend the Progressive conference in Chicago next week. He insists that the Pennsylvania legislature will redeem the promise of progressive legislation made in the state platform.

Moreover, he has proposed, as his idea of the right kind of governor for 1914, the name of Dean Lewis of the Pennsylvania University Law School. Even the Philadelphia Public Ledger is compelled to admit that Dean Lewis is head and shoulders above any candidate proposed by either of the old parties, and that perhaps it judged too harshly in insisting that all Flinn's efforts in behalf of the Progressive cause were purely selfish.

WOMEN CLERKS NOT IN DANGER.
 To the Editor of The Gazette:

I read in your issue of November 28 an article in regard to the eight-hour law for women, signed "Alta Jordan."

In reply, I wish to say that I do not see how the merchants expect to better themselves by employing men clerks instead of women. They will have to pay from $3 to $5 per week more for men than for women, and how much trade will they gain? Go into any of our stores here in Colorado Springs after 5:30 and what are the conditions? A few sales are being made, perhaps, but most of the clerks are simply waiting for 6 o'clock to come, and the customers, what few there are, would have been there earlier the conditions are the same in the morning before 8:30.

The extra heat and light used would require more of an outlay than the profits on the few sales would amount to.

Furthermore, the people of Colorado at the last election spoke in no uncertain tone in regard to this matter, and they will give their custom to those up-to-date merchants who are willing to respect the wishes of the majority and give the working girl a chance.

A great many people can remember when it was the custom to keep stores open till 8 or 10 o'clock every night. Who would wish to go back to that system again?

And yet there were many penniless merchants who opposed that change and thought they would have to go out of business or go to the poor house if they had to close at 6 o'clock.

A SOCIALIST'S VIEW OF THE CHURCH.

To the Editor of The Gazette:
 In surveying American fortunes we discover the fact that none of our rich Christian brothers have acquired their earthly possessions large or small, by following the teachings of the New Testament. Everywhere the business world is practicing the Golden Rule reversed, and none of our pious business men would keep in their employ plighted men and women of the type of Jesus. Why? Because living is the basic foundation of the modern business world. Go where you may, in stores or shops for instance, and you will soon discover that it does not require much time to find out that living is the soul of commerce. In the business world would not exist for any length of time if those employed about stores and shops would, like good Christians, insist on telling the whole truth about the shoddy merchandise they are handling.

Let's be consistent and acknowledge the fact that we do not want as clerks men and women of the type of Jesus.

Now, as our present society is based on a "booked-up" which is more logical than that the church supported it, it is by the business world, should keep mum about the conduct of its supporting pillars.

If an occasional minister should be somewhat revolutionary and insist on telling his congregation the terrible struggle the mass of toilers are engaged in you may rest easy that such a minister will join the army of unemployed and be a preacher without a church. The bread and butter question is uppermost even in the minds of the clergy, hence sermons to suit those who employ them.

SCRIPTURE

II KINGS IV: 1-5.
 Now there cried a certain woman of the wives of the sons of the prophet unto Elisha, saying, Thy servant my husband is dead, and thou knowest that thy servant did fear the Lord and the creditor is come to take unto him my two sons to be bondmen.

And Elisha said unto her, What shall I do for thee? tell me what thou hast thou in the house? And she said, Thine handmaid hath not any thing in the house, save a pot of oil.

Then he said, Go, borrow three vessels abroad of all thy neighbors, even empty vessels, borrow not a few.

And when thou art come in, thou shalt shut the door upon thee, and upon thy sons, and shalt pour out into all those vessels, and thou shalt set aside that which is full.

So she went from him, and shut the door upon her, and upon her sons, who brought the vessels to her, and she poured out.

And it came to pass, when the vessels were full, that she said unto her son, Bring me yet a vessel. And he said unto her, There is not a vessel more. And the oil stayed.

IF THIS IS YOUR BIRTHDAY
 Attend to the things at hand. If this is done well you will have no time for new enterprises. If in employ, your best attention should be given to your own special work.

Those born today will make great progress if well directed. They will have many talents, but will not be able to devote for themselves what course to take. Their faults will be those of frivolity.

TO THEODORE ROOSEVELT

(A reprint of a part of William Watson's recent volume in the London News.)

And wouldst thou drive once more that giant prow?
 Perhaps thou shalt and must! But if the choice Fall on a lesser voyager, thou shalt still
 Be what thou art thy nation's living voice
 Wherever she speaks in thunder. Nay, thou art her fiery pulse, her conquering will;
 Thou art America, dauntless Theodore.

ELECTRICITY AS FOOD

From the Scientific American.
 A French scientist has brought out the fact that the electric current can serve to some extent in the place of nourishment for the human body. Should this idea be carried to its full limits, it may be possible to dispense with taking food and simply remain for a few minutes in a high frequency electric cage, so as to have the body saturated with what might be called electrical nourishment, or, in more accurate language, the electric current acts to restore energy to the human body in a manner which is analogous to the effect of food.

When high frequency currents first began to be used, as Professor Bergonié says, it was shown by D'Arsonval that these could set up very striking heat effects in the organism, so that the human body is internally heated. Owing to their harmful action no other effect than development of heat is produced.

The liver, heart or brain can receive the high frequency currents without any bad effect upon their working. Thus the current can supply as large an amount of energy as is desired to the human body, provided the heat is not brought too high, as is the case with the electro-coagulation method. But it is not hard to keep within the proper limits, and no danger need occur.

With some organisms which are weakened on account of their being deprived of nourishment for any cause, the general temperature may become lowered even by two degrees. A person can thus lose a quantity of heat which is represented by one-twelfth of the daily ration of that organism.

It is not, therefore, a wonderful result to make up for this deficit without out calling upon the digestive organs and without increasing one's daily ration, also without introducing any drugs into the blood of tissues. Electricity allows of sending a quantity of energy which may be considerable into the living organism under the form of high frequency and low tension currents, and this action can be repeated as often as is needed.

He finds that in experiments made at Bordeaux with college overworked or enfeebled persons, anemics and the like, showed that the current caused a toning up of the system and abolished stomach overwork. Force reappeared and he found a considerable gain in weight. Commenting on this, he remarks that we once thought that chemistry would solve the problem of food, and that we could be nourished by chemical products. But this does not appear to be realized even in this age of progress. Perhaps electricity will now be able to come in where chemistry failed and in the future ages we will be electrically fed.

MOST COSILY PORCELAIN SERVICE

From the Scientific American.

At an exhibition of works of art at present being held in St. Petersburg there may be seen a set of porcelain dishes which are considered the most costly in the world. It consists of 38 hand-colored plates. This set has an estimated value of 36,000 rubles ($18,540), a single plate, therefore, being worth 1,000 rubles ($515). It is the property of Count Orloff-Davidoff.

The total number of cattle on farms in the United States has decreased 20 per cent in the last five years.

THE HASKIN LETTER

THE FISH INDUSTRY
IX—PREPARING FOR THE MARKET

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

There was never a time when the markets afforded such a variety in the fish foods, and each season brings out new novelties in this line. Additional ways are being discovered of serving many old varieties so as to accord to their toothsome. The methods of handling all kinds of fish foods have improved in proportion to the increasing demand for food sanitation and many agencies have combined to influence the housewife of the present to allow fish to act as a substitute for flesh to a degree never before considered possible.

Nothing is more attractive in the way of food preparation than the great packing houses in New England in which salt fish is prepared for the market. One does not expect such condition as an accompaniment of fish packing, consequently a visit to one of these establishments is a complete revelation. The first thing noticeable is the immaculate appearance of the women and girls doing the work. The girls working in a millinery supply factory, a shirt waist factory, or even an artificial flower shop, are slovenly looking in comparison with these attractive young people in the crispest and freshest laundered waists and dresses who sit and stand in rows beside long clean tables putting up salt cod, smoked halibut and herring in suitable packages for the retail trade.

Cod fish is of course the most important product of these establishments and it is put up in a number of different ways. The conservative housewife who still desires to purchase her codfish whole as a part of her supplies for the winter can do so, only now the fish is handled in a cleaner manner and is superior in quality. The average housewife, however, prefers to buy it in smaller quantities, and her preference has been considered. This clean, frequently weighed, salted fish is now taken and cut by machinery into divided into even lengths and the best pieces are packed whole in carefully lined wooden boxes or neat paraffine paper packages. These can be soaked until the surplus salt is removed and then cooked by baking or boiling and served whole in a most attractive form. This constitutes the highest grade of selected fish.

Can Serve as a Cat's.
 The smaller pieces which are not of the required size for the first grade, although of equal quality, may be made up into smaller packages and served as cutlets after they are cut into narrow strips and the bones removed, or they may be dedicated or picked into fine pieces so as to enable the cook to provide her family with cod fish cakes upon short notice. The same care is observed in preparing each form. No one who would see the fish put up would harbor any fear of buying even the small pieces or the dedicated fish on account of the surplus fish being sold in this manner.

The boning of the fish is a tedious process which is still done by hand. A woman going through one of the cod fish packing plants, took occasion to examine the hands of the girls doing this work. She expected to find them rough and scratched from contact with the small sharp bones. Instead she found the fingers smooth and the nails well cared for. A small nickel plated pincher is utilized for pulling out the bones. While most of the wrapping is now done by hand, in some of the factories machinery is being introduced so that certain brands are sold which are not touched by the human hand.

In addition to cod the factories put up smoked salted halibut and smoked herring, the latter carefully cleaned and boned. The rooms for smoking are as carefully arranged as the laboratory experiment station. The same quantity of fuel is used in proportion to the quantity of fish each day. The temperature is kept at the same degree and the fish remain a certain time according to the grade, their thickness and the brand to be secured. The average time for smoking halibut is 4 hours.

Varieties Available.
 In addition to the varieties of salt fish great strides have been made in the methods of handling fresh fish and the modern methods of refrigeration have been perfected. Even in the inland towns, where 20 years ago fresh fish was almost an unheard of luxury, the choicest varieties are now available at all times of the year. It has frequently been stated that the demand for fresh fish was decreasing and that that industry was diminishing each other. Neither of these statements is correct, although it is true that less salt fish is eaten where fresh fish is procurable. The exports of salt fish, especially to the tropical countries are greater in proportion as the supply of fresh fish becomes available for home consumption. The efforts being made by the Housewives League of New York to increase the use of fresh fish in the city are meeting with the hearty cooperation of the fish dealers. The sending of notices to 175,000 league members when fish were to be plentiful and correspondingly cheap was an innovation of this year. The need of some better way of distributing food in order that it be placed in the hands of the consumer without the profits of several middlemen is one which wholesale dealers and fishermen are considering now.

The bureau of fisheries, through its agents, as well as a number of other organizations, are constantly in quest of new fish with which to tempt the capricious palate. There has recently been brought forward from Olympia, Washington, a new variety of Atlantic salmon, which is being marketed in large number of packages. It is known scientifically as the Oncorhynchus Gulosus, and specimens of it were sent to the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences as far back as 1881. The Indians knew it as the Quenich and gathered it in large quantities and dried it for their winter supply. This clam frequently weighs seven or eight pounds and is cut in slices and fried like cutlets. It is said by some to resemble duck in flavor.

Artificial Caviar.
 Among the newer developments in American food is the preparation of sturgeon eggs as caviar. This is being produced in great quantities each week and there are many who prefer it to the imported Russian caviar which it closely resembles both in appearance and taste, although it is usually lighter in color. This one of the products of the Great Lakes fishery, although the sturgeon is also found to some extent in many sections of the country.

The custom of eating frogs is increasing in this country and frog fishing is fast becoming a lucrative industry. The frogs for the New York market chiefly come from around Philadelphia. In Boston the supply of frogs is upon the increase and there is some talk of canning them. Only the hind quarters are taken and the average price for the fisherman from twenty cents a dozen up to a dollar and more in the winter. There is a good demand for frogs in the St. Louis market where they are shipped and boned. The rooms for smoking

The Toxin of Christmas

THE STORY OF A LITTLE SHOP GIRL
Her Struggle With Late Christmas Buyers That Might Easily Have Been Spared

By ARTHUR B. REEVE

(Exclusive Service The Survey Press Bureau)

Whirls of fine feathery flakes filled the crisp night which foretold the coming of a white Christmas on the morrow. The wheels of the delivery wagons crunched along with that ringing sound that tells the tale of the temperature better than the thermometer itself.

Under the flaming arc lights of the street the snow glistened in the air and on the coats and hats of the gay, pushing throngs, laden with bundles. Everywhere seemed to be joy, prosperity, good will on the surface.

Struggling into the big store a human tide contended with another human tide struggling to escape. Within the store, aisles were crowded, a vista of faces and furs as far as the eye could reach. The counters overflowed with goods waiting to be bought or sent on the mission of love. And yet there was no peace and good will here. It was struggle and chaos and ill-humor and stifling air, an inferno of exhaustion, from which the human tide that surged out of the doors was glad to escape.

One huge counter was laden with paper Christmas bells, garlands and wreaths. There were bells in the brightest of red, in the brightest of green, bells in red and green together, bells of enormous size that could be folded up and shoved into an overcoat pocket, little bells that could be strung along dancing merrily on a cord, bells that betokened the message of peace on earth—and tonight a riot at the counter to get something that had been put off until the last minute.

Behind the long counter half a dozen girls, "first floor sales girls" were busy, selling, answering questions, handing back change, crying out now and then shrilly, "check, trying hard to be courteous now and then spurred on by the watchful floorwalker who, with piercing eye, seemed to see even half a moment's pause in the rush to sell. The time schedule of these girls had not been lengthened by night work but in this store by a reduction of the lunch and supper periods. It was the glad season when even the law does not protect—the 18th to the 24th of December.

Tessie's fingers were numb. In the mad rush, she had cut them here and there on the sharp edges of the paper, painful cuts that smarted with a pain only deadened by her exhaustion. Her feet were swollen with long hours of standing. She knew nothing about the toxin of fatigue about which the doctors and social workers study and write. But she could have told them much from her own experience of the subtle poison that fatigue was injecting into the glad Christmas season for her.

There was no pause for the little girl with the dreamy face, sensitive mouth, and delicate blue-veined hands. "Yes, ma'am, five cents for that size. These are twelve for a dollar. No more all out of the largest size. The ten-cent size. How many, please? Five? Fifty cents. Your change? Just a moment. No, the holly boxes and ribbons are in the next counter. Postal cards across the aisle. Half-dozen bells? Thirty cents, please."

All the worldliness of rich New York, all the sordidness of the metropolis was passing in a kaleidoscope crowd before the eyes of Tessie, but she was too tired to care much about anything. She tried to force her eyes to watch the clock on the gallery at the end of the aisle.

"Hello, Tess."

It was Mazie, who had worked with Tessie last year at the handkerchief counter but had been laid off in the slack season during the summer.

Tessie had not seen her since then. She remembered Mazie as a plump-faced girl who had lost a good deal of her freshness in the store but none of her wilfulness. Was this the same Mazie? There were color now on her cheeks, but it was not the color of the crisp night air. Her black eyes sparkled, but there was a look of boldness in them that grated on the sensitive nature of Tessie. Yet there was no denying that Mazie was pretty. Even her cheap fur coat and rakish hat did not wholly spoil it.

"Hello, Tess. They told me that you were at this counter. I thought I'd stop and see you. I came into get some Christmas cards. I always send a little card to the sellers who are so good to me, on holidays. I'll be right along, and I'm careful not to send 'em anywhere it'll cause trouble."

She laughed, the laugh of a girl of the world. But it sent a shudder through Tessie. Still, the coat was fur and the hat was rakish.

"Yes, I got lots of fellows, nice fellows," added Mazie. "We go to dances and balls and suppers, and—oh, I'm having a grand time. I got a swell date tonight."

Mazie was talking at Tessie but not to her. Tessie noticed it and followed her roving eye.

Over by the picture post cards was a well-dressed young fellow with a face that showed a knowledge of the world somewhat beyond his years.

A querulous customer interrupted. She wanted to see some garlands and wreaths but Tessie, absorbed in watching Mazie, had not heard her.

An unlucky customer the floorwalker called out. "Here, no gossiping, now. Wait on this lady."

The harshness of the floorwalker brought a flush to Tessie's pale cheeks as she mechanically showed how to fold and unfold the long garlands. Again and again she had to reach up to the shelves with her leader arms for other kinds to satisfy the querulous customer. Nothing seemed exactly to suit. While the querulous customer fussed and talked, she waited on another. Still the querulous customer spoke her exasperating time to decide on a 15-cent purchase.

"So long, Tess," rasped Mazie. "Do you know what I'd do to him?" She nodded at the back of the floorwalker. "I know a fellow who could kick him good and plenty for that, if he don't fit to me. Say, I wouldn't go through another of these Christmas rushes at $5.00 per hour if it was the last act."

of Christmas shopping. The querulous customer was gone and half a dozen crowded into her place, grabbing, unreasonable, insistent.

In the renewed rush Tessie caught sight of Mazie at the postcard counter. The young fellow had edged up closer. They were laughing at something. It took no woman's intuition to guess what sort of a card they were laughing at.

"See, here, Tessie, if you go to sleep over the goods I'll have you fired."

Again it was the floorwalker, not a bad fellow, but mindful of the store and its customers. Tessie bit her lip and said nothing. Her feet felt heavier than ever. Her head swam. The customers were more insistent as the clock hands advanced. Was there no antidote for the poisoned Christmas Eve?

At last the hour of closing came. Tessie had been invited to a Christmas dinner given by some philanthropic people to working girls. The store had given a Christmas bonus of $2.00 and during the time when she should have been eating her supper she had run off to purchase a $1.59 net waist to wear to the dinner.

But somehow the thought of that dinner now did not gladden Tessie. She was too worn out.

Tessie dragged herself rather than walked out on the side street from the employees' entrance. At the curb a young man was standing. He lifted his hat. "Merry Christmas, kid," he said. It was not an unpleasant voice. Tessie did not look twice. She hugged her $1.59 waist closer to her thin coat, and sped up the street which took her past a dance hall. Couples were going in and coming out. In there was light and life and happiness.

The crisp snow crunched beside her. "Say, kid, you hadn't run away from me. Come on in and have a dance."

Tessie looked up and drew back in surprise. The young man following her was the fellow to whom Mazie had been talking so gaily at the postcard counter.

Just then the music started. Everybody's doing it. She could feel her feet fired as they were, urged on by the strains. On the waxed floor Mazie glided into her line of vision.

Huh. She had a date and did not stand off. She had a date and did not stand off. She had a date and did not stand off. She had a date and did not stand off.

He took her arm not roughly, but in a grasp that was now and strange to Tessie. An instant later she had broken away from him and was actually running down the street, slipping, sliding, but keeping on doggedly. At last, breathless, exhausted, she reached her home. She crawled upstairs to the narrow bed and bedroom.

She turned on the gas jet that even failed to light it. She paused a moment to look about the bare room with a growing resentment at her lot. There was the blackened and battered coffee pot and a couple of rolls for tomorrow's breakfast. Leisure was precious, weariness extreme. Yet she kept her room neat and clean. She was not very clever nor very competent, nor foresighted, perhaps. She knew nothing of scientific management or of efficient salesmanship. But she was human and somehow down in her heart she knew she did not deserve this.

She threw herself on the bed. What a Christmas Eve this was for her—too tired even for sleep.

There flashed through Tessie's mind the picture of the gay crowd in the dance hall of Mazie in her furs, of the young fellow who had spoken to her. He was good looking, better looking than the fellow Mazie had been dancing with. She sat up with a shudder at herself. A week ago she would have cried even to have harbored such thoughts a moment. But now it seemed different. What did it all amount to, this hopeless struggle to be decent?

"I don't know where I'll be next Christmas," she moaned as she looked at the ironing board and little tub which she must use even before she could go to the philanthropic Christmas dinner, almost as an almshouse. "I don't know where I'll be next Christmas, but I just won't stand it, no, I won't, I won't."

This is the next Christmas, this coming Christmas. Who knows—perhaps if we do our Christmas shopping early, early in the month and go in the day, perhaps if we are a little more considerate of the girl behind the counter, make it seem more worth while for Tessie to fight along and keep straight, make the toxin of Christmas fatigue not quite so poisonous.

VI.—ON THE PACIFIC COAST

By Frederick J. Haskin

from Minnesota. All along the Great Lakes frog fishing is a growing activity and the frog legs are sent to the Chicago markets. Sometimes the frogs are captured and brought in alive.

The fish canning factories of the country have been doing a thriving industry for years and their products are enlarged each year. One of the popular products is the domestic sardine which is in reality a small hering, but it has become a popular food product and millions of cans are consumed each year. This is a product chiefly of the Maine coast although "sardines" are also found quite extensively along the Pacific coast. The California tunny fish is one of the newest fish products to be canned, and it is being received with commendation in many parts of the country.

The increased use of shell fish is one of the recent developments of the trade in fish food. These include clams, crabs, oysters, scallops, shrimps, and more especially the fresh water mussels which are being so extensively cultivated in the inland lakes and streams.

WAR TALK LIKE BLUFF AT POKER

Austria and Russia Show Their Teeth, but Neither Graves Hostilities

SERBIA SHOULD HAVE PORT

Whole Trouble Arises Over Diplomatic Error, Says German Writer

By FREDERICK WERNER

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—The political situation in Europe at the present moment resembles in many ways a game of bluff and bluster. The players are Austria, Russia, Serbia, and the Balkan states. Each is looking for a chance to bluff the others into a position of weakness. The game is being played in a most serious manner, and the stakes are high. The players are all well known, and the game is being played in a most serious manner. The stakes are high, and the game is being played in a most serious manner.

In reality, the situation is far from as dangerous as it appears at first sight. The game is being played in a most serious manner. The stakes are high, and the game is being played in a most serious manner. The stakes are high, and the game is being played in a most serious manner. The stakes are high, and the game is being played in a most serious manner.

Russia and Austria Bluffing
Russia and Austria are showing their teeth and rattling their sabres, but neither of them really wants to start a war. The game is being played in a most serious manner. The stakes are high, and the game is being played in a most serious manner. The stakes are high, and the game is being played in a most serious manner.

Wheels Within Wheels
Another reason why statements here do not believe Austria will go to war over an unimportant strip of Balkan coastland, is the fact that in the diplomatic game there are wheels within wheels. Austria and Italy both belong to the Triple Alliance, while Russia belongs to the Triple Entente. The game is being played in a most serious manner. The stakes are high, and the game is being played in a most serious manner.

Russia Desires Peace
In Russia the desire for the preservation of peace is exceedingly strong, but so is the desire to continue playing the part of the mighty protector of the Slavish race, and should Austria against all expectation, take up arms against Serbia, Russia will not be slow in following the example to aid her own pan-Slavish interests. The game is being played in a most serious manner. The stakes are high, and the game is being played in a most serious manner.

Serbia has committed the mistake which is easily forgiven a young impetuous state, unversed in the niceties of diplomatic custom of stating her claims perhaps a little too candidly, and in doing so she has hurt Austria, which is exceedingly sensitive. When Serbia's claims are put forward in a more diplomatic form Austria will undoubtedly see that an Adriatic port is absolutely necessary to that country.

CROWN PRINCE OF TURKEY

The crown prince is a permanent member of the Turkish army. His part in the present conflict has been of an advisory nature chiefly. His position upsets the present dynasty, but will rule what is left of the Turkish empire some day.

Reaction in Turkey is given on friend terms with Austria and take a friendly view of Austria's offer of better treaty conditions. That they are inclined to resist any threat to their confidence in the efficacy of their army.

RUSSIAN DUMA IS REACTIONARY

REVOLUTIONISTS MAY BE STRENGTHENED

Germany Realizes Peace of Europe Is in Danger as a Result

By FREDERICK WERNER

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—The result of the Russian election has surprised many. The fourth duma will be even more reactionary than the third. More than one third of its members belong to the extreme wing of reaction. The reactionaries will no longer hold the balance of power and the opposition parties do not constitute even one-third of the assembly.

Under such circumstances it is easy to believe the general rumor that the chief proponent of the holy synd is to be Russia's prime minister. This means that the blackest reaction will triumph in Russia and do so even with a certain right as it controls the majority of the seats in the duma. The reactionary press and leaders, of course, are jubilant, while the moderate and the more sensible conservative elements are greatly worried, as they realize that this election will strengthen the hands of the revolutionists.

This fear is justified when it is remembered that the victory of the holy synd is due to the election tricks of the most burlesque kind. As an example of these it is proven that the polling places were chosen in the most remote localities to which the priests were sent at the expense of the government, while the electors of the opposition had to remain away because they could not afford the heavy traveling expenses. The names of people known to be liberal or radical were also stricken from the lists in great numbers.

In Germany it is realized that the return to power by the reactionists and Nationalists in Russia constitute a great danger to the peace of Europe, at a time when the reactionary press of Austria is clamoring for war, because a war will mean the massacre of hundreds of thousands of Socialists.

TURKISH RAILWAYS IN GOOD CONDITION

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—German capitalists to whom the defeat of Turkey and the collapse of the Ottoman empire came as a dreadful blow because of their heavy investments in Turkish undertakings representing their share in the Kaiser's policy of promoting German influence in Turkey, are beginning to recover from the shock since the Deutsche Bank, the engineer general of Teutonic enterprise in Turkey, came out the other day with a reassuring statement that there was absolutely no ground for alarm.

Strange as it may sound the railroads of Turkey, which are nearly all owned by German capitalists, are said to be in an extraordinarily flourishing condition, and there is no fear that the war, however it ends, will seriously affect their progress. Judged by the results of the Russo-Turkish war railway and economic developments in the Ottoman empire, it is said, will be enhanced, not retarded by events to come.

American Kings and Queens Rule in Paris Society

PARIS, Nov. 30.—Louis Daudet will know as a man of letters, who married a granddaughter of Victor Hugo and is himself the son of the great novelist. Alphonse Daudet has made the discovery that Paris has become more and more the haunt of kings in exile. But this is very different from the Paris of the past, when his father wrote in his book "Kings in Exile."

In those days the ex-King of Hanover, who lived in the house now occupied by the Palais National, the monarch of the ex-King of Spain, ex-Emperor Dom Pedro of Brazil and the ex-queen of the two Sicilies, all made Paris their headquarters. Leon Daudet points out that the queens and kings of his father's day are now replaced by American kings and also some American queens. For instance, there are William Ellis, Corey of Pittsburgh, king of steel; James Hazen Hyde, king of insurance; Sellers McKee, king of glass; Abe Hummel, king of criminal law; Augustus Eddy, king of venerable painters; Eugene Higgins, king of yachtmen. Then there is Berry Wall, former king of dukes, who is known in the race courses as the man with the collar.

As for queens, the list is even longer. There are Mrs. Archibald White of Cincinnati, queen of coal gas and coke; Mrs. Monahan, the ambitious queen of radiators; Mrs. Norma Hutchinson, queen of beauty; Mrs. Gilpin Harjes, queen of coal; Mrs. Clinch Smith of New York, queen of music; Mrs. William B. Leeds, queen of royal entertainers; and Miss Ramona Borden, princess of condensed milk, brought to Paris recently by Mrs. William White, queen of chewing gum.

10-YEAR OLD BOY DROWNS WHEN HE GOES ON ERRAND

LONDON, Nov. 30.—A little boy, pathetic endeavor to carry out an errand on which he had been sent by his mother, was drowned in a tragedy at Greenwich, Merionethshire. The 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Piddewell, living in the village, was sent with a message by his parents to a house on the other side of the river Alker. The child found that the foot bridge had been swept away by the flooded river and he attempted to cross by some strands of wire that were stretched from bank to bank. When he was part of the way across his strength failed and he called for help. A blacksmith ran to the spot, but was unable to reach the child who dropped into the swollen river and was carried away by the flood.

London to Have Hotel From Which Americans Are Barred

By PHILLIP EVERETT

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Londoners have always felt rather disgusted whenever told by American visitors how far their hotels were behind those of the United States in regard to comfort and elegance and the fact that this city now possesses a couple of first-class Americanized hotels which are managed in a fashion to suit Americans and which have copied American hotels in all details has not improved matters much. It is therefore not surprising to hear that a set of ambitious Londoners are thinking of building a hotel which is to be unique, but from which Americans are to be practically excluded.

London is to have a "Hotel des Princes," a hotel intended to cater only for kings and princesses of royal blood. Writing of this delightful scheme in an enthusiastic London paper, which by the way is owned by a self-ex-patriated American, writes: "The clientele of such a hotel would be mainly monarchical. Not absolutely and exclusively so, of course. But every guest in such a hotel who was not a monarch would be either the next thing to one, or so connected by principle or nobility status with one of the royal family that of a professional associate. Members of the monarchical profession would be thus assured of perfect freedom from the nonprofessional element."

Suggests New Hotel
And this idea is prevalent enough to have suggested a London Hotel des Princes, an institution, that is to say, which no other capital yet possesses. The Hotel des Princes would be built on a site about a mile from the city, and would be composed of a number of detached houses, each of which would be a separate hotel. The hotel would be managed by a monarch, and would be open only to monarchs and their families. The hotel would be a most exclusive institution, and would be a most desirable place for monarchs to stay. The hotel would be a most exclusive institution, and would be a most desirable place for monarchs to stay.

the public which such a restaurant would be certain to attract. Inside the hotel, however, the monarch would be accompanied only with his own kind. Both the club and the hotel would necessarily be nonpolitical. Monarchs retired, forcibly or otherwise, from business, might hobnob in amity with their successors and here would be an institution that might serve other useful purposes besides those of entertainment.

There is nothing strange in the fact that such an idea should originate in a city of snobs, as London undoubtedly is, nor that it should arouse enthusiasm in the breast of the ex-American arch-snob, but I very much doubt if it would ever be a success even to the extent of attracting a single royal guest. Kings, Shun London.
Londoners are not blind to the fact that kings are not overanxious to visit London and do not come here unless they have to on matters connected with business, but when this fact is attributed to the idea that these exalted personages stay away because they cannot find a hotel that is exclusive enough a very grave mistake is made.

Kings and princes, I am afraid, stay away from London because they find its climate unpleasant, the city itself dull and unattractive, and the plays performed at its theaters silly and childish, or short of all originality by a narrow-minded censor, and London, in one word, lacks everything to make it a city "ou lon samer." Another fact to be considered is that while snobbishness continues to flourish here, the modern king or prince is more and more inclined to be a most democratic fellow and the last place he would go to would be a hotel where he would be pestered by the same kind of flatteries and annoyed by the same staff ceremonials that he has to endure at his own court. As a proof of this I may mention that every monarch that I know prefers to travel incognito whenever such a thing is possible. Germany's newest battleship cruiser is expected to be driven by 20,000 horsepower engines, while England is building a similar craft that will have engines of 100,000-horsepower.

WEDDING STRANGELY HALTED.

(Mrs. Allene Tew Hostetter.)

London society is discussing the sudden calling off of the wedding of Anson Wood Burchard of New York and Mrs. Allene Tew Hostetter, also of New York. It was only a few hours after Mr. Burchard had secured the wedding license for the wedding which was to have occurred December 1, in St. Georges that he announced the wedding would not take place. He said that he had been hurriedly called to Berlin on business and Mrs. Hostetter refused to say more than "Nothing has been definitely settled."

BALKAN WAS OUR WAR, SAY FRENCH

GREATLY ELATED OVER TURN IN EVENTS

King Ferdinand of Bulgaria Master Spirit Behind Whole Campaign

PARIS, Nov. 30.—It is easy to understand why a people with the temperament of the French are wildly enthusiastic over the events that have taken place in the Balkans, where the methods and material of war of the arch-enemy has been weighed and found wanting. And in spite of all formal more or less official assurances that the peace-loving and industrious people of France have not lost their heads it cannot be denied that even the blasé boulevardier of Paris and far more than, of course, the warm-hearted patriot in all parts of the country have been deeply impressed by the successes of the Balkan states. As Empress Eugenie once said, when the Franco-Prussian war was declared in 1870 those people now say: "The war in the Balkans was our war. It was the great dress rehearsal of regenerated and rejuvenated France crushing overconfident Germany."

The fact that this is so becomes more and more evident. In the cafes along the boulevards, where people usually are satisfied sitting quietly and sipping their "Pernod" or "mazagran," political discussions are now carried on in loud and excited voices; the whole map of Europe is reconstructed as Napoleon the Great reconstructed it in his mind and chauvinism reigns supreme.

France Was Responsible.
For was not indeed this war won by French tactics and French guns? Did King Peter of Serbia himself study the art of war at the famous military academy of St. Cyr and does not the principal hero of the gigantic drama entitled "The Crushing of the Turkish Giant," the brain who planned the whole campaign, King Ferdinand of Bulgaria, have French blood in his veins?

Unnumberable are the stories which are told on the boulevards about this once dejected, long-sold lieutenant, the surprisingly talented son of the royal house of Bourbon. He is said to have told his uncle, the late duke of Aumale, who reproached him because he consented to have his children brought up in the Greek Catholic faith in order to win the favor of the czar that he himself would give up the faith of his family and become a Greek Catholic, when he was able to do so before a Greek Catholic archbishop in the recovered cathedral of St. Sophia in Constantinople. It is also related how he had his fortune told during one of his visits to this city and how the chthonian prophetess that he would reach the zenith of success in 1912, while 1913 would be a black year to him.

An old legend is dug up which says that a czar of the name of Michael will rule at Constantinople. And the Russians, who believe this story, reflect that the grand duke in line with the same staff ceremonials that he has to endure at his own court. As a proof of this I may mention that every monarch that I know prefers to travel incognito whenever such a thing is possible. London began to number houses in 1764 about the time it removed the house signs that made ancient London an open air picture gallery.

HOME RULE HAS STIRRED UP ENGLISH

Allege Plot Is Hatched to Overthrow Protective Tariff

WATCH AMERICAN POLITICS

Unionists May Proceed to Amend Home Rule Bill if Permitted

By PHILIP EVERETT

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The rise of getting the present liberal government to resign as a result of the defeat it suffered on a snap division on an unimportant amendment to the home rule bill having proved a complete failure, the crafty Unionists are hatching another plot to get into office. Indirectly this new strategical scheme is due to the recent triumph of the Democratic party in the United States, for the English tariff reformers are now living in a constant dread lest America should throw overboard high protection and thus impress it even upon the minds of the dull English voters that a high tariff is not an absolutely infallible remedy against all evils. For this reason the present free trade government must fall before inopportune changes take place in the United States and this is now the tariff reformers hope to succeed.

Home rule is to be passed by the lords this session. Will Demand Election.
Once it is passed, the Unionists will demand a general election, and will force it by every means in their power, even by defeating the budget of 1913, if necessary. Owing to the howler decision, next year's budget must come on early in the session. The Unionists hope is that the general election would bring them back to power, especially as if the home rule bill were law, the representation of Ireland would be reduced from 103 to 42, even before the Irish parliament can meet.

With a majority in the commons the Unionists would at once proceed to amend the home rule bill by reducing it to a "legislative council" measure, and would deprive that body of any power over the police.

A tariff reform budget would be introduced with special reference to Ireland and every effort would be made to "kill by kindness" any further display of Nationalist feeling. Coercion should be avoided at any cost, unless the criminal conditions of Ireland justified it.

Such is the bold plot which Mr. Bonar Law and his colleagues are said to be hatching. It is the most daring plan that a great political party could contemplate, for it would mean a general election, and the empire on a general election is ready for anything; even the risk of home rule, and it is they who have hatched this revolutionary idea, which will hardly commend itself to the more sober and old-fashioned politicians. As a means of "dishing" Lloyd George, it is unparalleled in its audacity.

Audacity is the motto of the hot-headed audacity may win, Ireland would get a emancipated "harmless" home rule. The United Kingdom would get protection, and in the following year conscription.

The $5,000 dinner may have helped those who have planned this bold strike, for money will be needed, and money will be spent like water this winter in preparation for the general election in May or June next.

TROUBLE BEGINS WHEN BULGARS REACH CAPITAL

By GEORGE DUFRESNE

PARIS, Nov. 30.—By common consent it is agreed here that the real task of Europe will not begin till the Bulgarians have entered Constantinople. Since the Temps wrote that a European accord was impossible and that the Balkan states were justified in distrusting the mediation offered them, there has been a dearth of official communiques. "On Diplomate" in the "Figaro" points out "the grand error" of the Russian, British and French press, in their comments on Austrian policy which seeks neither belligerent complications nor Balkan territory, but only concessions of a purely industrial and commercial order. It may be added that the Archduke Francis Ferdinand whose aspirations are towards the aggrandizement of the Austrian empire was on excellent terms with Ferdinand of Bulgaria just before the war. French opinion hails the effectiveness of Turkey in Europe with relief. A grand future is before Balkan agriculture and the marvelous prosperity of Roumania will be followed by similar developments in the emancipated provinces. The victories of the allied armies have reflected considerably on France, who since 1907 has furnished the means for the great "peace" of Europe. Finally, I am old enough now to find no difficulty in obtaining French money at 4 or 4 1/2 per cent.
